Like many other citizens of this province, we are concerned at the length of time that the Progressive-Conservatives have administered Ontario. Change is healthy. But it is foolhardy if it is made for change's sake alone. It is necessary to give very great consideration to the alternatives and to weigh what they would mean in a time of aggravated economic and social dislocation.

William Davis, Robert Nixon and Stephen Lewis are reasonable, intelligent and industrious leaders. Each of them has much to offer Ontario. But of the parties they lead only the Conservatives have put forth a cohesive, reasonable and realistic program for the future. The Liberals and the New Democrats have offered individual initiatives which are sound and attractive, but they have not shown us how these initiatives would fit into a comprehensive approach to governing that would enhance the well-being of the province without tilting an already precarious economy into deep trouble.

The economy, of course, is the most important issue to be reckoned with. We have differed with the Conservatives in their deficit financing, but we cannot see how either the Liberals or New Democrats could introduce the programs they have been talking about without plunging us into far greater debt.

The Conservatives have avoided the temptation of leaping into promises with very high price tags. Their performance in the past has resulted in Ontario's achieving the highest kind of credit rating in the world. They have committed themselves to (and have already lauched) a vigorous fight over inflation with Ottawa. Who else is effectively grappling with the Trudeau administration's ham-handling of the economy?

There is housing. Here both Mr. Lewis and Mr. Nixon have been able to point to individual injustices. Yet the fact remains that for years the Ontario Government has done more to increase the housing stock than any other province. From 1969 to the end of 1974 Ontario had considerably more than a third of the housing starts in Canada—547,073 out of 1,375,162—while having considerably less than a third of Canada's population — 8 million out of 22 million. In the last two years, while housing has been faltering across the country, Ontario has increased its share of the whole. Even Mr. Lewis's gloomy projections would give Ontario much more than a third of the housing starts projected for 1975 by Statistics Canada for the entire country.

For years Ontario's subsidized housing programs provided more low-income housing than the rest of the provinces put together.

In the past tough two years Ontario has had to tackle the building of housing with severely declining help from Ottawa. It has increased its own subsidies, one of its efforts being a $1,500 grant to individuals buying or building their first home.

There is education. The Conservatives are returning to greater emphasis on basic subjects, are still insisting on spending ceilings, have at least refused to go all the way of allowing the teachers to become a self governing profession. In the essential of ensuring that more children receive more education they have succeeded. In 1951 only 11 per cent of Ontario students received their honor graduation diplomas; in 1974. 27 per cent did (35 per cent completed Grade 13)..

There is energy. When the federal Government this spring pushed up the price of oil, Ontario was the first province to freeze oil and gasoline prices while searching for means to keep them as low as possible. Hydro was forced to make an immediate cut in its price increases and new cuts in Hydro spending have been assured. The Government has put money into the tar sands to find national alternatives to conventional oil.

There is integrity. This issue has provided the Government with a rough road in the past four years, and we have made it rougher. The response has been the tightest legislation in the country on election financing, and on conflicts of interest for Cabinet members.

There are pluses and minuses in every election campaign. The sum in this one would argue for the Conservatives.

O'Neil Backs Consumer Groups If Needed

• Hugh O'Neil, Liberal candidate in Quinte for the Sept. 18 provincial election, says he would support consumer groups such as the Quinte Information and Assistance Centre in Belleville, if elected, as long as they adhere to proper business ethics.

"'I'm for consumer protection as long as it is administered properly, fairly and without a flair for publicity,' he said in an interview this week.

"I think it has to be a locally—run thing and it has to benefit the people," he commented.

Owner Says Chef Key to Restaurant

By CLIFF KENYON
Staff Reporter

Picking a good chef can be one of the most important decisions when opening what George Basilone hopes will become Belleville's finest dining room.

That's one decision Mr. Basilone has to face before the scheduled November opening of the $500,000 Mediterranean Dining Room and Grotta Blue Dining Lounge at 268 Front Street North.

"Belleville is no longer a small town," said Mr. Basilone and there is a lack of fine dining rooms.

GEORGE BASILONE

Mr. Basilone has been in Belleville about 10 years. He owns Lido Men's Hair Stylist and Barber Shop at Quinte Mall and says he has had the dream of opening a dining room for the past three of four years.

"I'm very excited about it."

"I'm trying to create something different — not just a warehouse."

Although the one-storey building still under construction looks small from the outside there are two lower floors.

Mr. Basilone said it would have been cheaper to build a taller building but height would have ruined the exterior Mediterranean appearance.

The Mediterranean Dining Room with a capacity for 100 persons will be on the main floor with the kitchen.

"I'm trying to create things that will give people the impression of sitting in a place in southern Europe — France — Italy — Spain —"

The interior design, he said, is similar to an outside courtyard.

On the lower floor will be Grotta Blue Dining Lounge that will look like a cave. There will be a dance floor and nightly entertainment.

Mr. Basilone said he hopes to create a place that will be a "little high class."

The lowest floor, 24 feet below ground level, houses staff rooms, machinery and the wine cellar.

Mr. Basilone and manager Fred Fettah will be picking a chef this week and begin working on the European menu.

Opening the new business, said Mr. Basilone, is an adventure, but: "Making people feel important is the key to any business, especially the restaurant business."

The building is designed and built by Cornerstone Builders Ltd., of Belleville.

Tie-breaker

If there should be a tie in the upcoming elections in Prince Edward—Lennox riding the deciding vote would belong to District Returning Officer Mary Grimmon. Its one ballot she says she hopes she will not be asked to cast.

Anti-poverty Group To Chase Non-voters

TRENTON — The executive of the 150 member Quinte Region Anti—Poverty Organization meeting at Canterbury Hall in Trenton Saturday voted unamimously to make a maximum effort to get out the thousands of eligible voters who failed to vote in the 1971 provincial election.

Speaking to the meeting, Mike Carson, provincial co—ordinator of the Ontario Anti—Poverty Organization said, there is no doubt that a large percentage of these 9,000 lost votes are low—income votes, the aged and disabled, single parents, and large numbers of the working poor in the area.

Old line politicians tend to ignore the low—income votes, Mrs. Carson said, and too often in the past, low—income families have been ignored after the election.

If we do not demand of our fellow unemployed and the working poor they exercise their votes, the greatest weapon in our democratic structure, we have to accept much of the blame for any lack of positive government policy regarding adequate housing with rents and mortgages people can afford full employment policies, and a halt to soaring costs of food, heat, hydro and other basic necessities of life, he said.

Lloyd Cook, president of the Quinte Region, said all three major party candidates were invited to attend the meeting, and only Carson McLauchlan, N.D.P. candidate found the time to attend.

"While we are not saying that the other two candidates have no interest in the well—being or votes of the low income workers, we cannot help but wonder why at least someone from their campain offices did not show enough concern to attend this meeting," he said.

"The votes that your organization represents, whether won or lost, can have a great impact on conditions in the Quinte region, as well as Queen's Park," said Mr. McLauchlan.

Returning Office Role Misunderstood

By MARG HAYLOCK
Staff Reporter

Picton — Public understanding of the role of the returning office is "sadly lacking" says Mrs. Mary Grimmon, district returning officer for Prince Edward-Lennox riding.

"Few realize the function of the returning office," she observed.

Since she started work Aug. 12 at headquarters rented in the old Prince Edward County registry office on Main St. here Mrs. Grimmon has been approached for donations to the candidates' campaigns, telephoned by a Lennox resident with land use problems and presented with applications for scrutineers' jobs.

The returning office which is strictly neutral is in no way connected with any of these functions but a sometimes confused public continues to associate it with unrelated activities.

Mrs. Grimmon, who worked as a clerk in the returning office in the last election, this year is employed for the first time as returning officer.

"You look after everything, not just your own little corner," she commented referring to the importance of total neutrality.

"I enjoy it. It's not hard to be neutral as you are so involved in the job," she said.

Mrs. Grimmon noted all election literature and papers must be issued from the returning office including nomination papers and all materials required by the deputy—returning officers on polling day.

The returning office also is responsible for overseeing enumeration and this year there are approximately 30,000 names on the voters' lists.

'We establish boundaries, then pick polling places and locations for advance polls," said Mrs. Grimmon.

The returning office requests the party in power to pick one enumerator and a deputy—returning officer for th poll. If any election assistants are used in place of constables they are chosen by the party in power.

The chief opposition (in Prince Edward — Lennox the Liberal Party) selects an enumerator and a poll clerk who act on election day and at advance polls.

Mrs. Grimmon is assisted by a clerk, a full—time typist and four part—time typists.

Instruction for enumerators and deputy—returning officers is provided through her office.

Mrs. Grimmon has no vote unless there should be a tie in the election.

"If there was a tie and I voted, I would be shot one way or the other," smiled the returning officer.

The returning officer started work on August 12 and expects to complete her job by September 27.

The usual nine to five office hours are not applicable to her post as she frequently remains at work in the evenings to complete her heavy schedule.

"We come in at eight each morning and there have been only three nights that we closed at five o'clock," she commented.

Mrs. Grimmon is the only woman returning officer in the Quinte area this year.

The first house to be torn down to make way for the new Pickering Airport near Toronto fell to the bulldozers Wednesday. The house, known as Old Gostick House after the family that homesteaded the land back in the early 1800s, was itself more than 100-years-old. Watching the house being razed are Marg Godfrey of the anti-airport People or Planes group and neighboring farmer Bob Almack. (CP Photo)

He Had to Dynamite Cables Attached to Nuclear Device

POMONA, Calif. (AP) — Blow up some cables with dynamite. A simple job, it might seem, for a foremost explosives expert like J. S. Brower.

But the cables were at the Nevada Test Site, attached to an underground atomic device that failed to explode when the button was pushed hours earlier.

The Atomic Energy Commission called on Brower to "shoot a charge" to cut the cables and deactivate the device. But if anything went wrong, Brower, less than 250 feet away in the barren desert, would be right in the middle of it.

It wasn't the first dangerous assignment undertaken by Brower, who has a reputation for doing things others turn down. During the Korean War he led a group of convicts dubbed "Ali Brower and his 30 Thieves" on behind-the-lines operations.

But Brower admits this was one job he had second thoughts about.

"I insisted they insure myself and my partner for $1 million each," he said. "I figured if I was going to go I wanted to leave something to my heirs."

Brower, in his early 60s, has spent most of the last 35 years working with explosives—which he calls 'tools"—a fascination that began during his childhood on the East Coast when he would blow up old First World War munitions that washed ashore.

It was Brower whom New York police invited to survey the damage after a group of Weathermen radicals blew themselves up in a New York townhouse in 1970. Movie studios repeatedly request Brower's services when they want an explosion to film.

He was a consultant in the clearing of the Suez Canal.

But working with explosives has not been without its toll. Nine years ago, Brower lost three fingers on his left hand when a "junk-buster" charge for an oil well misfired.

ADVISED TO QUIT

His doctors advised him to take it easy, perhaps even quit the business.

"But believe me, it did not slow me up," Brower said. He still plays golf, shooting in the high 70s.

Until the accident, Brower seemed to live a charmed life. He had first worked seriously with explosives in the army during the Second World War when he became a munitions and explosives disposal expert.

He was recalled for the Korean War and as a captain took 30 convicts, who had been paroled in his custody by the army, to Korea. Some of the convicts were familiar with explosives from their days as safecrackers.

Brower and his "30 Thieves" were often called in to mine bridges—very often several times in the same place.

After two decades, Brower still keeps in touch with his "thieves"—all of whom he says now are leading productive, useful lives.

After the war, Brower was assigned to train soldiers for guerrilla warfare—and was criticized for making things too realistic by booby-trapping roadblocks with hand grenades and tear gas.

He settled in Pomona, where he started his own business in 1960.

Watchdog Fights Small Town Growth

BOW ISLAND, Alta. (CP) — Dana Couillard is the unofficial town watchdog in this community 40 miles southwest of Medicine Hat. He has lived in big cities, doesn't like them, and is heard from whenever Bow Island threatens to get too big for its britches.

"Sometimes we need somebody to get us back to reality," says Fred Mellen, mayor from 1971 to 1974 and now the town's economic development officer. "Everybody needs that."

Mr. Couillard, 24, was born in Lethbridge and grew up in Bow Island. He spent six years at universities in Calgary, Edmonton and Lethbridge, acquired a degree in zoology and returned to Bow Island.

"I got tired of city life. Now I can't foresee living in any city indefinitely."

He feels that Bow Island, population 1,200, has adequate amenities; concedes that some industry, of the type suited to the community, is necessary; but doesn't want to see any of he big-city hassle rearing its head in the town.

Two projects that have raised Mr. Couillard's ire was a proposal to turn the main street into a one-way thoroughfare and plans for a big city-style residential crescent.

The proposals precipitated an eloquent letter to the editor of the local weekly newspaper.

"A small town cannot liken itself to the city. It is a breed all its own, standing aloof with a quiet, restful ease from the cities. It needs not the almost pre-dawn, near-supper migraion to and from the job.

"Here, a simple, leisurely five-minute walk from anywhere in Bow Island will have one downtown to work on time and with a bit of exercise.

"I have not been convinced that a crescent on the north side of town is necessary. . . .

Combermere 'Rubies' Were Really Garnets

COMBERMERE, Ont. (CP) — The Ruby Mine appears that way on maps, but the sparkling red stones mined there in 1910 were believed to have been garnets.

They still can be found, ranging in size from a pea to a grape, embedded in the rocks that were taken out of the ground at the site of the mine now lost in 50 years of forest growth in Ashby Township in Lennox and Addington County in eastern Ontario.

The dirt road that leads to it has not been completely obliterated although beavers have been at work and much of the road disappears into water. A guide like Edmond Marquardt of Combermere, who worked there from 1921 to 1925, would know the way.

The 74-year-old former miner describes the mine site as a country mile off the highway. The journey begins about three miles east of Hardwood Lake, where an unmarked trail leads south into the bush off Highway 500 and 20 miles southeast of Combermere.

Mr. Marquardt first hauled wagon loads of concentrates along the country mile that stretches two or three miles as the trail winds up steep hills and down into swamps skirting rock cliffs, to the nearest good road at Snake Creek. He was later made foreman of the 24 workers in camp.

The ground was worked for garnet, which was then crushed at the site and transported to Niagara Falls where garnet paper, for abrasive use, was made.

Originally, the mine was described as a rich deposit of ruby gemstones of a type "apparently identical with that which is obtained in the ruby fields of Burma," according to an old Toronto newspaper, The World.

Garnet occurs in six different varieties of minerals, all silicates of aluminum and in various colors, including red. It may occur as translucent crystals, used as gemstones when they are of good color and flawless, or they may occur as granular aggregate of small crystals mixed with impurities such as quartz and mica.

A ruby is also a translucent gemstone of a deep-red color and is usually a variety of aluminum oxide or corundum, as are the Oriental rubies with which the Ashby Township gems were being compared.

News of the rich deposit was revealed April 11, 1910, in the newspaper and a company known as Rubies Ltd., had been incorporated on March 31 of that year, with capital of $2,500,000, most of it raised in New York and Boston.

J. H. Jewell, Toronto financier, was in charge of the company and known for his mining of corundum. He owned a shooting lodge west of the mine and was entertaining friends there in October, 1909, when two prospectors looking for graphite showed him the samples of rocks encrusted with the pinkish-red stones.

Mr. Jewell acquired the mining rights to 1,000 acres from the province.

The bunkhouses used by Mr. Jewell's workers were repaired and used and for four years the mine was so successful the concentrating mill was open day and night, year round.

Mr. Marquardt said the mining operation ended in 1975 when Barton Mines, a United States company began producing garnet much more economically.

Bottle Collectors Form New Club

Collectors of old bottles, sealers, and insulators have formed a club in the Quinte area, the Quinte Bottle Collectors.

Pop, ink, medicine, milk, or other bottles are favorite finds for some. Others dig or trade for telegraph insulators in many shapes and colors. Some collect only preserving jars, called sealers, in as many variations as possible.

The group consists of about a dozen persons who have become acquainted at auction sales, flea markets, second hand stores, and antique shops, always on the lookout for a find.

Interest in old bottles has increased to the point where collectors have found themselves bidding against friends for the same bottle. Scarcity has affected the field sharply in the last few decades with the advent of the home freezer, the ball point pen, plastic bags and bottles, and modern tele-communications.

Still, some have found that their collections contain enough pieces to take up a great deal of space, in spite of the shortage. Extras are sold to acquire space or traded for more specimens of a particular type, often to another member of Quinte Bottle Collectors.

Members have held four meetings in private homes, but will meet at Sir John A. McDonald Public School, Belleville, on Monday, September 22, at 7 p.m., and the third Monday each month thereafter.

At least 35 bottle, sealer, or insulator collectors are known in the Quinte area, and new collectors are starting out all the time, according to David W. Shoots, RR 1, Carrying Place, Secretary-Treasurer of the group.

The President is Don Rowe of Belleville, and his son-in-law, Joe Shields of Trenton, seves as Vice President. Club members seek not only more pieces for their collections, but by travel, study, and interviews with "old-timers", they also learn a great deal about the history of glass manufacture, distribution, and use in Canada.

Several local enthusiasts have travelled to Toronto and Ottawa for bottle shows, and some will attend a show at Niagara Falls on September 21 which is being sponsored by a club there.

David Shoots has been invited to speak on the manufacture and collection of sealers at the regular meeting of the Hastings County Historical Society on September 16.

Interested persons of any age may attend the Quinte Bottle Collectors' meeting on September 22 at no charge. A small fee is charged if a person desires to become a member.

Membership is open to only those who collect bottles, sealers, or insulators, rather than to those who deal in them. Further information may be had from the Secretary, David W. Shoots, RR 1, Carrying Place, by mail or by phoning 967-1551, Belleville

Mr. and Mrs. Peter Ross

Ross — Culloden

Annis Elizabeth Culloden and Peter Michael Ross were united in marriage August 9 by Rev. Virgil Earle and Rev. Kenneth Stitt in St. Margaret's-on-the-Hill Church.

The bride is the daughter of Velma Culloden and the late Arthur Culloden and the groom is the son of Aileen Ross and the late Dr. Francis Ross.

Given in marriage by her only brother Ronald Culloden, the bride wore a gown of white peau de soie with a scoop neckline outlined with a double tier of wide lace flange. The long, fitted sleeves with buttons at the wrist were detailed by matching lace applique, as was the high empire waistline. The A-line, skirt, pleated at the back, fell into a chapel train, and the three-tiered elbow-length veil of scalloped tulle illusion was caught by a high bandeau of guipere lace. The bride carried a cross of red roses and trailing baby's breath and ivy.

Matron of honor was the bride's sister Evelyn Warwick. Bridesmaids were Shirley Duvall, another sister of the bride, Ellen Moher of Dundas, sister of the groom, and Catherine Warwick, the bride's niece. All the attendants were attired alike, in graduating shades of blue. The princess-style gowns, of dotted swiss, had capelet sleeves with scalloped edges, and elbow-length capes with stand-up collar clasped with blue flowered appliques. They wore matching blue flowers in their hair, and carried bouquets of red roses, baby's breath and ivy tied with trailing white ribbon.

Kimberley Warwick and Patti Duvall, nieces of the bride, were flower girls in gowns matching the other attendants. They carried smaller versions of the rose bouquets, and wore matching blue flowers in their hair.

Roger Hynne was the groom's best man. His ushers were his brother Joseph Ross, his brother-in-law Paul Northover of Ottawa and Douglas McGhee of Bancroft.

After a reception at the Belleville Shrine Club, the newly - married couple travelled to Manitoulin Island on their honeymoon. They now live at 42 Strachan Street.

Mr. and Mrs. John Kiser

Kiser — Russell

Diane Ruth Russell, daughter of Dr. and Mrs. W.A.M. Russell, Beamsville, and John Arthur Kiser, son of Mr. and Mrs. Nelson Kiser were wed in Beamsville recently.

Given in marriage by her father, the bride wore her mother's swiss cotton eyelet gown. She carried white stephanotis, gladiolus and baby's breath and roses and her headpiece also included these flowers.

Joan Russell, Beamsville, was maid of honor; Mary Russell, Fort Frances and Trixie Nieuwland, Guelph were attendants.

Merideth Kiser, the groom's niece, was flower girl.

The attendants wore lime green cotton accented with white eyelet. They carried white and yellow daisies and blue cornflowers.

Jay Kiser attended his brother as best man. Ushers were Christopher Rave, Mississauga and Larry Elder, Hensall.

A reception was held at the home of the bride's parents followed by a dinner and dance at Place Polonaise, Grimsby.

They will reside in Kingston.

Ann Landers

Good-hearted 'Foster' Parents May Lose to Natural Mother

Dear Ann Landers: I am not crazy. Every word of this is true. Please help me.

I am an older woman with a sick husband. I babysit for a living. Often, divorced ladies leave their small children at our home overnight or for a weekend. Mrs. X brought her three-week-old infant here for one night. She gave me $3 and left the baby's formula.

Three weeks later she showed up and said she was sorry she had left the baby so long but she had to go out of town unexpectedly. She gave me another $3 and said, "I'll be back tomorrow."

Ann, that was four years ago. My husband and I have become so attached to this little girl she is like our very own. We have bought all her clothes and given her the best of everything.

Last week, Mrs. X returned out of a clear blue sky and threatened to call the law if we refused to let her take her child "home." She said she had had a nervous breakdown but is completely recovered now. The little girl cried when hrr mother took her away.

We know where she lives but we don't know what to do. Please advise us. We are heart-broken-More Than Flesh and Blood

Dear Friend: My heart aches for you both, but you need a lawyer. If you can't afford one, contact legal aid. But don't get your hopes too high, dear. In cases such as yours, the natural mother usually wins.

Dear Ann Landers: My girl friend and I are both 15. We are very interested in guys especially two but they don't seem to know we are alive.

Can you give us some advice on the best way to ask a fellow for a date? And please print this letter because it's a problem a lot of teen-age girls are faced with these days. Most guys we know are more interested in sports and things like that. It's just rotten the way we sit home all the time. Thanks for whatever ideas you can come up with—Dateless And Eager To Be Friendly

Dear D. and E.: There is no "best way" to ask a guy for a date. In fact, the best way to turn a guy off is to be too aggressive. Girls mature more rapidly than boys. Many 15-year-old guys (even 16-and 17-) are not even aware that there is a second sex. My advice is to cool it, Chickens. Do some needlepoint.

Get interested in volunteer work. Help your mom with the cooking. When the buys are ready they'll let you know. Until then—leave 'em alone.

Dear Ann Landers: My wife and I need a referee. You're it. Every time we are invited to the home of a friend for dinner or just to visit, Martha feels she must bring a present. If we go for a weekend it must be a rather expensive gift.

I say this is nonsense. People invite us becaus they want us and no gift is necessary. Also it makes THEM feel they must do the same. Who's right?—O City Battlers

Dear Bats: Weekend guests should bring a gift. But it's not necessary to bring something every time you are invited for dinner or just to visit. Once in a while a gift—flowers, candy or an unusual memento—is definitely in order.

Adds Weight

LEWISTON, Idaho (CP) — Rosalie Marie Allison, who was born weighing two pounds, 14 ounces a year ago, now weighs 15 pounds, 12½ ounces. The first child of Mr. and Mrs: Robert Allison, Rosalie was born two months prematurely, with respiratory and other medical two months in an incubator.

Dial-a-Menu Paris Success

PARIS (Reuter) — A dial-a-menu phone service in Paris has proved a ringing success.

Some 2,000 women callers phone in every day in search of the ideal menu that will make the day's main meal a three-star masterpiece.

Cecile Ibane, a suave, middle-aged blonde who picks each daily recommendation, believes the new service is successful because 'people are basically lazy—it's much easier to telephone."

The 2½-minute recording is sponsored by the sugar promotion board but Mme. Ibane, mother of three, does not confine her selections to those with a sweet tooth.

Her conscientious attitude to the job has caused some hefty problems.

She is a great believer in trying out all the dishes and has inevitably paid the penalty.

"I have put on 22 pounds over the last two years," she admitted with a rueful smile.

She fails to practise what is preached on the daily recordings, which always end by counselling moderation for the heavy drinker and calorie-consciousness for the big eater.

"We always give a bit of dieting advice, telling those with weight problems to avoid this or that. We tell them the calorie level of various drinks."

Mme. Ibane, an avid reader of recipe books in search of some daily new idea, is a staunch supporter of the adventurous attitude adopted by many of today's French housewives.

"French women offer a much wider choice in their cooking than before the war. In my family the dishes were good regional ones but always the same."

But when it comes to eating out, her national pride is not quite so fervent. The dial-a-menu queen refuses to be seen nibbling in highway snackhouses and knows only a few provincial restaurants where she can find a memorable meal.

Mme. Ibane confesses to one overriding passion she is careful not to inflict too often on the listeners.

"A bird that I adore is duck. I could try it in every sauce you could possibly dream up."

The job requires plenty of psychology and to keep in touch with the clients she often interrupts the callers listening to her recipe suggestions and asks what they think.

"Often I get total astonishment from someone expecting to hear the end of a record. But I have some amusing conversations and it's very important having contacts as I work in a void."

Research Proves Without Doubt: Smoking Damages Unborn Babies

BALTIMORE (AP) — Pregnant women who smoke may be depriving fetuses of oxygen critical to proper growth and development, say researchers at Johns Hopkins University.

Scientists have known that women who smoke cigarettes tend to give birth to undersized and sometimes dangerously delicate babies, but the cause has remained a mystery.

But Drs. Gail Gurtner and Barry Burns say research with sheep is altering an old theory about how fetuses get oxygen and may establish that carbon monoxide from cigarette smoke disrupts this process.

Classically, doctors have thought that oxygen from the mother's bloodstream travelled through the placenta and into the fetus by a simple process of diffusion.

However, the researchers report that the placenta contains molecules, similar to blood hemoglobin, that speed the flow of oxygen from mother to fetus in bucket-brigade fashion from molecule to molecule.

Given a choice, the molecules will carry carbon monoxide rather than oxygen, the researchers say, a process which will tend to concentrate carbon monoxide in a fetus carried by a smoking mother.

This cuts down on the amount of oxygen reaching the unborn child, which needs huge amounts of oxygen for proper tissue growth, said the researchers.

Gurtner said that while the work has involved sheep, the oxygen-carrying molecule is also abundant in the human placenta and presumably serves the same purpose as one in a sheep.

Women's Status Council Criticizes 'Offensive' Ads

ST. CATHARINES, Ont. (CP) — The Ontario Status of Women Council agreed Thursday to invite representation from Johnson and Johnson to a future council meeting to discuss what the council says is offensive advertising of the company's feminine products.

About Face, a recently-published council booklet, says surveys of Ontario women show that a Johnson and Johnson advertisement in which an immigrant woman says the company's sanitary pad is "the best thing Canada ever produced," is considered to be the most offensive advertisment shown on television.

"If I were an immigrant women I'd be as mad as hell," said Olive Ritchie of Hamilton.

Council chairman Laura Sabia said at Thursday's meeting that of the 1,000 women surveyed for the booklet, only one had anything good to say about television advertising.

"Women see the ads," Mrs. Sabia said. "These demean women."

"And yet, damn their hides, they still go on buying the products."

Mrs. Sabia also criticized advertisements for milk.

"It's always 'Women, you're wonderful, but you don't know what's good for you, "she said.

She said copies of the booklet will be sent for reaction and comment to major women's groups, the Association of Canadian Advertisers and several private companies.

The council also criticized the federal Status of Women Council for what the council says is a lack of action in the field of manpower.

An official said it might be advisable for the Ontario council to proceed on a provincial basis to promote training, counselling, part-time work and better conditions for women rather than wait for federal action.

"It's like trying to chip away at a granite wall," said Mrs. Sabia. "We havn't got time to wait."

The council also heard a report on women in the universities that shows there are few women at any of the highest levels in Ontario universities and only clusters in the non-academic ranks of university support staff.

Lin Good of Kingston, who prepared the booklet, said statistics show that women tend to drop out of the academic environment before they reach the higher levels.

"Our most interesting part of research should be on an explanation of that pattern," she said. "What is there in our system of guidance to counteract this?"

She said council representatives are to meet with the Council of Ontario Universities to discuss such issues in October.

Edward Ryan, an adviser to the federal Law Reform Commission, said current family law is the root of sexual discrimination in Canada.

"What is needed is a new legal arangement that makes marriage a true partnership of equals," Mr. Ryan said in an address. "At the sam etime, the new law must be carefully phrased so as to meet legitimate needs created by marriage."

He also called for removal of the fault concept of divorce, which he described as "anti-feminine and punitive."

Maintenance rights after divorce should be assessed solely on the basis of needs, said Mr. Ryan, and support should be available to the spouse that remains at home, whether it be the husband or wife.

The council's next meeting will be held in Toronto on Oct. 9.

Lang Urges Parole Changes

BURNABY, B.C. (CP) — Federal Justice Minister Otto Lang says he plans to bring before Parliament this fall a number of changes which would make Canada's parole system work much better and make court sentences more realistic.

Mr. Lang made the statement while speaking to a luncheon of the Burnaby-Seymour Liberal Association Sunday.

Asked if the changes reflect a move to the right by the Liberal government, Mr. Lang said it rather reflects "an ordinary democratic response" to a reaction from the right in a large segment of the public. He said this section of the public is very concerned about certain holes which they see appearing in the law.

Mr. Lang said the changes will not extend as far as capital punishment, a step he is opposed to.

The justice minister said he will probably return to Ottawa by Tuesday.

Mr. Lang told the 50 persons at the meeting that laws relating to sentencing and granting of parole can be as significant a deterent to murder as the death penalty.

He said he will be introducing amendments to the criminal code to toughen up sentencing and parole laws. However, he did not give any details of the amendments.

"People are for capital punishment because they think it is a deterrent to murder," he said. "What we need is a good system of parole and sentencing."

CHESLEY, Ont. (CP) — Federal Agriculture Minister Eugene Whelan told Liberal supporters Saturday night that Ontario needs a premier who understands the agriculture industry.

NDP Will Limit Grants

KAPUSKASING, Ont. (CP)— An NDP government would cut high-income earners from the $1,500 home owners' grant put the savings into construction of housing for low-and middle-income earners, NDP Leader David Lewis said Sunday.

"It is wrong to provide this grant to the wealthy," Mr. Lewis said at a news conference on his campaign plane. "There should be some line drawn slightly above the median family income, which is about $15,300."

He said the grant for first-time home buyers, introduced in the provincial Conservative government's April budget, 'has been of little benefit to those on low or medium incomes who wish to purchase a home."

Mr. Lewis said approximately 60 per cent of the families in Ontario would not be able to purchase a house at today's prices and costs will continue to climb if the supply is not increased.

He said the average price of homes purchased by persons who received the home-buyers grant is $39,076.

"Some specific examples of grants received in certain neighborhoods constitute an indictment of the home-owner program itself."

He cited a number of cases, including 28 grant recipients in Barrie, who bought homes at an average price of $156,071 each.

Earlier Sunday, Mr. Lewis todl about 100 party workers at Timmins that Premier William Davis and Liberal Leader Robert Nixon are ending the campaign for next Thursday's election as they started it—"with name-calling and personal abuse."

He said he watched a television debate between Premier Davis and Mr. Nixon and "I couldn't believe my eyes."

"I thought the Saturday night fights had returned to television. All that was missing was the Gillette blue blades commercial."

Mr. Lewis said he could understand the premier's frustration because Mr. Nixon refused to say where he would get the money to pay for all his campaign promises.

"If we can't afford a Davis government, we would be in dbtors' prison with a Nixon government."

Sunday he was in the air again, travelling to Timmins, to Kapuskasing and back to Toronto.

Regional Fear Unfair: Davis

TORONTO (CP) — Liberal Leader Robert Nixon is a "reactionary" who has been trying to frighten voters into believing a re-elected Conservative government would bring regionalization to areas for which no such plans exist, Premier William Davis said Sunday.

Mr. Niyon does not realize regional government is necessary for the future, he said in a news conference.

During a TV interview, he said Mr. Nixon has told voters in the Victoria-Haliburton riding that the Conservatives would bring regional government to that area.

There are no such plans, he said, but Mr. Nixon, in concentrating on the ill affects of regionalization, is "seizing on what is a tough political decision to make" and using it to his advantage.

He said the Liberal party supported the concept of regionalization during the 1967 provincial campaign.

Mr. Nixon is "trying to be all things to all people," and has often campaigned by going into an area, finding out what is bothering voters and then emphasizing those specific concerns, Mr. Davis said.

Asked whether some of the promises he has made in the last month—such as offering home owners up to $500 a year in tax credits to partly offset high mortgage rates—were election gimmicks, Mr. Davis said he is still premier with a province to run.

"I have a conscience; I see these people; I know the problems; it's my job to deal with them," he said.

Earlier in the day in the Toronto riding of Scarborough East, Mr. Davis told supporters of party candidate Margaret Birch that the 'official opposition has no politics, no platform . . . only personal criticism."

He said that while the provincial Conservatives have not and will not accept financial aid from the federal Conservative party, the federal Liberal party is "substantially involved" in this campaign.

One thing voters will have to decide is whether or not they want a provincial government that is closely aligned with the federal government something that is probable if the Liberals win next Thursday's election, he said.

Mr. Davis also briefly attended an annual Italian-Canadian festival in Toronto where he watched a program of folk songs and dances.

CNIB Neglects Blind Owners

OTTAWA (CP)—The members of the newly-formed Canadian Association of Dog Guide Users also belong to the Canadian National Institute for the Blind (CNIB), an organization they say has neglected them.

"The use of the dogs has been discouraged by the CNIB for all kinds of reasons," says Ken Moyle, acting president of the association which represents 250 of about 30,000 blind Canadians.

"When we asked for a list of guide dog users they only gave us 80 names but we found another 180 they didn't even know about," Mr. Moyle said at the association's founding conference Saturday.

CNIB spokesman William Milton said there is no policy in the organization to discourage dog use and he said he was surprised at a complaint that dog guides were not allowed in a Quebec summer camp sponsored by the CNIB.

"We were not aware of this and will discuss it with the Quebec division," he said.

Bob Aubrey said CNIB management do not use seeing-eye dogs, so they do not understand that the work involved is well worth it.

"They often tell people it's too much work. It's true that a dog is not all play. The dog must be fed and combed, taken out four times a day and never leaves its master at any time 24 hours a day.

Davis, Lewis Exchange Barbs

TORONTO (CP) — Ontario Premier William Davis and Liberal party leader Robert Nixon exchanged barbs Saturday night in a heated and often noisy debate which concerned mostly the economy of the province.

The television debate—pretaped in the morning and broadcast in the evening—was the only face-to-face meeting between the two scheduled before the Sept. 18 provincial election.

Mr. Nixon charged that in the last four years since Mr. Davis has taken over the provincial government, it has racked up record-breaking deficits.

Mr. Davis accused Mr. Nixon of "fudging the issue" over the provincial debt. He also accused Mr. Nixon of making "a $10-billion mis-statement or falsehood" in comparing the provincial debt with that of the federal Liberal government.

The two leaders hammered verbally at each other from the opening minutes of the debate which lasted less than 30 minutes.

Mr. Nixon led off the debate.

"Well, Bill, I believe it's been a good campaign," the opposition leader said to the premier. "I know you don't like our ads and, frankly, I don't like yours but at least we've got the people interested in a provincial election which may see a change of government after 32 years."

Mr. Davis, who has been critical of the Liberal leader's attacks on his integrity during the campaign, disagreed.

"I welcome this opportunity, Mr. Nixon," Mr. Davis said. "I have to say to you it has not been a good campaign. Your campaign and the campaign of the Liberal party in this province has been one of the worst that I have seen in my history in politics."

Potential Oil No Issue in Election

ST. JOHN'S, Nfld. (CP) — Considering what is potentially at stake, little has been said during the campaign for Tuesday's Newfoundland election about the possibility of large oil finds off the province's cost.

Political observers here are surprised by the lack of oil talk because if oil and natural gas are found in sufficient quantities to justify commercial production, Newfoundland stands to leave the "have-not" fraternity and become one of the richest provinces in Confederation.

For a province that has tried in its 26 years in Confederation to catch up economically with the rest of Canada, the benefits of an oil industry would be enormous.

Given that, most observers here expected the question to surface as a major campaign issue. It hasn't.

Why?

Perhaps the parties have decided to wait until the oil's existence is proven by further exploration.

There remains the possibility the oil just isn't out there, but current information would indicate it is.

Energy department officials here estimate the offshore reserve at about 30-billion barrels of oil and 30-to 25-trillion cubic feet of natural gas.

To bolster that contention, last year Eastcan Exploration Ltd. of Calgary found two deposits of natural gas off the coast of Labrador.

Nixon Levels Same Speech

KITCHENER, Ont. (CP) — Liberal Leader Robert Nixon campaigned through southwestern Ontario Sunday, constantly predicting a majority Liberal government will be swept to power when voters go to the polls Thursday.

Mr. Nixon delivered the same message wherever he went, saying William Davis's Conservative government is uttering 'desperate, last minute gasps" as the people of Ontario seek a change.

"We've reached the threshold of victory," he told more than 1,200 cheering supporters here.

He said the Conservatives are in "full retreat" as candidates argue with Mr. Davis's position on rent review and some Conservative candidates avoid any mention of the premier or the party in their advertising.

"Our Liberal team is winning," he said. "Voters across Ontario are turning away from the tired and out-of touch-administration that's ruled at Queen's Park for more than 32 years.

Newfoundland Liberal Chief Once Smallwood's Protege

ST. JOHN'S, Nfld. (CP) — Edward M. Roberts became leader of Newfoundland's Liberal party at a time of defeat.

The Sept. 16 provincial election has given Mr. Roberts his second chance in three years to take the reins of government away from Premier Frank Moores' Progressive Conservatives.

A major obstacle facing the 34-year-old Opposition leader is the Liberal Reform Party, led by former premier Joseph R. Smallwood.

Mr. Roberts, who was introduced to active politics by Mr. Smallwood defeated the 74-year-old former premier in a leadership contest last fall.

The party leadership first fell to Mr. Roberts when Mr. Smallwood retired from politics in January, 1972, following a provincial Supreme Court ruling that the Conservatives had won a close election the previous October.

Mr. Roberts barely had time to settle in as party leader before Premier Moores called an election for March 24, 1972.

The Conservatives swept into office with 33 of the 42 seats while the Liberals took eight and the New Labrador Party one. Resignations and byelections later changed the standings, which at dissolution were Conservative 32, Liberal eight and two vacant seats.

The Conservative landslide was a severe disappointment to many old-time Liberals who had become accustomed to being part of the governing party. Mr. Smallwood had led the party to one victory after another during his 23 years as premier.

Mr. Roberts, lawyer-son of a prominent local physician, buckled down to the duties of Opposition leader but there was frequent speculation that many Liberals wanted Mr. Smallwood back.

Eventually the Liberals arranged a leadership convention for October, 1974, with Mr. Roberts and Mr. Smallwood the main contenders.

Mr. Roberts defeated Mr. Smallwood 403 to 298 on the second ballot.

Again Mr. Smallwood declared he was through with politics.

But when the former premier returned to Newfoundland after spending the winter in Florida, groups of dissident Liberals held several meetings with him. In July the Liberal Reform Party was founded at a meeting in Gander and Mr. Smallwood was chosen its leader.

Despite the danger that emergence of the Liberal Reform Party could cost his party many votes Mr. Roberts has refused to consider a coalition government with Mr. Smallwood. Several candidates for each party said they would prefer not to run against each other.

For Mr. Roberts, first elected in the old district of White Bay North in 1966 and now running in the Strait of Belle Isle constituency, politics may not be a lifetime career. He once said he might turn to something else in a few years, possibly teaching.

Mr. Roberts attended high school in Aurora, Ont., as did Mr. Moores, and went on to graduate from University of Toronto law school in 1964. He was called to the Newfoundland bar in 1965 but While at university Mr. Roberts was awarded a trophy for the best editorial writing in the undergraduate newspaper, The Varsity.

In 1960 he had been appointed founding editor of the Canadian University Liberal Federation newspaper.

In 1963 he was appointed associate private secretary to J. W. Pickersgill, then secretary of state. The next year he became executive assistant to Mr. Smallwood, serving until 1966 when he resigned to become a Liberal candidate.

Two years after his election he was appointed welfare minister and later health minister, a position he held at the time of the Liberal government's defeat.

TOKYO (AP) — Japan has replaced the United States as the world's ham radio capital. Japanese ham radio increased to 286,247 this year, the ministry of postal and telecommunications said, surpassing the U.S. total of 278,000 ham radios.

Canadian Educators Blaim Inflation for Rising Costs

By JOAN WALTERS
The Canadian Press

School budgets across the country are higher this year than ever before and most school board representatives say the increase is due to inflation, rising teacher salaries, higher energy costs and declining provincial aid.

A cross-Canada survey by The Canadian Press shows increases in 1975-76 school budgets of up to 25 per cent over last year in some provinces. The increased cost of educating elementary and secondary school students is borne partly by homeowners' property tax except in Newfoundland, Prince Edward Island and New Brunswick where education is financed entirely by the province.

With two exceptions, the school boards surveyed also reported an over-all decline in elementary school enrolments in the last few years because of lower birth rates.

A spokesman for the Metropolitan Toronto Separate School Board said the average number of students in that board's schools has increased by about 3,000 each year for the last decade. The Calgary Public school Board is another that still has rising enrolments due to an influx of new residents to the city, a spokesman said.

Although many school boards reported renovations to older school buildings and additions to smaller schools, most said little new construction is planned or under way because of lower enrolments. But in Manitoba about 40 new schools will open this fall, a spokesman for the Manitoba Public School Board said. Much of the new construction has been in communities within commuting distance of Winnipeg and is the result of a recent trend toward rural living, he said.

While some boards said expenditures for new programs and extra-curricular activities have been trimmed because of rising costs, most reported attempts to keep up with inflation in other ways.

Thurlow's Paul Bedard prepares for a safe landing at home plate, Sunday, in Plainfield, as Thurlow's Belleville Yardmen Benefit Fund team took 1-0 lead in Ontario Baseball Association Midget C final with Waterdown. All Waterdown catcher Jim Meagher can do is watch. The ball arrived too late for chance at Bedard.

Midget C Finals Opener

Extra-inning Win for Thurlow Team

By MARK BRETT

Sports Staff

Seven and 11 proved to be lucky numbers for the Belleville Yardmen Benefit Fund Thurlow midgets of the Eastern Ontario Baseball Association in Plainfield on Sunday in the first game of the All Ontario C finals between the Yardman team and the Western division champions, from Waterdown, Ontario.

It took the Thurlow club a total of 11 innings and three and one half hours before they were finally able to overcome the visitors by a score of 6-5. The win for the Yardmen team was their seventh straight playoff victory and gives the Thurlow club a 1-0 lead in the best of three series.

The hero of the game for the winners was centre fielder Dave Chisholm who saved the game twice and also drove in the winning run for the Yardmen. The most impressive fact about the plays was that Chisholm was playing with a possible broken finger.

In the seventh inning, Chisholm while at bat took a pitch on the finger and the management decided rather than risk further injury to the hand, to pull the player out of the game. Chisholm after sitting out the eighth inning managed to talk his way back into the ball game.

After watching an earlier 3-0 lead dwindle in the latter stages of the game, the Thurlow team found themselves on the short end of a 4-3 score with two out in the bottom of the ninth inning. Pitcher Brad Sullivan batting clean up pounded the ball out into centre field to put the tying run on base.

Sullivan was able to steal second base and a ball badly overthrown by Waterdown catcher, Jim Meagher, on the play enabled Sullivan to advance to third base. Chisholm, in noticeable pain was able to get a one handed bunt out far enough in the infield to score Sullivan from third and tie the game up at 4-4 heading into extra innings.

In the top of the 10th inning, Waterdown scored a single run to put them back into the lead, but again Thurlow were able to pull it out as Terry Tanner scored for the home team.

Pitcher Brad Sullivan finished up the game in fine style, striking out the first three batters to come to the plate to rack up a total of 21 strikeouts over the course of the game.

In the bottom of the 11th Sullivan and Chishodm combined to score the winning run and give Thurlow a 1-0 lead in games.

"That's the tightest game we've played all season and fittingly enough it came against the best team we've played all year," explained Yardmen coach George Beer, at the conclusion of the baseball marathon. Beer was pleased with the "superb" play exhibited by the Yardmen although he noted that "We weren't hitting as well as we have been."

Ray Skelly, shortstop for the Thurlow team summed up his team's performance: "We almost lost the game because of errors; but in the extra innings each player knew what had to be done and then we just went out and did it. The game was a very good all round team effort." Skelly drove in one run with his pair of doubles.

Thurlow during the course of the regular season finished up with a two win, seven loss record although coach Beer noted that the team had been playing A-clubs.

The Yardmen earned the right to advance to the finals by defeating three other clubs in similar two out of three series. Orono, Lindsay and Almonte of Ottawa all fell at the hands of the Thurlow team. The locals won all three series in two straight games and need but one victory to clinch the All Ontario title.

The first game of the current series was scheduled for Waterdown Saturday but due to the heavy rain the game was cancelled. Thurlow are now awaiting word from the league convener as to whether they will have to make two trips to Waterdown if the series goes three games.

Brad Sullivan and Barry Beer led the charge for the locals as each player counted a pair of runs in the victory. Paul Bedard and Terry Tanner had the other two runs for the winners.

Coach Beer felt the game "was slower than most," but attributed this to "the style of play of Waterdown."

Bell had a pair of runs in Waterdown's losing effort while Meagher, Anderson and Peters each added a single to round out the scoring for the visitors. The Yardmen will get a chance to make it a clean sweep in the playoffs this Saturday when they travel to Waterdown for the second game of the series.

Portuguese Rebound

Hellenic 4-1 Loser

The Kingston Portuguese sparked by a two goal performance from Joey Perreira, scored a 4-1 comeback victory over Quinte Hellenic in Ontario Premier Soccer League action on Saturday at Sir James Whitney School.

The locals had built up a slim 1-0 lead by half time on a goal by Ted Adams. It was a different story in the second half however, as the Kingston team came up with four unanswered goals taking advantage of a defensive lapse by the Belleville squad.

Cold winds and a slippery field resulted in several glaring errors by both teams during the course of the game. Experience shone through for the winners as their quick passes and the accuracy with which they were delivered often put the Portuguese in a threatening position.

Carl Smijan and Ed Perreira each added singles to go along with Joey Perreira's two goals in the second half to round out the scoring for the winners.

The lone goal for the Belleville club came midway through the first half on perhaps, the best play of the game. Hellenic were awarded a corner kick after a Kingston defender inadvertantly kicked the ball out of bounds in his own end. Andre Vinienis took the kick placing the ball right in front of the net to teammate Adams who made no mistake in heading the ball by the opposition goalie.

In net for the home team was 48-year-old standout Zolton Vigh. The agile netminder was the sole reason for the score not going any higher than it did during the Kingston scoring barrage in the second half.

At the other end of the field, the Kingston goalie had relatively little work to do thanks to the defensive efforts displayed by the Portuguese and in particular Tony Valente. Valente played superb ball, breaking up Belleville passes and blocking shots from close in.

Bardon One Up

PICTON (Special) — Bill Harrison's solid base hit scored Wayne McConnell with the winning run in Bardon Supplies' squeaker over Strathroy here Saturday night as the Ontario Amateur Softball Association Intermediate B semi-final series opened.

McConnell drew a walk with two out in the bottom of the 11th and Harrison's clutch hit gave the home side a 3-2 win. Second game in the best of three set is scheduled for Strathroy, Saturday at 8 p.m.

The Bardon team was fortunate to win this one.

Losing pitcher Ivan Harrington logged no fewer than 24 strikeouts while fashioning a six-hitter. He walked two.

Winner Earl Foster, shrugging off six errors committed by his mates, allowed only five hits while striking out nine and walking one.

Bill Dewey's bunt singled plated two runs for Bardon in the bottom of the fifth but the visitors squared it with two in the top of the seventh. And it stayed that way until McConnell and Harrison teamed up in the second extra inning.

Foster was a standout for the winners, accounting for half his team's hitting attack, going three for five. Marv Stacey, Dewey and Harrison had the other safeties.

Strathroy catcher Bob Whitelaw had two base hits with one each for Charlie Johnson, Juri Lee and Harrington.

Vi-Mars Tie Olympics 1-1

Belleville Olympics chose the wrong time to go on a scoring spree in weekend soccer action.

With centre forward Bob Watson firing six goals, Olympics romped past Warkworth 9-1, Saturday in Bay of Quinte Soccer Association Belleville Charity Cup action.

But Sunday, it was time for Eastern Ontario Premier Soccer League play and the best Olympics could do was a 1-1 draw with Peterborough Vi-Mars.

Olympics and Vi-Mars were both on the hunt for a win, Sunday as they attempted to remain in contention for first place honors. But the draw merely kept the teams close to front running Kingston Italo-Canadian who won their game over Toronto Ferma.

Italo-Canaidans have three games to play and own 11 points while Vi-Mars hold second spot with 10 points but have only one game remaining. Olympics aren't out of it yet, resting in third place with nine points and two games to play but the best they can hope for is a total collapse by the Kingston side. And that's not likely to happen.

Olympics carried the play in the first half of the Sunday match but couldn't prove it on the scoresheet. It was a scoreless draw at the interval.

In the second half, John O'neill converted a cross from Kevin Kirby to put the home side in front. And Olympics made that goal stand up until the late going.

Only 10 minutes remained when Bob Campbell connected from a scramble to equalize.

At Warkworth, Watson's outburst produced a team record. Adding to his six goals were Kirby, O'neill and Tony Goncalves who connected from the penalty spot.

Lone marksman for Warkworth was Nahura.

Attempt to Open Game Up

Red Line on Way Out?

By THE CANADIAN PRESS

Is hockey's red line really necessary? Would its elimination open up the game and offset the effects of Philadelphia Flyers' tight forechecking style?

The question was put to Frank Boucher, inventor of the red line, by Ottawa Journal Sports Editor Eddie McCabe.

"I've been advocating that for some time," Boucher said at his home in Keoptville, Ont. "When that line went in, during the '40s, the idea was to speed up the game.

"It had become bogged down. Five men would move in on the attack and you couldn't pass the puck over the blueline so you couldn't get it out.

"By putting in the red line and allowing passes out that far, it opened up the game. We had to have some kind of a forward pass.

"Now, with the way things have gone, they could take out the red line and allow passing all the way to the other team's blueline, and that would open it up again. That would catch those forecheckers napping."

The question was prompted by a remark from Scotty Bowman, coach of Montreal Canadiens, that he might try to emulate the Flyers, Stanley Cup champions the last two years.

'I don't mean going completely, not making big changes in our style," said Bowman. "But we'll have to play tighter hockey against some clubs. We didn't win enough of the 1-0 and 2-1 games last year. . . .

"Philadelphia sold themselves on the idea they can win by scoring two or three goals, and they have that forechecking down to a science.

"Shooting the puck in is the only way. The Canadiens have always played to a system and the centres would come back deep in their own end for the puck and take time to regroup and get organized.

"That doesn't work any more because when the centre comes back the others are right on top of you and so you're just helping them to forecheck. So it's not possible to play the way we did before.

"We'll have to get it out of our own end quicker and trap the forecheckers."

If the Canadiens, long noted as a skating team, alter their style, it's a good bet that other National Hockey League teams will do the same. In fact, Los Angeles Kings and New York Islanders are already playing a tight-checking type of hockey.

Thus Boucher's recommendation.

"It's important now to make a change," said the former New York Rangers centre.

Devolin Grabs B Championship

Devolin Motors fell prey to some very excruciating circumstances on the weekend. but overcame everything that was thrown at them to bring home the B Championship of the Napanee Legion Softball Tournament.

The local squad blew a 3-0 lead in their tournament opener, Saturday, against Bath and ended up losing 6-3. Errors told the story in that one. Their second start was a little better as they knocked out Lakefield 3-1. That win put them in the B final against Napanee Juveniles.

Early Sunday afternoon, Devolin management learned they didn't have a pitcher for the final game. Don Holoway, who hurled the previous two contests, found himself in the hospital with his wife. This morning they are the proud parents of a baby girl.

With Holoway on the verge of parenthood, Devolin had to bring Larry Griffin in from Toronto.

Game time, Sunday was 3 p.m. and Griffin arrived at 2.55 p.m.

The locals put together a pot full of errors in the first inning of the final game to help the Napanee club, coached by former Devolin catcher Marv Stacey, to a 3-0 lead. But the Motormen came back in extra innings to nip Stacey's crew 4-3, and win the title.

Kingston was the A Champion.

Lead SHBL Final 2-1

Latta Moves in Front

A pair of Bobs did the trick for Latta, Sunday in their South Hastings Baseball League final series game against Melrose.

Bob Reid came on in the bottom of the ninth to squelch a Melrose rally and Bob Smith drove in three runs to give Latta a 5-1 win and a 2-1 lead in their best-fo-seven set.

Reid did his chore with two men on and one out. Melrose had just scored their run to tie things up. Dale Bamber threw the eight and one third innings prior to Reid's relief. The pair combined to fan 11 and walk three.

Ted Abrams was the loser striking out 12, walking two and giving up nine hits — five in the top of the tenth.

Latta coutned a run in the top of the third and both clubs played scoreless ball until the bottom of the ninth when Melrose evened things back up.

The home squad added four in top of the first extra frame to put the game away. Smith was the key to the rally with a pair of RBIs, on a double. He also had a single earlier in the contest to account for the winners' first tally. Ren Harrison added two singles to the attack, Wayne Harrison and Rob Allison each had a double and Roger Ray, Damon Richardson and Bamber each singled.

Hugh Brennan doubled and singled, Larry Pascoe and Abrams had two singles each and Randy Pascoe and Dave Bates one single apiece for Melrose.

Latta has home field advantage in the next two games; scheduled for Tuesday at 6 p.m. and Saturday at 5 p.m.

Bantams Lose To Merriton

Errors proved to be the deciding factor in the first game of the Ontario Baseball Association's Bantam C semi-final game on Sunday between the Thurlow Chisholm's of Roslin squad and the Merritton Bantams in Merritton. The visitors were outscored by a 6-3 margin giving Merritton a 1-0 lead in the best out of three series.

Gary Badgley pitched the entire game for the losers and managed to strike out 19 batters during the course of the game.

Rempel and Anderson split the pitching chores for the winners and fanned a total of nine Thurlow batters.

Tom Masterson led the way for the losers, picking up three singles in the game. The first game was supposed to have been played in Thurlow but rain forced cancellation of the game on Saturday and the home game will be played this Saturday.

If a third and deciding game is needed it will be played on Sunday at Merritton.

OASA Squirts Defeated 5-1

SCARBOROUGH (Special) — Erupting for three runs in the bottom of the sixth inning, Scarborough Cedar Hill emerged with a 5-1 win over Belleville Kinsmen to knot the Ontario Amateur Softball Association Squirt A playoff series at 1-1 here, Sunday.

It was anyone's game until that late outburst.

The winners counted once in the first inning and after Belleville squared it with one in the second, Cedar Hill edged back in front with a single counter in the fourth.

Winning pitcher Graig Clarke fire a three-hitter while fanning 10 and walking one.

Allan Thompson took the loss. Allowing seven hits, he struck out 10 and walked two.

Robert Sprague's double was the big blow for the home side. The other six hits given up by Thompson were all singles.

Sharing three Belleville singles were David Phillips, Bobby Turner and Warren Cavalier.

The deciding game is scheduled for Scarborough's Thompson Park, Saturday, at 1 p.m.

Bayside Squad Appears Set

By TOM GAVEY

Sports Staff

"We've definitely improved over last year," says Bayside Secondary School coach Dan Lietar about his senior football squad.

Improvement is in order, as his team finished with an 0-6 record in 1974, worst in the league. With a new coaching staff and a better attitude the team should be much more competitive in 1975.

One question mark, however, is quarterback, where Richard Hodgson will be in his first year of calling the shots. Hodgson played senior football last year, but in the backfield.

"We have more boys out this year, about 45 in fact, and all are enthusiastic says Lietar.

There will be 15 players returning from last year's senior team, which will make Bayside one of the more experienced clubs in the league. That has to be a plus since many teams were hit badly by graduations.

Assisting Lietar in coaching the Bayside team will be Gord Smith and Mike Dollack.

Some of the mainstays on the Bayside team will be Wayne Lachairty, Peter McInroy and Gary Robertson, all returning from the 1974 squad.

"They are the players who will provide our big plays. They'll be the backbone" predicts Lietar.

Up from last year's Junior team will be Doug Schoenhols, who was one of the top players on that team.

"We hope he can make the adjustment," said the coach, "This is my first year as Senior coach, I hope to make a lot of improvements."

With over 40 players coming to practice the Bayside team has plenty to choose from and an improvement should be quite obvious.

The first team Bayside will play in Centennial Secondary School. The game will be played Thursday at Bayside.

Lietar is looking for a good effort from his players and much more enthusiasm, something which was lacking last year.

Mets' Rookie On a Rampage

By THE ASSOCIATED PRESS

Mike Vail is a streak hitter—and the streaks never seem to stop.

New York's rookie sensation, leading the International League in batting, was plucked from the Mets' Tidewater farm club about a month ago, interrupting his 19-game hitting streak.

The move was designed to help the Mets in their charge toward the top of baseball's National League East division, a charge that never materialized.

But while the Mets have slowed down, Vail has picked up even more speed. He's hit in 23 of his 25 games in the majors, including the last 22 in a row to match the longest streak in the big league's this year by Boston's Denny Doyle.

No. 22, off St. Louis' John Denny in the Mets' 6-2 loss Sunday to the Cardinals, also moved Vail within one game of the league record for rookie streak-hitting, set by Philadelphia's Joe Rapp in 1921 and equalled by the Phils' Richie Ashburn in 1948.

The major league mark for rookies is 26 by Guy Curtright of the 1943 Chicago White Sox. Vail is also one game away from matching the Mets' all-time hitting streak of 23 by Cleon Jones in 1970.

In Sunday's other National League games, Pittsburgh remained 5½ games ahead of Philadelphia by beating Montreal 4-3, the Phils routed Chicago 13-7, San Francisco split with Cincinnati, winning 4-2 and losing 8-3, Houston topped San Diego 4-2 and Los Angeles downed Atlanta 4-3.

Saturday, Chicago beat Philadelphia 4-, San Francisco downed Cincinnati 9-2, Montreal defeated Pittsburgh 5-2, New York beat St. Louis 6-2 and Los Angeles shut out Atlanta 6-0.

Despite Vail's singular performance, the Mets absorbed their 12th loss in their last 16 games and Tom Seaver, 21-9, suffered his second setback in a row. "I don't know if I really felt too bad out there," Seaver remarked, "but I didn't feel super good, that's for sure."

Bake McBride and Reggie Smith didn't help him feel any better. McBride hit a triple and a single and scored two runs and Smith hit a two-run double. Felix Millan singled for the Mets' two runs.

Mike Schmidt, the major league home-run leader, belted his 35th and 36th of the year to pace the Phils. Schmidt drove in four runs and Dick Allen had three RBI on a homer and a single. George Mitterwald had a two-run homer and Tim Hosley slugged a grand-slammer for Chicago.

Sox Respect Those Orioles

By THE ASSOCIATED PRESS

Are Boston Red Sox lacking confidence or just playing a confidence game?

The Red Sox have a four-game lead over Baltimore Orioles in baseball's American League East division but don't sound like they think they're the team to beat.

"I expect Batimore to win every game they play. If they get beat, it's a bonus for us," said Boston manager Darrell Johnson, whose Red Sox rallied from a 5-1 deficit to beat Milwaukee Brewers 8-6 Sunday.

Boston's Rick Burleson agreed. "You look up at the scoreboard and you know the Orioles aren't going to lose another game the rest of the year. You just have to hope."

Does that mean the Red Sox expect to lose their important two-game series against the Orioles beginning Tuesday night? Or are they merely luring Baltimore into a trap at Fenway Park?

And on the other side of the field are the pursuing Orioles, who sound like they're in the driver's seat as they ready for their collision in Boston.

"We just have to go in there and play like we've been playing," said Don Baylor, who knocked in three runs in the Orioles' 9-3 victory over Detroit Tigers.

Elsewhere in the American League, New York Yankees beat Cleveland Indians 6-2, Minnesota Twins defeated Oakland A's 10-8, Kansas City Royals dumped California Angels 10-4 and Texas Rangers edged Chicago White Sox 9-8 in 13 innings.

Saturday, Boston and Milwaukee split a doubleheader, Milwaukee taking the afternoon game 9-6 and Boston the nightcap 6-3; Oakland downed Minnesota 8-5; Cleveland and New York split a doubleheader, Cleveland winning the first 7-1 and New York the second 4-3; Baltimore shut out Detroit 8-0, California beat Kansas City 6-2 and Texas edged Chicago 8-7.

Veteran Carl Yastrzemski, the team captain, led by example for Boston with a two-run tie-breaking single in a three-run seventh inning.

The Yankees are squeezing as many victories as possible out of Jim (Catfish) Hunter's rich and talented right arm. Working on two days' rest, the New York Yankees ace pitched seven innings, surrendering five hits, striking out two and walking none.

"I didn'thave real good stuff especially on my fastball," said Hunter, 22-13, whose complete game streak was stopped at 10. "I got tired a little quicker than normal."

Roy Howell's tie-breaking single capped a three-run comeback in the bottom of the 13th and gave Texas the victory over the White Sox.

Harmon Killebrew and Frank White slugged home runs in Kansas City's victory. Killebrew's two-run blast, his 13th of the season and 572nd of his career, capped a four-run first inning. White hit an inside-the-park homer an inning later.

DUFFY DYER

Bucs Trip Expos

PITTSBURGH (AP) — Duffy Dyer's single and right fielder Tony Scott's error gave Pittsburgh a pair of eighth-inning runs for a 4-3 victory over Montreal Expos in a National League baseball game Sunday.

Woodie Fryman, 8-11, walked Manny Sanguillen and Bob Robertson before Dyer hit his single to right. Sanguillen scored on the hit and when Scott, an eighth-inning defensive replacement, bobbled the ball, pinch-runner Miguel Dilone also scored.

Richie Zisk hit his 19th home run of the season in the fourth inning for Pittsburgh and Sanguillen doubled home a run in the sixth. Pepe Frias had a two-run single in the second inning, and Mike Jorgensen hit a sacrifice fly in the sixth for Montreal.

Dave Parker singled up the middle before Sanguillen hit his double into the right field corner in the sixth off starter Dennis Blair. Pittsburgh reliever Ramon Hernandez, 7-2, got the victory.

Frias, who only drove in one all season before Sunday's contest, had singled up the middle in the second after the Expos loaded the bases against Larry Demery on Jorgensen's single, a hit batter and a walk. In the sixth, Larry Biittner, Jerry White and Jim Dwyer singled to load the bases before Jorgensen hit his sacrifice fly to left.

In the Pirate seventh, Rennie Stennett reached first when his grounder to short was dropped by Frias for an error. With two outs, Fryman hit Willie Stargell with a pitch, then threw a wild pitch that moved Stennett to third and Stargell to second. Parker was then walked intentonally before Zisk flied out to White in centre to end the inning.

Wajima Winner

Trainer Waits For the Film

By THE CANADIAN PRESS

Trainer Steve DiMauro can't wait to see his star Wajima in the movies. He missed Wajima's performance in Saturday's $250,000 Marlboro Cup—and it was a sizzler.

"To be honest with you I didn't see the race,'" said DiMauro, who had a poor vantage point at New York's Belmont Park.

What he didn't see was Wajima outduel Forego in a brilliant stretch drive that brought the three-year-old colt a head victory over the 1974 horse of the year.

"At the top of the stretch, I knew it was going to be a fight," said DiMauro, who did get glimpses of his colt's fifth consecutive stakes victory.

Braulio Baeza sent Wajima into the lead inside the eighth pole but Forego wouldn't wilt, and with a lunge with less than 100 yards left, the big five-year-old gelding appeared to draw even.

But Wajima was up to the task on this day.

DiMauro said his only advice to Baeza was to stay off the rail, where the track was deep. Baeza followed the instructions perfectly.

Forego as usual, carried top weight. This time it was 129 pounds, 10 more than Wajima and three more than third-place Ancient Title, who finished 7½ lengths back from Forego.

Wajima, now the leader of the three-year-old male division and a leading contender for horse of the year, was timed in 2:00, just a fifth of a second off Belmont Park's track record for 1¼ miles, set by Forego last July 4.

In another major race on the U.S racing scene Saturday, Honest Pleasure broke out of the pack to win the $234,000 Arlington-Washington Futurity at Chicago's Arlington Park.

Honest Pleasure, ridden by Darrell McHargue, nipped long shot Khyber King by less than a length in taking the 6½-furlong event, the richest event in American racing for two-year-old thoroughbreds.

The winner earned $140,610 for owner Bertrand R. Firestone. It was the colt's third win in five races this year. He previously had won a total of $14,760.

Honest Pleasure was bunched in the midst of the 19-horse pack, largest in Futurity history, and broke through in the middle of the track as the field turned for home. He had plenty of room in the middle of the track and held off the chalenge of Khyber King and Rule The Ridge who finished third charging on the outside.

The winning time was 1:18 1-5.

Optimistic Gal, the only stakes winner in the field, ran away from seven other two-year-old fillies to won the $89,720 Matron at Belmont Park.

Braulio Baeza guided Optimistic Gal over the seven furlongs in a stakes record-equalling 1:23 as she flashed under the wire 6½ lengths ahead of Pacific Princess, owned by E. P. Taylor of Toronto. Prowess was another 1 3-4 lengths back.

The winner paid $2.80, $2.20 and $2.10. Pacific Princess returned $3.80 and $2.60, and Prowess paid $3.20 to show.

DON BAYLOR

Birds Rip Tigers

DETROIT (AP) — Don Baylor, continuing to thrive on Detroit pitching, drove in three runs with a single and a homer, and Elrod Hendricks hit a two-run homer Sunday to power Baltimore Orioles to a 9-3 victory over the Tigers.

Baltimore has won 10 of its last 12 American League baseball games while the Tigers have lost four in a row.

Baylor hit a two-run homer in the fifth and a run-scoring single in the seventh, both off reliever Tom Walker. He now has six home runs and 19 RBIs against the Tigers this season. He is batting .421 against Detroit with 24 hits in 57 at bats.

Baltimore rookie Paul Mitchell relieved Mike Cuellar in the third—when Detroit scored its three runs—and gave up five hits the rest of the way to raise his record to 3-0.

Baltimore scored once in the first off loser Ray Bare, 8-12, then added three runs in the second, two on Hendricks' homer and one on an error by catcher Bill Freehan.

Toros Tie Finns

TAMPERE, Finland (AP) — Toronto Toros of the World Hockey Association tied Finnish champions Tappara 5-5 in a wild exhibition game before 5,500 fans Sunday.

Tappara outshot the visitors 50-33 but the Canadian goaltenders, 41-year-old Les Binkley and Dave Tataryn, who played the two last periods, were outstanding.

Lou Nistico, Rick Foley, Frank Mahovlich, Gord Titcomb and Bob d'Alvise scored for Toronto. Mark Napier had two assists.

The Toros' penalty killing was excellent throughout and Tappara failed to connect despite playing half of the second period with five men against four.

The Toros, who beat a Helsinki team 6-2 Friday, return today to their training camp at Ornskjoldsvik, north Sweden.

Als' Rodgers Is Mr. Everything

By THE CANADIAN PRESS

Johnny Rodgers, the man who once said he'd like to be known as just an ordinary superstar, now is worried that his versatility will destroy the recognition he's seeking.

Rodgers rushed, caught passes and ran back punts and kickoffs in leading Montreal Alouettes to first place in the Eastern Football Conference on Saturday and said:

"I would like to be known as a specialist—a running back or an all-pro receiver or an all-pro wingback. When you look at it over-all, I'll probably have a lot of total stats, but I don't know how people will take that."

Rodgers's total statistics Saturday amounted to 178 yards on rushing, receiving and kick returns in Montreal's 19-13 victory over Ottawa Rough Riders.

The win put Montreal two points up on Ottawa atop the EFC standings and eight points ahead of Toronto Argonauts and Hamilton Tiger-Cats who both lost interlocking Canadian Football League games during the weekend.

British Columbia Lions beat the Argos 32-10 Saturday night and Edmonton Eskimos, the Western Conference leaders, defeated the Ticats 17-3 Sunday in Hamilton.

Rodgers also contributed two second-half touchdowns and a two-point convert to the Als' victory and said: "I think there should be some consideration for the all-round back."

JOHNNY RODGERS

His rushing gained only nine yards on four carries but he added 66 yards on six pass receptions, 28 yards on three punt returns and 75 yards on two kickoff returns.

Don Sweet kicked a field goal, a convert and a single to round out the Montreal scoring.

Ottawa's Moody Jackson caught a 43-yard pass from starting quarterback Tom Clements for hte Riders touchdown. Kicker Gerry Organ added the convert and two field goals.

Condredge Holloway replaced Clements midway in the third quarter but failed to rally the Riders. Jimmy Jones went all the way as the Montreal quarterback, completing 23 of 30 pass attempts and giving up three interceptions.

The Eskimos, who move on to Ottawa for a game Wednesday night, played just well enough to get past the ineffective Ticats.

"This was not indicative of us," said Edmonton quarterback Tom Wilkinson. "Some days our offence does it. Today our defence rose up. Put it all together and we're a hell of a good club."

Wilkinson completed eight of 15 pass attempts, including touchdown strikes of 18 yards to George McGowan and 43 yards to Don Warrington.

Dave Cutler booted a 25-yard field goal and two converts for the Eskimos while Ian Sunter's 23-yard field goal in the third quarter was the only Hamilton score.

The Ticats couldn't get inside the Edmonton 40-yard line until midway in the third quarter when Garney Henley intercepted a Wilkinson pass and returned it to the Edmonton 16.

Jerry Keeling completed 13 of 24 passes for Hamilton and had two intercepted. Rookie Jim McMillan replaced him in the second half and completed only two of 11 throws and had one intercepted.

Ang Santucci, a Hamilton-born graduate of St. Mary's University, Halifax, started in the Ticat backfield in place of all-star Andy Hopkins who went back on the injury list Saturday.

Hopkins was just back after four weeks off with a broken arm when he reinjured the arm in practice. Santucci picked up 31 yards on seven pass receptions and 24 yards on 11 rushes.

The Eskimos' victory pulled them two points ahead of Saskatchewan Roughriders atop the West while the Ticats' loss left them tied with Toronto for last in the East.

British Columbia, meanwhile, moved up into a tie with Winnipeg for third place in the West and Lions coach Cal Murphy gave much of the credit to quarterback Pete Liske who completed 20 of 30 passes for 297 yards and one touchdown.

It was the Lions' third win in a row under Murphy since he took over from the deposed Eagle Keys.

"Liske put on one of the finest passing displays I've ever seen," said Murphy. "He had control of the game all the way."

At the same time, the B.C. defence put strong pressure on Toronto quarterbacks Mike Rae and Bill Bynum, sacking Rae six times and Bynum once and intercepting two of Bynum's passes and one of Rae's.

Rae was knorked out of action with a twisted knee in the third quarter, but the most serious of the Argo casualties was tight end Pete Muller who went out in the first quarter with a damaged right knee. He was expected to have surgery on the knee today and may be lost for the remainder of the season.

Running back Terry Bailey scored two B.C. touchdowns, one on a pass from Liske and another on a 15-yard run. Running back Wayne Moseley, on a two-yard run, and flanker Ross Clarkson, on a 25-yard pass from Eric Guthrie, scored the other B.C. touchdowns. Guthrie also kicked a single, four converts and a field goal.

Doyle Orange caught a 10-yard pass from Bynum for the Argos' only touchdown and Zenon Andrusyshyn kicked a convert and field goal.

Eastern Leaders

By THE CANADIAN PRESS

Place-kicker Gerry Organ of Ottawa Rough Riders picked up seven points in an Eastern Football Conference game Saturday to move closer to leading Zenon Andrusyshyn of Toronto Argonauts in the scoring race.

Andrusyshyn was held to a field goal and a convert Saturday night as the Argonauts lost 32-10 to British Columbia Lions. Organ booted two field goals and a convert, although Ottawa dropped a 19-13 decision to Montreal Alouettes.

Andrusyshyn leads the race with 80 points, including 22 field goals, while Organ has 65 points which includes 21 converts. Don Sweet of Montreal is third with 59 points.

Johnny Rodgers of the Alouettes gained the most ground with two touchdowns and a two-point convert, giving him 38 points. He has scored six touchdowns this season.

MUHAMMAD ALI

Same Old Ali

MANILA (AP) — World heavyweight champion Muhammad Ali arrived early today in Manila with security increased in what officials called a precaution against a possible Japanese Red Army threat.

Ali's arrival was accompanied by the usual barrage of poetry and a promise to knock out challenger Joe Frazier in their title bout scheduled for Oct. 1 (Spet. 30 in the North America).

Ali playfully mashed his fist against the face of Frazier's 15-year-old son, Marvis, who greeted him, and said: "I am so determined and anxious to get my fist on your father's nose."

Chairman Luis Tabuena, chairman of the Games and Amusements Board who signed the deal bringing the bout to Manila, said a company of air force men armed with truncheons were present because intelligence sources feared trouble from the Japanese Red Army. The security was tighter and more obvious than it was for Frazier's arrival Saturday.

He said the military had reported that two Japanese believed to be "financiers" of the Red Army were stopped in Tokyo earlier in the year from travelling to Manila.

"We are taking precautions," he said. Tabuena gave no further details.

Ali appeared to be unconcerned with threats. He said despite jet-lag after his 12-hour flight from Honolulu, he wanted to do a 10-round workout later in the day.

Marvis presented Ali with a Smokin Joe Frazier T-shirt, a gift Ali accepted with a poetic note: "'Joe's gonna come out smoking, but I ain't gonna be jokin'."

EQUALS STREAK

ST. LOUIS (AP) — Rookie Mike Vail of New York Mets equalled the longest batting streak in the major leagues this season when he hit a fourth-inning single against St. Louis Cardinals to extend his string to 22 consecutive baseball games. The hit matched the 22-game streak by Boston's Denny Doyle in July and August.

Streak Comes To End

LONDON (CP) — Manchester United, amid another violent outbreak among fans, has lost the unbeaten streak it had built up in its return to the First Division of English League soccer.

The loss, by a 1-0 score to Queen's Park Rangers, came Saturday at Loftus Road Stadium in West London.

After the game, three policemen were injured in clashes with the fans, 22 of whom were arrested.

The disturbances were not unexpected. Storekeepers around the stadium had boarded up their windows, pubs stayed closed and bus and underground services in the area were halted by workers who feared fan rowdiness.

Despite the loss, Manchester United stayed on top of the standings, keeping ahead of West Ham United on goal average. West Ham's 3-3 tie against Leicester moved it into a points tie for the lead. Both have 11 points.

David Webb headed in a rebound for the Queen's Park goal in the opening minutes.

Leicester City took a 3-0 lead over West Ham after only 19 minutes but Billy Bonds started the West Ham comeback at the 60th minute and Frank Lampard scored another goal six minutes later. Pat Holland scored West Ham's tying goal in the last minute.

Leeds United also fought back against Stoke City but ended up on the losing end of a 3-2 decision. Terry Conroy and Mike Pejic put Stoke City in front 2-0 after 41 minutes but two goals within a minute by Peter Lorimer put Leeds back in the game. Jimmy Greenhoff score Stoke's winning goal in the 72nd minute.

The First Division produced 39 goals, with Burnley and Norwich City sharing eight. Peter Noble got all four for Burnley, two of them on penalties. Ted MacDougall scored two and Martin Peters and Phil Boyer one each for Norwich.

League champion Derby County scored a 3-2 away win over Tottenham Hotspur after a grim struggle during which Derby was twice behind. Former England international Francis Lee scored Derby's winner in the 78th minute.

John Duncan and Martin Chivers, playing in midfield, got the Tottenham goals. Charlie George and Kevin Hector were Derby's other scorers.

Everton beat Newcastle 3-0 with goals by Bob Latchford, Mick Lyons and Dave Clements.

In the Second Division, Nottingham County moved clear at the top of the standings with a 2-1 win at York while Fulham lost 2-0 at home to Bristol Rovers.

Crystal Palace, the Third-Division leader and the only league club with a 100 per-cent record, beat Rotherham United 2-0.

In the new Scottish Premier League, Glasgow Rangers stayed on top with a 2-0 win over St. Johnstone on goals by Colin Stein and Derek Johnstone.

IN MEMORIAM

EMPEY — In loving memory of a dear mother, Eliza Pearl who passed away Sept. 15, 1959.

It seems so strange that those we need,
And those we love the best,
Are just the ones God calls away,
And takes them home to rest,
Each time we see Mum's picture,
She seems to smile and say,
Don't cry, I'm only sleeping.
I will see you again some day.
—Lovingly remembered and missed by Pearl.

MITCHELL — In loving memory of my dear aunt Lottie Mitchell who passed away Sept. 15, 1969.

There is an ache in our hearts,
That year's won't take away,
A place in our hearts no one can fill,
We miss you dear, and always will.
—Always remembered by Shirley and Bernard Foley.

MITCHELL — In loving memory of our mother and grandmother Mrs. Lottie Leavina Mitchell (Bailey), passed away Sept. 15, 1969.

No one knows our heartaches,
Only those who have lost can tell,
Of the grief that we bear in silence,
For the mother we loved so well.
—Remembered always by daughter Mavis and son Ronald Hill, grandsons Donald and Ronald.

WILSON, Clifford Ernest — Who passed away September 15th, 1970.

You suffered much in silence,
Your spirit did not bend,
You faced your task with courage,
Until the very end.
God saw you getting weary,
He knew you needed rest,
His garden must be beautiful,
For He only picks the best.
—Always remembered by Family.

Local Hanging Topic of Guild Play

By SUSAN MCCONNELL
Staff Reporter

Around About 1883-84 is the title of a new documentary — drama based on the historic hangings in Prince Edward County on June 10, 1884, that will be presented in a new fashion, in a newly — painted theatre by a newcomer in the field of theatre writing — Bill Culp.

Performances will run Oct. 8 to Oct. 11 and Oct. 15 to 18 at Pinnacle Theatre to kick-off the busy season for the Belleville Theatre Guild.

Around About 1883-84 includes many firsts. It's the first time this type of workshop play will be presented in Belleville; it's the first time a drama has been written and directed by the same person; the first time Prince Edward County history is the centre of such a production and the first time a Canadian play has been performed in Belleville for eight years.

And, says Bill Culp, it's a first for the audience. "A lot of the stuff in this production they won't see anywhere else.," he said.

The Christmas producion this year will be directed by Enrst Kneisel. My Three Angels, a comedy about three escaped convicts who get involved with a family on the brink of disaster and manage to save them, will be followed by the play The Mandrake.

This rowdy period comedy set in the pre-Shakespearean era, featuring fancy costumes, is about the attempts of students to seduce the wife of an elderly man.

Director Jim Alexander says he hopes o enter this production into the Eastern Ontario Drama Festival.

And the last play scheduled for spring is The Subject Was Roses directed by Liz Marshall. This Pulitzer Prize winner written by Frank Gilrey is the story of a man who returns from a war a different person. The central plot concerns the changes his family undergo in their relationships.

"The first play of the season is a novel thing," commented Mrs. Marshall. "The others are broad comedys with a large staff and the last play is a small part play to give the season a balance."

The subscription package from Belleville Theatre Guild costs $10 for adults and $5 for senior citizens and students and entitles the subscriber to four plays and a guild newsletter.

About 1884-85

Bill Culp, writer and director of the first play this season at Belleville's Theatre Around About 1884—85 terms his play a "collective creation". The docu—drama will be staged Oct. 8—11 and Oct. 15—18.

Showbiz Shorts

OTTAWA (CP) — Two half-hour drama documentaries marking the 80th birthday of former prime minister John Diefenbaker will be broadcast this week and next by the CTV Television Network.

Seen on most CTV stations at 9.30 p.m. each Thursday, the programs, produced by Rolly Desmarais, include interviews with the former Progressive Conservative leader about his early days as a lawyer in Saskatchewan, and with editorial cartoonists who depicted him—sometimes savagely—during the height of his political career.

Diefenbaker: The Legal Years, was filmed mainly in Prince Albert, Sask. where Mr. Diefenbaker had his law office.

This film, to be shown this week, includes some dramatized portions in which Gerry Potter, a young Ottawa actor, plays the part of the young Diefenbaker, interviewing police and clients in his office.

WAS TOP LAWYER

Scenes with Mr. Diefenbaker in court are based on the transcript of court proceedings, in which Mr. Diefenbaker rose to be Western Canada's most formidable defence lawyer.

The second show, to be seen on the night of Mr. Diefenbaker's 80th birthday, Thursday, Sept. 18, is Dief Is The World's Best Editorial Cartoon Subject, an awkward title for a show which could be both the wittier and more biting of the two.

Cartoonists Russins of Ottawa Citizen, Yardley Jones of Montreal Star, MacPherson of Toronto Star, and Ting of London Free Press will appear on the show, along with many of their Diefenbaker cartoons.

Mr. Diefenbaker reacts to the cartoons with an occasioal grin or crusty comment.

STRATFORD, Ont. (CP) — Eight persons received Tyronne Guthrie awards worth a total of $9,200 at a presentation in the Festival Theatre Wednesday night.

In addition, $5,300 was awarded in special categories from grants and unsolicited sources.

The largest amount this year, $4,000, went to establish an annual award for opera singers to be known as the Maureen Forrester-Guthrie Award.

The annual Guthrie awards were established in 1954 in honor of the late Sir Tyrone Guthrie, the Stratford Festival's first artistic director.

The largest individual award went to actor Robin Nunn, 22, who received $2,500 to assist him in expanding his skills as an actor.

The second largest award, $1,500, went to Jack Merigold to help with travel and research necessary for the com2pletion of a book about Sir Tyrone.

Voice coach Lloy Coutts received $1,000 to help with the expense of a refresher study course on new methods in voice teaching.

Two other $1,000 awards were presented to actor John Innes and musician Hendrik Swaneveld. Awards of $750 each went to Carolyn Horley, to study painting and to Sharon Purdy to work with costume design.

An award of $700 went to actor Larry Lamb for voice studies.

An unsolicited award of $1,000 was presented to composer and conductor Berthold Carriere.

OTTAWA (CP) — Farmer's income from farming operations in all provinces except Newfoundland increased 6.9 per cent in the first seven months of the year, compared with the 1974 period, Statistics Canada has reported.

Total farm cash receipts for the January-to-July period was $6.272 billion, up from $5.8 billion for the same period last year.

However, receipts declined in three provinces:: Prince Edward Island, to $42. million from $60 million; New Brunswick to $49.9 million from $60.6 million; and Manitoba to $54 million from $553 million.

Receipts in other provinces, for this year and last year, were Nova Scotia, $62.9 million, $56. million; Quebec, $692.8 million, $616.9 million; Ontario, $1.42 billion, $1.351 billion; Saskatoon $1.985 billion, $1.829 billion; Alberta, $1.22 billion $1.144 billion; British Columbia 199.9 million, 192. million.

The totals include Canadian wheat board payments on previous years' grain crops and deficiency payments.

NEW YORK AP) — Warner Bros. announced Monday that actor Hal Holbrook has been chosen for the film role of Deep Throat, the mystery source of Watergate leaks to Washington Post reporters Bob Woodward and Carl Brnstein.

As in real life, Robert Redford in the role of Woodward will not reveal Deep Throat's identity in the movie All the President's Men, based on the Woodward-Bernstein book of that name and now being filmed in and around Los Angeles.

Dustin Hoffman plays Bernstein's role on the screen.

NEW YOR (AP) — Members of the American Guild of Musical Artists (AGMA) ended their week-long strike against the Metropolitan Opera on Monday and immediately began rehearsals for the new season.

AGMA, representing the chorus, ballet and principal artists at the Met, struck last week, forcing cancellation of rehearsals which had been scheduled to begin Sept. 1

A major issue in negotiations had been the Met's request for binding options for four additional weeks of work if the season could be lengthened.

Details of the pact were not immediately available.

LOS ANGELES (AP)—After time out from acting to serve as a producer, Gregory Peck is returning to the screen as star of The Birthmark for 20th Century-Fox.

Peck will play the U.S. ambassador to England in the original screenplay by David Seltzer. The story is described as "a modern-day fulfillment of the prophecy of the Book of Revelations with the coming of the anti-Christ."

The Birthmark will be directed by Richard Donner in London, Jerusalem and Rome starting Oct. 20.

Oswald: "The American Bridge Teacher's quarterly is always a fine source for hands used by teachers to illustrate points of play."

Jim: "They are almost always very simple and straightforward, so that even beginners can understand and follow them."

Oswald: "Today's hand is described by Paul Boardman. It is an exercise in not drawing trumps."

Jim: "Paul points out a trump or diamond lead would ruin South's party, but the actual lead was the jack of clubs. This enables South to make the hand by the simple expedient of cross-ruffing out the hearts and clubs and finally throwing East in with his ace of trumps. The line of play is to win the first trick with the ace of clubs while discarding a heart from dummy. Ruff a club; cash ace of hearts, cross ruff the rest of the hearts and clubs and lead a spade."

"East has to take his ace and must either allow South to ruff in dummy and discard a diamond or lead away from his king up to dummy's ace-queen."

Inflamed Veins Can Be Serious

By G. C. THOSTESON, MD

Dear Dr. Thosteson: Does phlebitis ever really leave?

I was hospitalized last year for this. My feet and ankles still swell considerably and they feel achy with big red lumps.

I am 52 and overweight to the tune of 168 pounds at 5 feet, 3 inches tall. Does weight have to do with phlebitis? My doctor wants me to reduce. I am taking pills for water retention.

I just feel a mess. Hope you can enlighten me.—R. K.

I trust you understand what phlebitis is, but for the sake of other readers I'll just say that it is an inflammation of a vein or veins. The lower limbs are common sites.

I suspect that yours involves deeper veins. Inflammation of superficial veins, those nearer the surface, is not quite as serious a problem because there are a sufficient number of these veins to "transfer" the circulation burdens locally.

In deep-vein phlebitis, there is the danger of a clot forming on the wall of the veins (thrombophlebitis). If this interferes with blood flow, then circulation is sharply reduced and fluid accumulation follows.

The anticoagulants you mention taking (in a part of your letter left I did not quote) is to reduce further clot formation.

Now to your question: the "itis" (inflammation) part of the problem can be arrested, but the thrombus (clot) portion cannot be undone.

You also mention elevating your feet at night when the swelling seems worse. You are wise to do this. The swelling late in the day is an indication of vein obstruction. Support hose might help you, also.

You ask if weight is a factor. Yes, and it could have been a cause in the first place. It is imperative that you lose about 30 of those 168 pounds.

This is a problem to be watched carefully, and you should return to your physician. The anticoagulant therapy may have to be reinstituted later.

With careful management this is a problem that can be lived with. But if you get careless, you could be in for some serious consequences.

Dear Dr. Thosteson: I have numerous lumps, big as marbles in places, above my knees and above and below my elbows. What causes them? What can be done about them?

Some of them seem sore to the touch. I've had them a long time, but have noticed a few new ones appear now and then.—Mrs. C. C. W.

These could be fatty tumors (lipomas) or nerve tumors (neurofibromata). The latter would be rather rare.

Since the nodules are tender, removal (biopsy) should be done to determine the exact nature of the lumps.

In lipomas or fibromata, the causes are not known and there is no specific treatment.

Dear Dr. Thosteson: My husband is 25 and in good health. The problem is his gum-chewing. He chews gum from the moment he gets up to the moment he goes to bed. He goes through a few packs a day, and he only takes a break for meals.

His dentist says his teeth are fine, but is all this gum good for a person? I feel the gum must be doing something to him. What do you think?—Mrs. M. P.

If he is healthy and if the dentist finds his teeth in good shape, I see no problem. It is a compulsion, like smoking. You might feel content that it is gum and not several packs of cigarettes. If it is sugarless gum, so much the better.

However, if it is the sugar in the gum that creates this urging to chew, then it might indicate a hypoglycemic condition. This could easily be determined by appropriate tests. It might be worth looking into at his next physical examination.

B.C. Sheriffs Find Prisoners Elusive

VANCOUVER (CP) — Sheriffs in British Columbia are finding that losing prisoners is an occupational hazard.

Since the sheriffs' service began relieving police of prisoner escort and process-serving duties in April, 1974, deputy sheriffs have been outmanoeuvred three times by a total of eight prisoners.

Geoff Mortimer, sheriff's service director, thinks that's not such a bad record, considing that his staff escorts an average of 9,000 persons a month.

"I think we've made mistakes and I'd be the first to admit it," said Mr. Mortimer, a retired RCMP officer who helped set up the expanded sheriff's service and chose the brown and tan uniforms that have earned his staff the nickname "Barrett's Brownies," (after Premier Dave Barrett)

"We've only had one escape in the past seven months, and so far (he rapped on the side of his wooden desk,) there haven't been any incidents in court, no uprisings."

He said one of the hazards of the job is that sheriffs must make so many decisions every time they escort a prisoner.

"They can make errors of judgment. Do you treat a person in custody humanely or do you degrade him in public in making sure that you've got him secured?

"You should treat him humanely, but the more humanely you treat him, and the fewer restraining devices you use, the more chances there are that he'll take advantage of you.

"And certainly you don't want to add to the policemen's work by having them hunt these guys down because you lost prisoners—after all, what we're supposed to be doing is helping the police."

One of the early problems with the 368-member service was that people were hired and trained before needed equipment was acquired.

The policy has been that under normal circumstances sheriffs and deputies will be unarmed, but arms will be issued for potentially dangerous situations. Last December, after violent escapes from unarmed deputies, the deputies protested the security arrangements.

"They felt they should be armed, especially when escorting dangerous prisoners from the penitentiary and when escorting a large number of prisoners," Mr. Mortimer said.

"I had to agree with them. The problem was, I didn't have guns to give them. We had ordered guns in May but couldn't get delivery of them. All we had were the 12 guns being used for training purposes.

"So, for a while, we issued arms borrowed from the police, and our own arrived the first of this year."

Mr. Mortimer said deputies now carry guns "only when they anticipate there's going to be trouble."

World Open Golf Tournament

At 'Best Ever' Nicklaus Wins

PINEHURST, N.C. (AP) — A satisfied Jack Nicklaus considered the question carefully. "This is the year of my best golf," said the man who, at age 35, has achieved a record unmatched in the game's history.

"This would have to rank with '72 among my best years," he said. "I won more tournaments in '72 (a total of seven), but from a standpoint of consistency, from the way I've played week in and week out, this is better.

"This is the year of my best golf, but not my best year of record."

Still, his record this season is all but overwhelming. His Sunday playoff victory over Billy Casper for the World Open title gave him five wins—including the Masters and PGA—for the season that isn't yet complete. No one else has won more than three.

The $40,000 first prize pushed his money winnings for the year to $291,000—a figure that has been surpassed only twice—and all but clinched a record seventh money-winning title.

His winning score of 280, four under par, left Nicklaus with a leading stroke average of 69.9 for the year.

Perhaps even more impressive is his record of near-misses. In 17 starts this year, including the British Open and the World Series, he has been second twice, third four times, fourth once and finished lower than ninth only twice.

And it was to that record, that list of near-misses, that he turned in the wake of his 59th career triumph.

"I darn near won almost every tournament I played since May," he said. "There were only three tournaments, Hawaii, Fort Worth and the World Series, when I really wasn't ready to play."

He finished out of the top 10 in Hawaii and the Tournament Players Championship at Fort Worth, and failed to win as a heavy favorite in the World Series.

This time he came from five strokes back of old friend Tom Weiskopf with a solid last-round 69—the best score of the tournament.

And then, after Casper's 70 tied him at the end of the regulation 72 holes, he rapped out a par on the first extra hole that was good enough against Billy's bogey.

Weiskopf, the third-round leader, dropped back into a tie with a front-side 39, lost and regained a share of the top spot, then needed only a par on the last hole to reach the playoff. But he made bogey and finished with a 75-281, one shot too many.

Pat Fitzsimons was the only other man in the strong, international field to break par for four rounds, shooting a 75-282.

Peterborough Over Burnaby

Four Straight Minto Cups

PETERBOROUGH, Ont. (CP) — The challengers from Burnaby, B.C., stood around most of the night waiting for the perfect shot at Peterborough goalie Fred Gardner while the defending champions walked off with their fourth straight Minto Cup junior lacrosse title.

Burnaby coach Dan Mattinson heaped most of the blame for Sunday's 18-8 loss on his players, saying: "Even when they had the shot, they didn't take it. They were waiting for the perfect shot and you're not going to get it on Gardner."

It was the fourth victory in a row for Peterborough Gray-Munros after they lost the opening game of the best-of-seven national championship series.

Peterborough captain Bob Wasson was named the most valuable player in the series and team-mate Paul Evans won the series scoring title with 11 goals and 19 assists.

Burnaby gave the champs a brief scare early in Sunday's game by taking a 3-0 lead in the first five minutes.

"The guys just got a little tight, something like the first game," said Peterborough coach Een Floyd. "They just wanted to win it so badly."

Peterborough rallied in the second half of the opening period and built a 7-5 lead before the break.

In the final period, Gardner, the goalie picked up for the playoffs from Mississauga, shut out the Burnaby shooters.

Moe Jodoin scored three times for the winners while Randy Bryan, Gord Duncan, Wasson, Mark Vitarelli and Dan Green added two each. Evans, Dan Dunn, Greg Lustic, Gary McIlmoyle and Ken Byers scored once each.

Burnaby got two goals each from Kevin Alexander and Mike McLenaghen and one each from Derek Dickson, Matt Aitken, Dan Perrault and Bob Cool.

Burnaby took 46 shots on goal while Peterborough fired 55. Rich Zecchel started in goal for Burnaby and was replaced by John Lewis midway in the second period.

Mattinson said he thought some of his players didn't believe they could win the series after Peterborough's 20-3 comeback in the second game. "You've got to believe in what you can do. I don't think some of the players did."

Oshawa Plays Under Protest

By THE CANADIAN PRESS

Hamilton Waxman Scrappers defeated Burlington Provisioners 2-1 Sunday to win their Ontario Fastball League semi-finals but it was uncertain whether Newmarket Ray's won their OFL semi-final series against Oshawa Tony's.

Newmarket defeated Oshawa 5-2 Sunday but the game, which was to decide the best-of-five series, was protested by Oshawa after the first pitch. The Oshawa team said Newmarket pitcher Larry Marshall had not appeared in 10 league games as required.

The league is to rule today on whether Newmarket won the game, which would make the team winner of the semi-finals 3-1.

Oshawa scored its two runs when Marshall pitched in the first inning. Bob Domik replaced him and struck out 14.

Newmarket scored three runs in the fifth inning to take the lead and got two runs in the sixth inning of the game played in Oshawa.

Newmarket won the third game of the series 3-2 at home Saturday.

In Burlington Sunday, the Scrappers got their runs in the first inning to take the lead in the game, which made Hamilton winner of the best-of-three series 2-1.

Phychiatrist Will Blast Colleagues

TORONTO (CP) — Dr. Andrew Malcolm, Toronto psychiatrist, says he will blast fellow clinical and scientific workers at the opening of a four-day conference today.

In an advance copy of his speech, Dr. Malcolm said he would call many of the delegates at the conference "gullible" and lacking in common sense.

He is opening speaker at the Canadian Foundation of Alcohol and Drug Dependencies conference in Quebec City.

He would charge they "failed wretchedly" to curb the explosion of drug use in the 1960s and that the presence of some of them in influential areas might help expand it again in the future, he said.

Dr. Malcolm said he believes society should become tougher on drinking drivers who, he said, kill 25,000 North Americans a year.

Egyptians Denounce Guerrilla Demands

CAIRO (AP) — Four Palestinian guerrillas who occupied the Egyptian embassy in Madrid and held the ambassador hostage were flown to Algiers early today, and Egyptian President Anwar Sadat angrily rejected their demand that he repudiate his new Sinai agreement with Israel.

Sadat said in a speech the Palestinians "thought they could terrorize us or compel us to a path that is not ours."

"We say no. I repeat, never will anything of this sort take place."

He charged the Soviet Union with manipulating Syrian and Palestinian opposition to the Sept. 4 agreement for Israeli withdrawal from Egyptian territories.

"It has been very clear the Soviet Union is behind all this criticism of the agreement as a defeat for the Arab people," Sadat declared. "I have warned (Palestinian leader) Yasser Arafat and (Syrian President) Hafez Assad not to listen."

Earlier, the Egyptian government told Arafat it held him and his Palestine Liberation Organization responsible for the safety of its representatives in Madrid. The PLO denied responsibility for the attack in the Spanish capital and denounced the "threatening tone" of the Cairo statement.

The guerrillas who seized control of the Madrid embassy Monday morning and took the ambassador and two of his aides hostage had threatened to blow up the building at midnight if Egypt did not tear up the agreement with Israel and recall its representatives negotiating in Geneva with the Israelis. But their occupation ended at 3 a.m. without violence.

Accompanied by the Algerian and Iraqi ambassadors to Spain, the guerrillas and their three Egyptian hostages left Madrid aboard Algerian President Houari Boumedienne's personal plane.

On their arrival in Algiers, Egyptian Ambassador Mahmoud Abdul Ghaffar, his press attache and his consul were freed. The other two diplomats, Algerian Ambassador Khaled Keladdi and Iraqi Ambassador Hassan al-Nakib, escorted the guerrillas into Algiers. There was no indication what the Algerian government had in store for them.

The guerrillas claimed to have obtained a written denunciation of the Sinai pact, signed by the Egyptian, Algerian, Iraqi, Kuwait and Libyan ambassadors in Madrid and a sixth whom the Palestinians would not identify but who was believed to be the Syrian ambassador.

The end of the embassy siege was negotiated by the Algerian, Iraqi and Kuwaiti ambassadors who communicated with the terrorists by exchanging messages under the locked embassy door. The Algerian and Iraqi ambassadors agreed to the Palestinians' demand that they accompany them and their hostages to Algiers.

Spanish riot police who surrounded the eight-storey building housing the Egyptian embassy made no attempt to intervene but held back a crowd of more than 1,000 spectators and escorted the guerrillas and hostages to the airport.

It was the first Arab terrorist attack in Madrid.

Peron's Cabinet Shifts Amid Key Resignations

BUENOS AIRES (AP) — Acting-president Italo Luder has begun a shakeup of President Isabel Peron's government, but the meaning in terms of government policies is not yet clear.

The government announced Monday night, less than 36 hours after Mrs. Peron flew to the hills of central Argentina for a month's rest, that Luder had accepted the resignations of Interior Minister Vicente Damasco, Defence Minister Jorge Garrido, Mrs. Peron's press secretary and her private secretary.

There was speculation that the other members of the cabinet also had submitted their resignations.

Luder, who is president of the Senate, named Foreign Minister Angel Robledo to replace Damasco and Tomas Vettero, an official in an earlier Peron government, to be defence minister.

The new foreign minister was not immediately named.

There was no indication, however, of whether Luder has any ideas for checking the country's runaway inflation and rampant terrorism, or for easing the split between the conservative and left wings of the Peronist movement.

The late President Juan Peron favored the conservatives after his return to power in 1973, and his widow continued this policy when she succeeded to the presidency on his death 14 months ago.

This resulted in an increase in political terrorism and the first serious political crisis of Mrs. Peron's regime two months ago, when the Peronist labor movement successful challenged a proposed austerity program and with army backing forced the president to get rid of its author, conservative Jose Lopez Rega, her chief adviser and closest confidant.

Damasco, the interior minister who resigned, was the cause of another confrontation between Mrs. Peron and the military a month ago which touched off rumors that a military coup was in the offing.

Damasco, an army colonel, remained on active duty after joining the cabinet, and the army commander in chief, Gen. Albert Numa Laplane, approved this arrangement. This angered other leaders of the armed forces who did not want the military saddled with any responsibility for the government's failing fortunes.

Their pressure resulted in the retirement of Damasco from active duty and the replacement of the army chief.

Mrs. Peron, reported suffering from extreme fatigue, has a 45-day leave of absence. A spokesman said last weekend that she would return to the presidency before Oct. 17. But there is speculation that she will never return to office.

Meanwhile, the peso was devalued for the sixth time in six months Monday, and officials reported four more persons—three young leftists and a policeman—killed by terrorists. This brought the death toll by rightest and leftest terrorists to 420 since Jan. 1.

The peso, which was 9.9 to the U.S. dollar last March, dropped to 45.75 to the dollar from 44.10.

Heavy voter turnout at advance polls in Quinte riding as well as other eastern Ontario ridings indicate a high interest in the current provincial election campaign and may result in a big vote election day Thursday, Quinte riding returning officer Gerry Joyce predicted today.

In this riding — encompassing Belleville, Trenton, Sidney Township and Frankford — voters turned out in record numbers, roughly two and a half times the vote in 1971.

In four Quinte polls, 1,721 people voted, up from the 669 in 1971.

In Prince Edward-Lennox riding, returning officer Mary Grimmon said today 712 voters turned out over the three days advance polls were open. In 1971, 307 voted.

Advance polls in Hastings-Peterborough drew about double the number of voters, returning officer Lloyd Price estimates.

In all, 713 voters cast ballots at the six advance polls throughout southern Ontario's biggest riding.

The results: Bancroft, 175; Apsley, 31; Madoc 215, Foxboro, 114; Havelock, 158; Buckhorn, 20.

There now are close to 31,000 eligible voters registered in the riding, Mr. Price reported.

Mr. Joyce speculated over reasons behind the heavy turnout, but said that ultimately, it was anybody's guess.

More advertising, both by the provincial government and individual candidates, encouraged voters to vote early, he said. Coupled with the abundance of new faces, this may have created high interest in the campaign.

Mr. Joyce said he suspects university students, instead of using proxies, have returned home to vote.

He indicated he felt an education program among poll clerks and returning officers have paid off. They have been encouraged to vote at advance polls, to reduce potential complications on election day.

Ottawa Men Remanded

KINGSTON, Ont. (CP) — Two Ottawa men charged in the abduction Friday of Teresa Krafchik, wife of a Kingston bank manager, were released at a bail hearing Monday to await trial Oct. 17. Brian R. Meikle, 32, and Peter Joly, 28, are charged with conspiring with each other and other unknown persons to kidnap Mrs. Krafchik, with intent to hold her for ransom against her will. She was abducted from her home Friday morning and released about six hours later in a wooded area two miles outside the city. Police said $150,000 in ransom was paid.

Army Shells Snipers

BEIRUT (AP) — Armored cars shelled rooftop snipers in Beirut suburbs today while Moslem militiamen seized control of Tripoli, Lebanon's second largest city.

There was firing throughout the night in five Beirut neighborhoods. Police said snipers killed seven persons including one policeman. Roads were closed by armed men, and there were clashes between Shiite Moslems and Maronite Christians.

Armored cars manned by police and other security forces shelled both sides in the sectarian conflict.

Interior Minister Camille Chamoun announced: "We have given security forces orders to silence any source of fire in Beirut, and they are doing this. If this does not end fighting, we shall call in the army to handle the situation."

Troops of Lebanon's 18,000-man army already are manning buffer zones between Christians and Moslems in northern Lebanon, but they have not entered Tripoli, mainly a Moslem city, in force because most of the army's commanders are Christians.

Tripoli was taken over by militiamen of the left-wing Moslem October 24 Movement. They raided police stations and security outposts and kidnapped 35 security men and nine soldiers, a move reported to be in reprisal for the death of 13 Moslems in a clash with army troops Sunday night.

Bourassa Warns Further Legislation

MONTREAL (CP) — Whatever distaste they have for Quebec's Official Language Act, English-speaking Quebecers must learn to live with it or face the possibility of even more radical legislation later, Premier Bourassa said Monday.

"I much prefer taking action before I have my back to the wall," the premier told a predominantly English-speaking audience from the west end of Montreal Island that packed the auditorium, doorway and lobby of a suburban high school.

The heated meeting saw Mr. Bourassa defending the principles of the Language Act, passed last year, which was designed to promote the use of French as the priority language in education, business, industry and public administration in Quebec.

Most of the questions, cheers, boos and heckling Monday dealt with provisions of the law applying to education.

Shortly after the start of the meeting, Montreal police explosives experts rushed to the scene after receiving a report that a bomb had been placed in the building. They found nothing and the meeting continued uninterrupted.

The Act stipulates that students whose mother tongue is neither English nor French must attend classes in French unless they can pass English proficiency tests.

But although a pass mark on the tests is no guarantee they will be admitted to English-language schools because a limit has been set on the size of the English school population by the Act.

The ceiling corresponds to the number of English-language students enrolled in the schools last year. Special authorization from the education minister is needed to lift the ceiling.

Turner Still Liberal

OTTAWA (CP) — Former finance minister John Turner has made it clear his political loyalty still lies with the Liberal party—at least in regard to Thursday's election in Ontario.

In a telegram today to Ontario Liberal Leader Robert Nixon, Mr. Turner urges the electorate of the province to vote Liberal.

"May I wish you the success you deserve on Thursday when I fully expect you to be the next premier of Ontario," Mr. Turner added.

Economic Accord Sought in Talks

From REUTER—AP

UNITED NATIONS (CP)— The minority of rich, industrialized countries and the Third World majority agreed today on a sweeping new economic program to narrow the gap between them.

After more than two weeks of relentless late-night negotiations, delegates hammered out a set of recommendations which the seventh special session of the UN General Assembly was expected to ratify.

A committee of the whole Assembly was to meet early today to endorse the document for submission to the plenary body.

But the two sides remained at odds on some issues. Diplomats said the United States, and possibly some other developed countries, will voice "positive reservations," saying that:

—The developed countries should do their best to boost official development aid to .07 per cent of their gross national product by 1980.

Zegouras Supports Crosswalks

BY COLIN BRUCE
Staff Reporter

Ald. George Zegouras, Monday, put in a strong plug for marked crosswalks in Belleville — a subject that has been a perennial problem for City Hall.

At a meeting of council's traffic committee, Ald Zegouras pointed to the repeated requests of city residents to have something done about crosswalks.

"It's inevitable," said Ald. Zegouras. "We're going to have to get them sooner or later."

On a motion he presented, city hall staff will include crosswalks in department budgets — bringing the problem to council's attention during 1976 budget discussions next winter.

At the urging of city manager Wilbur Purcell, the traffic and light committee designated crosswalks on Pinnacle St. at the market square and Corby Library as particular areas for council attention.

It was stated at the time of the last estimate, illuminated crosswalk signs cost approximately $2,000.

Let's get back to the basics...

Ontario had pretty good government in the days of Leslie Frost and John Robarts. We made a lot of progress and aimed for balanced budgets.

The Government of Premier William Davis, however, isn't like the Governments of Frost and Robarts. Under the Davis administration, we aren't making the progress we should be, as the Gov't. uses short term remedies to situations, instead of getting at the root causes of our problems.

We are also spending to the point where interest on our provincial debt alone is running around $2,000,000 a day.

As the province plunges deeper and deeper into the red, thinking Ontarians realize we just cannot afford to let Davis continue his 'buy now, pay later' policies.

These people, many of whom voted Conservative in the days of Frost and Robarts, are realizing that this is the time to draw a halt to Ontario's spending spree, and to get back to the good, sound basic and affordable policies and programs that built this province in the first place.

These people, right across Ontario, are going to vote for the Liberal team in this election, and in the new riding of Hastings-Peterborough, they are voting for Dave Hobson — the 39-year-old father of four who will give us full-time representation, and a strong youthful voice in the new people-come-first government at Queen's Park.

Join the swing to HOBSON.

Keeping Them Out

Arie Hoornweg, commissioner of works for Trenton, inspects the bars that have been added to stairwells in the municipal parking garage on Dundas Street. DRO Defends Location Of Riding Advance Polls

BY MARG HAYLOCK
Staff Reporter

PICTON — District returning officer for Prince Edward—Lennox riding - Mary Grimmon says there was no advance poll in Ameliasburg township this week because there was no request for this service.

Prince Edward County's only advance poll was held in Picton on Friday, Sept. 12, Saturday, Sept 13 and Monday, Sept. 15 in the Armory Mall.

Mrs. Grimmon observed an Intelligencer news story published Saturday stated that before voters go to the polls next time "Queen's Park can expect local demands for more convenience for residents finding it necessary to use advance polling privileges." Specific reference was made to Ameliasburg residents who, in some cases, were required to make a 50 mile round trip to vote in Picton.

The returning officer said if Ameliasburg Township council or a group of township residents had requested an advance poll it would have been provided.

She noted that one Ameliasburg resident did seek an advance poll two weeks after the first advance poll notices had been posted. The request, made at the proper time she said, could have been filled.

Mrs. Grimmon said advance polls always are set up in the "central hub" of the ridings.

In 1971 only 131 persons voted in an advance poll in Prince Edward.

Mrs. Grimmon explained these polls are expensive to establish and for this reason it is not feasible to set up a large number in an area where few electors use advance voting privileges.

She observed that Lennox County residents in the other half of the riding were provided with two advance polls this year but with good reason.

The returning officer noted that Napanee, where one advance poll was held is comparable in size with Picton and Amherstview, location of the second poll has a population of more than 5,000 persons. An advance poll was requested in Amherstview.

Mrs. Grimmon observed that even in the early days following announcement of an election an advance poll can be requested by a municipal council or community residents.

Couple May Challenge Assessment in Courts

By JERRY BROWN
Staff Reporter

TRENTON — Terming council's assessment demands as "outrageous,' a Toronto solicitor told council his clients would be forced to attack the levy in court if a satisfactory settlement with the municipality for charges on sewer and sidewalk improvements on Reid Street can not be found.

Rodney Smith, representing Mr. and Mrs. Wilson of Trenton, owners of a parcel of land on the western side of Reid Street, told council the levy is unfair because it is more than their neighbors were charged, higher than assessments for other similar local improvements done in Trenton and way out of line with charges throughout Ontario.

The Wilson, property owners on Reid Street, the western side of which is the eastern boundary of the Burttdale Heights subdivision, are contesting a $5,607 bill received from the municipality for sewer service and sidewalk improvements. The figure is calculated at $63 per frontage foot.

Reid Street improvements were completed during the Burttdale Heights construction and the town assumed responsibility for the work done on the eastern half of Reid Street and was billed at the $63 per foot rate by the Ontario Housing Corp. (OHC).

The town must recover the monies payed to the OHC and town officials said they thought council did the fairest thing when it decided on the current plan.

Mr. Smith told council he thought the matter is being handled in a confusing manner with council making apparently individual judgements on the different properties.

Of the 12 parcels involved, the older homes paid $1,200 to the town when they were constructed about 10 years ago for the eventual addition of services.

Mrs. Wilson told the council she knew of no such offer by the town when told the previous owners were offered an opportunity to pay into the fund or take their chances with future assessments.

Mr. Smith questioned whether proper procedure was followed because property owners were not informed of the action nor allowed to contest it in an open meeting.

Council ruled anyone able to recover the costs of services, through future selling of lots, will to pay the $63 rate for the improvements which doubled the value of their properties, officials said in an earlier statement.

There is about 12,000 feet of property frontage on the Reid Street the town is being billed for and it will only be able to recover a small portion of the charges through the original assessments, and the newer levies, officials said.

Council agreed to have a history of the contensious properties involved compiled and forwarded to Mr. Smith who would meet with town officials to attempt to resolve the issue.

Jeffrey Plays Down Cabinet Post Angle

TRENTON — George Hees, MP Prince Edward—Hastings, said Monday provincial Progressive Conservative candidate Robin Jeffrey is "sure" to receive a cabinet post in the Davis government if she is elected Sept. 18 to represent the Quinte riding.

He made the comment during his address to about 200 Trenton party workers attending a Tory rally in Trenton Community Gardens.

"I don't have a pipeline into Toronto and I haven't been talking to Mr. Davis ... but on ability alone she'll be brought into the cabinet," said Mrs. Hees.

During his speech he said Mrs. Jeffrey would receive "an important portfolio."

Mrs. Jeffrey dismissed the senior member's comment saying later, "George is very enthusiastic." (In a Belleville stopover earlier in the campaign, Premier Davis refused to speculate on the possibility of Mrs. Jeffrey being included in a Conservative cabinet if elected in Quinte.)

Whether or not the comment from Mr. Hees was aimed as a last minute enticement to the voters to back Mrs. Jeffrey, her cabinet potential has been the subject of a great deal of unofficial comment from local party hierarchy.

The prospect of Mrs. Jeffrey securing a cabinet portfolio seems even closer after the pre-election resignations of several Tory cabinet ministers including the withdrawal of retiring Quinte MPP and minister of correctional services Dr. R. T. Potter.

Mrs. Jeffrey said during an interview, "I've got a lot of learning to do before getting into the cabinet. There might be the possibility of a cabinet post."

Economic Council's 'Free Trade' Pitch Could Jeopardize Two Million Jobs

By VINCENT EGAN

Business and Consumer Affairs Analyst

Thomson News Service

Even at the best of times, anyone who tries to manufacture and distribute any product in a market as sparse as Canada faces a tough struggle.

Our manufacturers have always had plenty of competition from foreign industries that can manufacture for a much more concentrated market at home, and sell whatever is left over to Canadians.

But during a recession, when our foreign competitors face reduced demand in their home markets, they are tempted more strongly than ever to pick up the slack by exporting to Canada.

Those foreign manufacturers must be as gratified as Canadian manufacturers are chagrined by the recommendation of total free trade, which the Economic Council of Canada made recently to our federal government.

The roots of that report go back 15 years, although intensive work on it started only about three years ago.

It made its appearance just when Canada's merchandise trade had plunged into the biggest deficit in our history.

The Economic Council's report, Looking Outward, is characterized by idealism—which is always a welcome quality. The Council's report suggests that free trade would foster "a vital, dynamic and growing economy."

But idealism must be combined with reality—a quality that is not always apparent in the Council's philosophy.

To eliminate tariffs unilaterally, as the Council's report suggests, could jeopardize the jobs of the two million Canadians who are employed in manufacturing.

The prospects of transferring their job-skills to so-called primary occupations — farming mining, forestry and so on—would be slim, barring anything short of a Cambodia-style revolution.

The scales are badly out of balance as it is. Only 28 per cent of our exports consist of manufactured goods, vs. 58 per cent of our imports.

In dollar terms, we import $1,400 worth of goods per person each year—three times the U.S. two-thirds of those imports are fully manufactured.

Surely the way to maturity for Canada is not to fling our doors wide open to products of other countries that are so adept at keeping out Canadian manufactured goods.

Strengthening our export trade would hasten the day—which will have to come sooner or later—when we stop being a net importer of capital.

A healthier manufacturing industry would be able to displace some of our imports, and generate the capital that would develop new industries at home abroad—assist poorer and less mature countries overseas.

Instead of whittling down our immense foreign debt, however, we seem to be drifting to the point at which we will be borrowing capital abroad simply to pay the interest on earlier borrowings.

For that and other pressing reasons, the Economic Council's free-trade scheme deserves much closer and more critical attention than it has yet received from working Canadians and their elected representatives.

Shades of James Coyne

"Living beyond our means — to put it in terms everyone undrstands." That's Food Prices Review chairman Beryl Plumptre talking.

Shades of Bank of Canada governor James Coyne way back in the early sixties when John Diefenbaker and the Conservatives were in power.

Donald Fleming was minister of finance and Mr. Coyne, driven finally to resignation by government fiscal policy, was warning that Canadians "are living grandly beyond their means."

Things have escalated still further in the interim, under successive Liberal governments. Trudeau and his then finance man, Mitchell Sharp, were warning about the possibility of stern measures to combat inflation as far back as 1968, but of course nothing was done.

Mrs. Plumptre is concerned about government extravagance and increase in the money supply to combat it and maintain what essentially is an artificial level of prosperity.

Meanwhile, the rise in the consumer price index this year is approaching 14 per cent.

It is doubtful really if Canadians do understand the gravity of the phenomenon of living beyond their means. Living on credit is a way of life and there is a generation of Canadians who have known nothing else. Mrs. Plumptre and others may articulate the problem, but it doesn't go away. Nor is it likely to, certainly not at the behest of a public hooked on materialism and the means to pursue it.

Nostalgia and the Past

"Nostalgia." It is a word that relates to the misty affection people hold for things and places in the past, and it is heard often these days.

It means big money in the record business. It brings to the Prince Edward County fair a youthful looking Joe Brown of the CTV Family Brown program — back to the haunts of the early fifties when he toured with his three-member band.

It means taking a hard look at the need for preserving the tangible things of our past, as Robert Phillips of Heritage Canada urged upon a Brighton audience recently and with particular reference to the community's Proctor House. An imposing structure on a rise overlooking the village and Lake Ontario, this historic home will surely make a fine tourist attraction once it is opened to the public. As Phillips suggests though, these visible signs of the past could be lost by default unless steps are taken to preserve them.

Nostalgia is a hearkening back also to times when there was more formality, and to what once was known as gracious living. Young people were more disciplined, and their manners were better; at least that is the contemporary wisdom, although if we were transported back to that time things might not be all that much different in that respect.

Yet we have Belleville's Col. Angus Duffy telling a veterans' reunion he is concerned that "we're losing the respect we had for each other." True, a lot of old values are gone and other, sinister, forces are at work in society. Taken, at the simple human level, how much attention is there for instance to seemingly little things, such as writing "thank-you notes?"

Robin Miller, an Australian pilot and nurse with the Royal Flying Doctor Service says a favorite bachelor uncle used to insist on this as well as on other social and disciplinary measures, such as returning aboriginal artifacts to a cave sacred to the native people. This from a book, "Flying Nurse," available at the Corby library.

Yes, a lot of formality, discipline and respect seems to have disappeared from the social round. To the point that even our attractive women police, locally, have come to know what it is to be threatened, and even attacked. They know more of human nature than most of us, and for that reason, are realists.

Finally, nostalgia is the sort of travel embarked upon by two Quinte-area men both of whom made trips to their native Northern Ireland after an astonishing span of more than 60 years. It was a long road back. Wasn't it Thomas Wolfe who said, "you can never go back." Many do, of course, and it can be a mixed blessing. The "$1,000 cure," as it has been called.

A Look at Party Chiefs' Strategy

By DON O'HEARN

Queen's Park Bureau

Thomson News Service

TORONTO — As the election goes down to the wire it is beginning to appear that the NDP has conducted the best campaign.

From the evidence there is the impression that the party before the election adopted a well thought out game plan.

It would seem that this was probably to keep a low profile at the start, concentrating mainly on discrediting the Liberals, slowly building up to come on strong in the last quarter.

At least this is the way it has worked out.

In the early stages Stephen Lewis was the statesman who even was wont to give credit to the government.

The issues he brought up were sectional ones, pollution in the mines, disappearing farm land and housing. Along with this he got in subtle, but continuous and hurtful digs that the Liberals weren't worth thinking about.

Then abruptly he brought out his rent issue, took the ball and ran with it. Here was an issue with wide appeal—in urban Ontario at least nearly half the voters are renters.

He got his point well-publicized and forced the government into action twice; first in giving proposed rent review boards authority to go to the courts and then in giving them interim roll-back powers.

If the Conservatives had a game plan it would seem to have been also to keep a low profile and to emphasize steadiness.

Premier Davis has campaigned almost monotonously. He has rebutted opposition attacks, but his response has been firm rather than aggressive, and there has been an apparent effort to give the impression of "strength" which was selected as the key to the government's campaign.

In the final stages he has resorted to handing out goodies such as women's credit, occupational health institute, increased pensions etc. But there has been nothing too overt — at the start of the campaign he said he wouldn't be making "promises." He has been able to bestow some hand-outs without spoiling the strong image.

It seems doubtful that the Liberals had a game plan. And if they did they must have got it fouled up.

The struggle for Mexican independence began 165 years ago today—in 1810—after the aristocracy sided with the Spanish viceroy to repress democratic trends. The movement evolved into a racial conflict, under the banner of equal rights for Indians and halfbreeds. Its armies were crushed but conservatives decided to press for independence to secure their power after a more democratic regime was established in the motherland. Civil war, revolution and foreign interference continued until 1930.

1620—Pilgrim fathers sailed for Plymouth.

1919—American Legion incorporated by Congress.

1945—Japanese at Hong Kong surrendered to British.

1963—Canada sold Russia $500 million worth of wheat and flour.

Politics and Decisions

The Globe and Mail

When a government faces two opposition parties it can expect pincer-movement attacks on its policies—and a thoroughly confused electorate. The defender of government policy in this kind of triangular situation is sometimes damned if he does and damned if he doesn't.

This may be illustrated by several issues, but let's combine two — housing and local autonomy—for our example. The Conservatives in Ontario have been taken to task for interfering in matters considered by the opposition to be essentially local in character.

Liberal Leader Robert Nixon is pretty strong on this theme of returning decision-making to local authority, yet he is evidently quite willing to reverse a decision by Metro Council not to let the Toronto Island community continue occupying houses that stand in the way of developing the area's parkland potential. He would swoop in and save the islanders by the exercise of provincial veto. Where is his faith — his respect, even — for local autonomy?

On to Ottawa and another of those dilemmas, this one related to planned housing development near Ottawa. New Democratic Party Leader Stephen Lewis thought the Ontario Government had behaved rather weakly when a dispute—involving the Ottawa-Carleton regional government, the National Capital Commission, and the province — arose as to which of two areas should be developed. He raised the matter with Premier William Davis in Saturday's televised debate.

Evidently the provincial Government owned the land on which the Carlsbad Springs development might have proceeded — a circumstance which convinced Mr. Lewis this was the one to go ahead with, since prices might be held down. Instead, the regional authority has given priority to a plan called the South Rideau development where, according to Mr. Lewis, developers were waiting to make a fat profit.

Maybe he is right: maybe not. But again the Conservatives are being urged to take a tough line with the local authority.

What this game needs is a referee — which, of course, is what September 18 is all about.

The Editor,
The Intelligencer:

It is amazing to me how the Intelligencer can be so biased, and still remain in business.

The paper mentions Mrs. Jeffrey's accomplishments, which are, after all no more than Tory platitudes.

How about writing of Tory conflicts of interests this past season, and of blunders that Mrs. Jeffrey has made in public, such as, "I hope councillors will protect developers", or, "The streets cannot be repaired for some times as the road—beds aren't good at all", and, "The people in Hillcrest are squatters", etc. And Mrs. Jeffrey's words before the municipal election ot the Elizabeth Crescent People? "Condominiums will not be built in that area to spoil the aesthetics of that neighborhood!"

First it's posing in a bathtub and now she is goint to the dogs.

Why does she refuse public debating with other candidates?

CONCERNED

The Civil Service Issue

Editor,
The Intelligencer:

In regard to the statement Mr. Davis gave recently in the Intelligencer where he said the public servants must be neutral, non-partisan and impartial, I would like to know what he really meant.

He first says he has 70,000 competent, dedicated employees who provide a vital service but should not be given the right of full public participation in partisan politics. Then he regrets their misleading and false attacks and says his ultimate responsibility is not to them. In the next line he says "It is to the people of Ontario as well as to the interest of the civil service itself." The man just got through saying it was not to the Civil Service. He goes on to say that in 1897 there was an act stating they could not participate, then in 1963 The Public Service Act established the basis on which civil servants may, I say may, participate in election campaigns.

He says his government has made no changes or amendments to that legislation and proposes none. Further on in the article he says "We are opposed to tampering with a non-partisan civil service." I thought he just said they may participate according to the act of 1963.

Why won't some civil servant friends of mine put a sign on their lawn, bumper sticker on their car or a button on their lapel. If they do have that right why don't they voice it?

Because they value their jobs, That's why!

The Evolution of History and Governments of Our Time

By JOHN D. HARBRON

Foreign Affairs Analyst

Thomson News Service

The unitary or central government was one of the great benefits of the modern Western European nation states when they were fashioned out of the smaller regional kingdoms of the 15th and 16th centuries.

These are Britain, France, and Spain with Germany and Italy completing the process much later in the mid 18th century.

Strong and immensely powerful monarchs like England's Henry VIII and Elizabeth I, France's Francis I and Henri IV, Spain's Charles V and Philip II stripped their outlying regions, duchies and lesser kingdoms of independent governing power, incorporated them into a central state.

German unification was the result of major mid-19th century wars by a dominant Prussia against her small and large neighbors, Denmark, Austria and France.

And Italian unity at about the same time was also accomplished by conquest of the many historic Italian city states with their own republican and monarchical leaders by one who was considered the least among them, the ruler of Sardinia.

Today despite the economic and technological common strands of the European Economic Community and much talk about one Europe, all the great unitary states of that continent are experiencing separatist demands from the historically once autonomous regions.

The French who are the most determined to maintain what has been called "metropolitan France" are facing sharp resistance from the province of Breton in northwest France and the island of Corsica for autonomy in the first instance, a separate status away from France in the second

Add to this the well-publicized determination of the Basques for an independent state, their struggle under way principally in Spain where the four Basque provinces seek autonomy away from the harsh centralized regime of Gen. Francisco Franco.

The Basque terrorism is more serious and more persistent than terrorist activities anywhere else in other Western Europe where regions want autonomy, except in Northern Ireland which is a separate situation.

And though the Basque liberation movement is not as active in the French Basque regions as in Spain where strong oppression exists, the French Basque community has been used as refuge for Spanish Basque terrorists sought by the police.

West Germany by comparison, shows no visible sign of such regional demands, probably because within the German state are substantial regional administrative and legislative authorities, not unlike our own. The West German "lander" or provincial legislatures bear some comparison with our provincial legislatures.

Presently the most militant French separatists are in Corsica and their claim of indifference to island economic problems and feelings for self-government by Paris have been justified.

In Britain, Scottish separatism is a fact-of-life except in the passive way so far maintained everywhere in the United Kingdom except in Ireland. Scottish nationalists hold a small brace of seats in the Westminster Parliament in London.

And when the Prince of Wales was installed as such at historic Carnarvon Castle and did so in the Welsh language, there was more than centuries-old panoply in the event.

Buckingham Palace too has been made aware of rising Welsh nationalist feelings within the British unitary system.

Socred Candidate Says Society Moving to Right

If politician Nancy Arnold has been seen kissing a baby it's no trite electioneering gesture.

The 27—year—old Social Credit candidate leaves a family of five behind when she goes campaigning in Hastings—Peterborough.

This past weekend she had to leave them quite a distance away when they elected to stay home——in Wasaga Beach on Georgian Bay.

Getting around the biggest riding in southern Ontario is a challenge for all its political candidates. But, living where she does, Mrs. Arnold has already clocked many a mile before she even arrives in the constituency.

And mention of her children is not just cute talk. Its a seriously, prime motivation for the young, freelance journalists election bid.

She explains it this way: Her children are her priority as a mother and that's "more or less why I'm involved in politics——to make Ontario a better place to grow up in."

But Hastings—Peterborough presents a big challenge in more ways than one.

It's been years since a Social Credit candidate has attempted a bid on a provincial election in the area. (In fact, Mrs. Arnold is only one of 10 Scoreds running in Ontario's Sept. 18 election) And it's been staunchly Conservative, with Liberals as the main challenger. Inevitably the question arises of a what a girl like her is doing in a riding like this?

Mrs. Arnold indicates several reasons. Among them: (1) She was requested by political friends to do so. (2) Her party now has a candidate in her home area who may have more personal appeal with a certain section of voters.

But there's also the fact Mrs. Arnold and her husband, Bruce,——a newspaper reporter working in Oshawa——are deeply involved in the Ontario Social Credit League formed two years ago. Elections also mean an opportunity to get a message across.

"Realistically, I can't see the Social Credit forming a government with only 10 candidates running," she says.

"But I think we can make an impact on the public, on the constituents...by letting them know what we stand for and what we are all about."

Ontario needs Social Credit philosophy now, says Mrs. Arnold. In fact much of the electorate subconsciously may be Social Crediers.

"I think the people are looking to a more conservative idea than what we've had in the past government."

Social Credit is more conservative "than the Conservatives can be now. They've gone more to the left with every year. With every passing year you find more free giveaway programs they hope are vote catchers."

She describes the major parties — Conservative, Liberal and New Democratic — as "pink, pinker and pinkest," in order of succession.

Society is turning more to the right, she senses,——and that's where they'll find Social Credit.

"Many people act and think Social Credit all the time — and don't realize what they're expounding is Social Credit."

Among major ideals Socreds espouse are "total" free enterprise and individual rights.

The issues that apply provincially — from pollution to inflation — are also local concerns, she says.

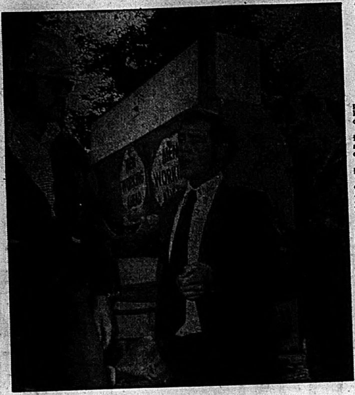
But, there has been an "awful lot of neglect" in the district that now makes up Hastings—Peterborough.

"In campaigning, I have a list of things that people have told me is wrong with this area — and that list is as long as your arm.

Mostly, she's been campaigning on weekends, knocking on doors, attending neighborhood meetings. Like her opponents she too sees the personal approach as the best campaigning tactic in such a riding.

To the Right

Nancy Arnold, fielded by Social Credit League in Hasting Peterborough, says her party is the only one that stands to the right in Ontario politics. Her campaign in a big riding means more travel than other candidates. She lives in Wasaga Beach.



The Rival Bid

The major rival bid to Conservative incumbency in Hastings — Peterborough comes from Liberal Dave Hobson (centre). On campaign trail he talks with Ontario Hydro workers by country roadside.

The Campaigners

Personal Approach Only Way to Win Says Hobson

One day Dave Hobson stopped to talk to a neighbor about local road conditions in Chandos Township. —

The neighbor told him that, instead of complaining, he should run for township council.

That, says Mr. Hobson is how he got into politics.

Now, the 39-year-old Bancroft high school teacher from Apsley in Chandos, is the Liberal candidate in Hastings-Peterborough.

The current provincial election campaign is not his first attempt to persuade voters in the area they should turn Liberal.

In 1971, he ran in Peterborough riding and finished third. The reason, he claims, is that the Progressive Conservatives mounted a "monumental" campaign to successfully defeat Walter Pitman, then New Democratic Party deputy leader.

But, says Mr. Hobson, the "significant thing" was that he gained more votes than Liberals had previously taken in the riding.

Redistribution has now made him a resident of Hastings-Peterborough. And this election Mr. Hobson is hoping to persuade enough voters to turn Liberal to make him a winner.

The task is specifically challenging in Hastings — the bulk of the big, new riding — with its long record of Conservative loyalty.

There, Mr. Hobson estimates he requires a 15-per-cent switch in 1971 votes. In the Peterborough townships the turnover needed is about five per cent.

"The only real fight is getting people to think about their vote," he says. "They're in the habit of voting Conservative. But if they just stop and think they'll see we can't afford another Davis government."

His challenge plunged off to a rousing start at his party's Liberal nomination convention in Marmora. Liberal meetings in the past have been lacklustre affairs for years in the Hastings area. But the spirited crowd had its organizers talking hopefully about the days of Mitch Hepburn, the colorful controversial leader who last swept Ontario for the Liberals in the 1930s.

Today Mr. Hobson says his organization still is "enthusiastic. It's confident."

He claims the number of those volunteering for his campaign show "the people are fed up" with the Conservative administration of Ontario.

However, he faces on challenge in common with his Conservative, Social Credit and NDP opponents — projecting his message into every corner of a rural riding that now is the largest in southern Ontario.

For his party's candidacy and now the election, he's put 27,000 miles on the new car he bought in January.

Such travel is necessary since the best campaigning technique in such a riding is the personal approach — talking individually to as many voters as possible, says Mr. Hobson. He says he allots six to eight hours a day for door-knocking.

"You have to talk to the voters and ask their commitment. — And they're glad to have somebody explain the issues to them."

Those issues, as he sees them, include the expense and power of centralized provincial government to the detriment of local communities and municipalities.

Locally, it's "mandatory" that new industry "be deflected" away from the Toronto region to provide jobs and futures for residents of areas like Hastings-Peterborough.

In rural areas "something has to be done" about agriculture policies "so all the farmers don't disappear."

Mr. Hobson identifies himself with agriculture problems. He now raises beef cattle on the Apsley farm to which his family first moved from Toronto in the early 1960s.

The Campaigners

Local Contact Key to Rollins' Success

Clarke Rollins says he's the only campaigner in Hastings-Peterborough who is native to the area.

It may not seem a relevant issue in this provincial election where once again he stands among defenders of the Conservative keep in eastern Ontario.

But it cannot be dismissed. Emphasis in the local connection has been a key working characteristic of the Rollins political career.

It's been a career concentrated on constituency contact. And he's made sure his political organization is similarly stamped — sensitive to local political trends, demands and opportunity.

Not that he has left anyone else too long to mind the political store. No matter what the demands of Queen's Park, he rarely seems to use stand-ins at local events.

Since his first election as MPP in 1959 he has appeared to handily miss any event of significance — public or personal — to some part of his Hastings bailiwick.

It's a pervasiveness that is also good politics — and the main problem he poses for political opponents.

"You start working on the next campaign the day after your election," he says.

His understanding of politics came early.

His father was a county warden; so was an uncle; another uncle was once county clerk.

"So no matter where I was taken to visit relatives I heard municipal politics," he says.

He, himself later became reeve of his native Wollaston Township, serving eight years on county council from the late 1940s. In 1950 he was named warden.

And: "I don't believe I've missed two county council sessions in the 16 years I've been a member in the legislature," he says.

The statement also is revealing.

Inevitably, in an area long on Tory loyalty, its local governments must show Conservative influences. They do. And thus is provided one more link in the chain that has kept intact the Rollins connection with the grassroots.

His campaign manager in this election is Ken Smith, reeve of Elzivir-Grimsthorpe Townships and former county warden.

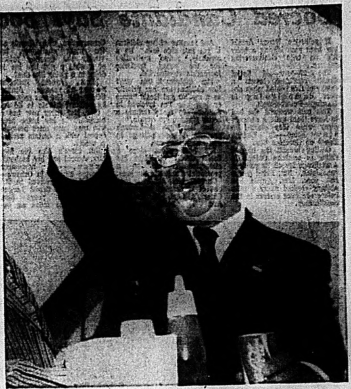
But local government is also a key to getting things done. Mr. Rollins sees himself as the contact with provincial government.

"Assisting each municipality with its problem — that's the system I believe in. That's the way it's been — and that's the way it'll be, he says.

When the province started introducing regional government, he spoke out against it for Hastings — and has been repeatedly voicing the stance.

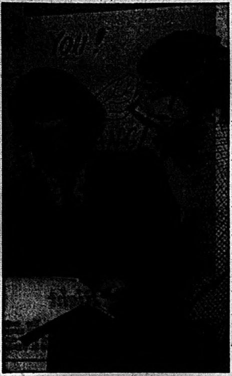
The local emphasis even holds tight at campaign time. The burly Conservative and his assistants run their own show — apparently without much headquarters' interference.

He'll admit to not having a spectacular record for oratory in the legislature. But, he says, he works in the formative stages of policy and issues—in committee and caucus. This is the "more effective way" be believes, since once recommendations go to the legislature their approval often is formality.



The Campaign Trail

Clarke Rollins, Conservative candidate in Hastings - Peterborough had early grounding in local politics. Coe Hill native, his family was involved with Hastings County politics which gave him his start before he first became MPP in 1959.



The Big Riding

New Democratic Party candidate in Hastings - Peterborough Bob Thompson (left) discusses day's itinerary with campaign manager Bill Kells, at Deseronto campaign headquarters. The town is at the extreme southeast end of riding that sprawls northwest of Peterborough and is largest constituency in southern Ontario.

The Campaigners

Thompson Sees No Conflict With Church and Politics

DESERONTO — Recently says United Church pastor Bob Thompson, a friend from a former congregation heard by radio broadcast there was to be a street dance in Kingston with New Democratic Party leader Stephen Lewis.

The event was to boost a local candidate named Thompson.

So, the friends holiday in Barry's Bay, drove to Kingston and joined the dance — with a sign calling for votes for Bob.

It was only then be discovered the dance was for Lars Thompson, NDP Kingston candidate.

Not everyone Bob Thompson calls on these days may be as enthusiastic in his cause, as NDP candidate in Hastings — Peterborough. Nonetheless he says he is far from daunted with his reception in what has been accepted as Conservative country.

He says he senses change.

"Ten years ago if an NDPer went to a home in this riding his brochures would often have been ripped up.

"It's not that way now. There is this openness. There is this undecided vote. People are looking at the issues, weighing the issues more than ever before."

One senior citizen told me 'we're not going to be bought off by Kentucky fried chicken anymore."

For a candidate who says his campaign budget is only about $1,000 such impressions are unavoidably encouraging — even though his party hit bottom of the list in the constituency in the 1971 election.

Other things that leave him unabashed:

— His age. At 24 he's the youngest candidate in the Hastings — Peterborough race.

As far as 1971 goes Mr. Thompson says the party then ran a relative outsider. It didn't start a real political organization until after the election. Then there's the addition of the Peterborough townships. They've been spliced by a riding once held by Walter Pitman, an NDP star politician. Pitman lost the Peterborough riding last time by about 500 votes, says Mr. Thompson:

As for his personal background:

He's a Belleville native, moved early in life with the family to Cornwall, later Toronto. His studies for the ministry have included a Saskatchewan ministry (at 19), Nova Scotia.

He came to Deseronto two years ago when he transferred theological studies to Queen's University. He and his wife, Bev, await ordination next year by the church's Bay of Quinte Conference.

—Mr. Thompson sees no confusion between being a cleric and a politician. His interest in politics first stirred as an arts student at Ryerson Polytechnical Institute when he observed leadership conventions of the three Ontario legislature parties.

He came down on the side of the NDP.

His special interest became the relationship between political movements and theology.

"A minister who gets out and meets his people and is aware of their needs — that's my view of the pastor," he says.

His campaign style?

The personal approach. Public meetings have been traded for door-knocking.

And across the electoral sprawl of Hastings — Peterborough he already had driven 12,000 miles the week before election.

But Deseronto, he says, includes issues demonstrating what's wrong with provincial government. It:

(1) Has lost without replacement major industry — Ideal Venders. "And this area should be attractive to industry since it's on the main Toronto — Montreal corridor. Why hasn't there been more industry in the smaller communities — Deseronto, Madoc Marmora, feeding into the (road) grid system we have." Young people have to move to major centres for jobs — but where housing is prohibitive.

(2) Streets were "ripped up" three years ago for sewer. Now, when costs are higher they're been torn up again for a water system. "What kind of planning is that?"

There is a man, Bob Nixon, and a party, the Ontario Liberals that know what has to be done in Ontario.

Bob Nixon and the Ontario Liberals know that the problems in Ontario cannot continue to be treated by throwing money at them. The costs to you as Ontario taxpayers have escalated to such a degree that you pay nearly two million dollars a day in interest on the 4 billion dollar Davis debt.

Ontario cannot afford to keep paying for yesterday's mistakes. It is time for real action. Time for positive action. Time for a government that has respect for the Province and its taxpayer's dollars.

Bob Nixon and the Ontario Liberals can provide that government for you. They're a fresh team that would face the issues with real and honest solutions. In the following paragraphs we we have centred on just a few of the many, many problems facing the citizens of Ontario as you head to the polls this Thursday. The Liberals have a well-developed plan in their "Priorities" booklet to solve these problems. And the Ontario Liberals have new ideas and new people who are well-prepared to be the government you and Ontario need at this time.

The cost of Government.

The Davis government has shown us one basic style of dealing with Ontario's problems: throw the taxpayers' dollars at them. Spending in Ontario has been going on at a horrendous pace. The Davis debt has increased to a record 4 billion dollars plus. That means you are paying interest at the rate of nearly two million dollars a day.

Just in the last few days of this election campaign you've seen more of the Davis style. Additional expenditures are awarded or promised in areas where he is in obvious trouble. More costly promises in an attempt to cling to power that will continue to cost you more of your income.

You work too hard for your dollars, and thus for the taxes you pay, to have them thrown away by another Davis government. You know as we do, you just can't afford another Davis government.

Bob Nixon and the Ontario Liberals are pledged to move toward a balanced budget. We will treat the taxpayer's dollar with respect. We will reorganize and streamline the cabinet itself. We will cut hundreds of thousands of dollars out of the cost of the Premier's Office alone. We will abolish costly super ministries. We will cut down on government advertising; extra salaries to MPP's with positions on government boards and commissions; eliminate the costly experiments such as Krauss-Maffei and costly indecision such as Spadina. Only a new government can cut costs to restore Ontario's financial stability.

Regional Government.

If there's one thing Ontario doesn't need it's more government. Yet spreading over the communities of the Province is the Davis-McKeough concept called Regional Government. It's an idea that is not acceptable to the people of Ontario but is swallowing up more of your tax dollars. Regional government has increased the strangling red tape you have to confront. Individual communities have lost their identities by the imposition of regional governments.

Bob Nixon and the Ontario Liberals understand the concerns and problems created by regional government. We have programs to restore to communities the power to make decisions that will affect their future. Queen's Park will take its proper place in the governing of the Province and work with local communities rather than dictate to them. More levels of government are simply not necessary. They are only more reasons why you just can't afford another Davis government.

Education.

Ontario's educational system costs the citizens billions per year. At one time, we were all proud of our schools and universities. Now under the Davis influence we've reached the point where many students are taking remedial reading courses as they attempt to gain entrance to university. The basic skills are not being emphasized as they should be. Standards of measuring achievement have been virtually eliminated. Frustrated parents cannot find out what their children are doing. It isn't the teachers' fault. It's the Davis system imposed from Queen's Park.

Bob Nixon and the Ontario Liberals will restore quality to this confused system. We will renew the opportunity for excellence. We will work toward rebuilding morale, trust and cooperation among the teachers of this Province. We will re-establish a core curriculum; reinstitute standards to measure a student's performance; and restore the community role which has been lost in local education. We will do these things because we know as you do, you and Ontario's children just cannot afford another Davis government.

Housing.

Housing starts in Ontario are dangerously low. The costs of buying and renting are soaring out of the reach of the ordinary citizen. And the Davis government applies band-aids to serious problems. Just last week, the Davis government in the wake of severe pressure from the opposition parties, the press and the public, could only come up with a half-baked proposal that won't solve rental problems. Over a year ago Margaret Campbell of the Ontario Liberals presented to the Legislature a rent review board bill with real teeth that has the power to roll back or freeze rents. How long does it take the Davis government to deal with a problem? And how much has that cost you already? Houses mean more than a place to live. They represent jobs and development. Ontario must re-establish itself as the leader in housing and as the province where citizens can find a place to live at a price they can afford.

Bob Nixon and the Ontario Liberals have a program that will provide new housing at affordable prices to meet our needs. We will establish rent review boards that can subpoena witnesses and documents; require landlords to justify increases; and freeze or reduce rents where appropriate. We will concentrate on servicing land in cooperation with municipalities so that houses can be built quickly; we will cut the government red tape; we will support municipal initiatives to provide a greater variety of housing geared to income and to meet the needs of senior citizens; we will legislate a limit for the non-Canadian ownership or control of land. We will do these things because we know as you do, you just can't afford another Davis government.

You just can't afford another Davis government. On September 18, Vote Liberal

Northern Ontario.

Real potential for all Ontario lies in the North. Yet the Davis government continues to treat it as some outpost run from Toronto thrown occasional goodies but not really considered an important part of the Big Blue Machine. The North has been shunted aside by the Davis government.

The Ontario Liberals know the North doesn't stop at Barrie. We will get a fair deal for Northerners. We will encourage new industry in the North. We will improve northern roads and reduce the high cost of living. We will strengthen the Northern Ontario Development Corporation to include on its board all elected members from the north, regardless of party, to make recommendations for future northern growth and expenditure. We will relocate the Ministry of Natural Resources in the North. We will reduce the higher cost of living in the North by cutting the provincial gasoline tax by 5¢ a gallon; we will initiate a selective income tax credit to reduce the difference between the cost of living in the North and in the South; and we will do this because we know, as do the people of Northern Ontario, you just can't afford another Davis government.

These are just some of the main issues you are faced with as a citizen in this Province. There are more. Agriculture, multiculturalism, social policy, the waste of prime agricultural lands, planning, consumerism, women's rights, energy, labor, the environment and on and on.

Each of these must be treated with more than money. They must be faced with intelligence, competence, strength and respect. That's the position of Bob Nixon and the Ontario Liberals. A well-organized party with new ideas and new people that has respect for this Province and its taxpayers' dollars. A party that is ready now to provide Ontario with the kind of government needed for these difficult times in Ontario.

Support your local candidates.

Daina Honeyman picks Japanese lanterns in the garden behind her home. She picks the stems at various stages, so that she has lanterns of different colors, ranging from green to bright orange for use in autumnal arrangements. In the foreground are some of the many zinnias and asters that make her flower garden colorful at this time of year.

An arrangement of dried flowers, in tones of yellows and browns makes a dining-room table centrepiece in the Honeyman household. The daisies, similar to the black-eyes susan flower, are dried with their stems through small holes in a cardboard box in order to keep the petals flat.

This formal arrangement features flowers in red, pink and white shades, and brightens a corner of a room all winter long. Because some of these dried flowers are fragile, Mrs. Honeyman doesn't disturb the bouquets once they're made.

In a corner of her garage, Daina Honeyman keeps all the dried and drying supplies she uses for her bouquets. Grown or gathered by her, these flowers, seeds, berries and weeds are all accessible or easy-to-grow for Quinte area flower lovers, and beautiful in their own right without being dyed or painted.

Drying Flowers and Weeds: A Beautiful, Useful Hobby

By ISABEL HUGGAN

As fall approaches and garden flowers fade, most homes lose the bouquets that have brightened rooms all summer. But in the Honeyman's house on Crestview Avenue, there'll be arrangements of roses and daisies all winter long.

During the past few months, Daina Honeyman has been drying flowers. And she has enough on hand now to make bouquets every week until the spring.

Mrs. Honeyman, who has pursued this hobby for several years, says that she uses the "lazy drying" method for most things. But for delicate flowers, like roses, she uses silica gel, a sand-like substance that can be purchased at drugstores.

"It's expensive, but since you can dry it in the oven and use it over and over, it's well worth it," she says.

She uses three pounds of the silica in a medium-sized metal cookie tin to dry five or six rose buds at a time. After placing them carefully in the sand, she puts the lid on tightly, and in a matter of a few days, can remove the dried roses for use in bouquets.

Amazingly, the roses retain both their color and scent, and will stay fresh-looking for several months.

"Queen Elizabeth and Pinnochio are both good roses to dry," says Mrs. Honeyman, who has experimented with many varieties. "Either pink or yellow ones do well, but red ones turn brownish and are less successful."

Another technique that she uses with certain plants, such as alpine currant, bergema and perriwinkle, is a three-week-long process during which the stems are placed in a solution of one-third cup water and one-third cup glycerin. At the end of this time, the leaves are still soft and pliable, and are perfectly preserved so that they'll last for years.

"This doesn't work for all plants," Mrs. Honeyman is careful to point out. "But I've learned by trial and error, and by reading books. The Corby Library really has a marvellous selection of books that are full of good ideas about drying flowers."

Having collected information and know-how about flower-drying, Mrs. Honeyman is going to share her experience with the Belleville Garden Club at their October 21 meeting. She is enthusiastic about her hobby and confident that anybody with a little time and interest can do the same as she has.

"You can grow many plants in your garden that dry well," says Mrs. Honeyman. "I grow straw flowers, Japanese lanterns and silver dollars for use in autumn bouquets with oriental grasses and dried weeds. I've also found that Statice, Celosia and Liatris dry beautifully and of course Irish bells are extremely good, for they'll dry either green or beige depending on when you pick them.'

She hangs these plants in her garage to dry, along with grains, pine cones, grasses and thistles, and the distinctive seed pods of delphinium, lupin, daffodil, iris and day lily plants. There are dried mountain ash berries oriental poppy pods and bull-rushes of varying sizes, all gathered on expeditions through the countryside as well as through her garden.

'What I love about this hobby is that it doesn't cost a thing, except if you buy the silica or glycerin," says Mrs. Honeyman. "And it's something you can do yourself. You can be as creative as you like, and change the bouquets endlessly."

Archdeacon and Mrs. McConnell greeted guests Saturday afternoon at a reception held in their honor at the Officers' Mess in Belleville Armory. Archdeacon McConnell is the former rector of St. Thomas' Church. They were married Sept. 12, 1925 in Toronto at St. Michael's And All Angels Church, Toronto. The couple left Monday to Vancouver for a cruise on the inland passage.

JUNE

June looks like a doll with her lovely blonde hair and her big hazel eyes. She is about the size of a doll too because she is tiny for 2½ and in many ways she needs to be treated like a doll because she has to be carried most of the time.

June has cerebral palsy (lack of muscle control). Her general health is good but her mobility is hampered by her condition. She crawls and gets around in a walker. She cannot walk, though she will take a few steps if her hands are held securely. Unable to sit unsupported, June does sit in a high chair for meals. She eats well but so far has made no effort to feed herself.

She obviously understands whatever is said to her, yet she isn't talking much. Despite few words, she makes lots of noise and has a delightful laugh as well as a most engaging smile.

Doctors are not prepared to forecast whether June will walk or not, but her foster mother is optimistic. She feels her small charge is getting stronger all the time through therapy designed to stretch and strengthen her muscles.

June doesn't know she has a problem. She is cheerful and happy. She loves company and cuddling. With those bright eyes she is alert to everything going on around her. She loves to be with other children and is considered at least average in intelligence.

June needs a family where she will be the youngest, where she will get much love, where the parents will recognize her handicap and continue her therapy while encouraging her to become as independent as possible.

For such a family June will be a darling daughter.

To inquire about adopting June, please write to—Today's Child. Ministry of Community and Social Services, Box 888, Station K, Toronto M4P 2H2. In your letter please tell something of your present family and your way of life.

on polls taken by 20 high school students, of the four categories we have listed:

PRUDE	0-22
NORMAL	23-42
IN TROUBLE	43-64
TOTALLY FREAKED	65-123

Dear Clevelanders: I have never been crazy about the "Know Thyself Sex Tests" but apparently my teen-age readers attach a great deal of importance to them.

This is the fourth one I've printed—none composed by me. Scarcely a week has passed (since 1971 when the first one appeared) that I haven't had at least three tests submitted.

My personal opinion is that you Clevelanders are far too lenient. I'd rate anything above 28 "In Trouble." Furthermore, your questions mix behavior that is a normal part of growing up with some really far-out stuff—such as hard drugs. I don't dig it.

Dear Ann: I have a friend who claims he gets mysterious phone calls night and day. We can't be seen in public together because he insists he is being followed by detectives. He speaks in a whisper when we first.
are alone because he's afraid the room is bugged — even my own apartment. He refuses to eat anything unless I taste it first.

I think this dear man needs to see a psychiatrist even though he insists he's perfectly sane. He says I'm "naive" and insists I'm the one who needs help.

What can I do? — Worried in Vancouver.

Dear Worried: You can stop seeing him — and the sooner the better. Frist, he's married. Second, he has many classic symptoms of mental illness. Third, his refusal to seek help and his projection of his illness on to you bode ill for the future.

Dear Ann Landers: My problem is a delicate one and I'm completely at a loss as to how to solve it.

I'm an 18 year old girl who has trouble with my grandfather. He paws me. As a child, I hugged and kissed him and sat on his lap. Even now, I'm affectionate but I feel there's a limit. I don't mind his arm around me if he would just keep it off my behind. If he wants to hold my hand, fine, but I get mad when he "accidentally brushes it against my breast.

How do I tell him to cool it without coming right out and speaking my mind? I can't let this continue, even if he IS harmless. I'm beginning to dread every visit. — Nix On The Grand Paw

Dear Nix: I hesitate to suggest that Gramps is a dirty old man, but you wouldn't have written had the thought not crossed your mind.

With a big smile, tell Gramps, 'I'm a big girl now.

No more fondling me like I was four." If you should feel a hand in the wrong place after your little speech, lift it off and say, "remember what I said"—and DON'T smile when you say it.

Brother of Eugene Whelan Is NDP Resources Minister

REGINA (CP) — Saskatchewan may only account for a fifth of Canada's oil production and a twentieth of the Canadian population, but the province's new minister of mineral resources says it has a crucial role to play in the energy situation.

"As this energy crisis develops, if it does develop, the techniques and the new ideas that will be applied to a situation that might become desperate, those techniques will probably come from a province like Saskatchewan, and probably this province," said the minister, Ed Whelan.

Quick to point out that Saskatchewan has not found the answers yet, the minister still contends that the province's tradition of experiment and innovation in social programs can and should be applied to the energy question.

Like his younger brother Eugene, federal Liberal minister of agriculture, the 56-year-old New Democrat frequently uses homespun anecdotes to make a point as he describes the principles that should apply to efforts to conserve existing sources of energy and develop new ones.

Referring to his July appointment to the provincial cabinet, Mr. Whelan recalled that "when I first received the appointment, a man I've known for a long time, with a sort of grass-roots farm philosophy, said to me Saskatchewan's in very much the same position as a farmer who owns a cow.

"You can hire someone to milk the cow, but the farmer who owns the cow should see that the milk is distributed properly, should make the decision as to who gets the cream, who gets the skim milk."

He made it clear that the owners of the cow, in the case of oil, natural gas, uranium and other energy sources, are the people of Saskatchewan, through their provincial government.

Among controversial government moves to date have been imposition of steep oil and gas royalties, creation of a Crown corporation—Saskoil—to explore and develop oilfields, and requirements that private mineral developers offer the provincial government a half share in any new projects.

"We want to involve the private sector," he said, "but the good of the province and the good of the country come as first priority.

"If you read the reports that are coming from the United States where they are talking about whether or not they can keep warm this winter, you realize how serious it might become and how close we are in some parts of this country to an energy shortage.

"Then it becomes absolutely essential that we develop, by legislation or by investment or by techniques or by our own efforts, exploration for energy sources—natural gas, oil, electricity, all the energy sources."

If, by one means or another, revenue from existing energy resources is channelled into developing new resources, he said, Saskatchewan is a logical place to invest that revenue.

"Saskatchewan is one of the mineral storehouses in North America, if not the world," Mr. Whelan asserted, adding that the northern half of the province "could become one of the major sources for uranium in the world.'

He also sees a great potential for increased recovery of the province's heavy oil, saying a tremendous volume of oil would be made available if the recovery rate for oil fields could be boosted to 30 per cent from the current four-to-10 per cent.

Federal revenues from the oil export tax should be used for such projects, he suggested.

He conceded that the expensive Alberta oil sands project is drawing off available money, "but looking at it from the federal government's point of view, they may be wise to hesitate before putting all their eggs in one basket."

"Certainly it seems logical and practical to suggest to them that they should put a sizeable amount of money into new techniques for getting heavy oil out of the ground."

The province, however, still is caught in a deadlock with Ottawa over its view that the public, particularly in the form of provincial governments, should take a bigger bite of oil profits and use the money for exploration.

"It's hardly logical to the average person on the street to say to them we're short of energy and then say we're going to give money to the producers, to the people who develop the oilfields, for exploration and they say 'No, we want to use the money as we see fit.' "

That approach, he says, produces distorted priorities in the form of oil profits going into such things as downtown Montreal real estate development.

Asked whether he sees any hope for federal-provincial agreement on energy policy within a year, he replied:

"There's an old saying that people in politics have to be optimists.

"If I said that there's no hope, that would be a give-up attitude and I don't think people in leadership positions should develop that kind of thinking. Always there's hope."

Particularly, he contends, when it is the Saskatchewan people who are developing a new approach to the energy question:

"They're not demonstrative and they're not boastful, but they have won all sorts of issues, the organization of the wheat pool and wheat marketing ... the battle to get medicare ... it was a demonstration of courage and leadership that now all of North America recognizes."

Appalled At Decision

TORONTO (CP) — Saying: "It shows the rather reactionary nature of Metro Council," Alderman Elizabeth Eayrs, who led Toronto City Council's move to ban smoking at its committee meetings, was appalled at a decision by Metro Council not to follow the city's example. "I cannot agree that one of the basic human rights is to be able to blow smoke in someone's face," she said.

Concert Shell Opens

COLLINGWOOD, Ont. (CP) — A concert shell, made possible by a grant of $140,000 from the Ontario Government is being considered as a site for large scale festivals in the Blue Mountain area here. Run by the Blue Mountain Foundation for the Arts, the shell is being officially opened this summer. It will feature a summer school of music and dance.

Bullfeathers!

There's been more than a little bull flying around during the current Ontario election campaign.

One party claims it can save a lot of money by taking over automobile insurance.

We say, bullfeathers!

Let's look at the facts.

They took over auto insurance in Manitoba. In two years they lost $24.6 million. So what have they done? They've increased auto insurance premiums by 20 to 75 per cent this year. And they've slapped an extra tax of 2¢ a gallon on gasoline.

They took over auto insurance in British Columbia, too, and lost $34 million in their first year. So now they've passed a law letting them take 10¢ a gallon in gasoline taxes to pay for their insurance losses.

"We serve you first."

If, despite new gasoline taxes and increased insurance rates, government plans still lose money, you know where it has to come from, don't you? Right! From the taxpayers.

We say let's not make the same mistake here. Gasoline prices are already high enough in Ontario. So are insurance premiums. And so are our taxes.

So if any candidate tells you we're all going to save money with government-run automobile insurance, you know what to tell him.

Science Fiction For Thinking M

TORONTO (CP) — "Impossible" is a word that doesn't exist in the vocabulary of Gordon R. Dickson. His profession is making the impossible seem plausible.

Dickson, who makes his home in the Minneapolis-St. Paul area, is a science fiction writer, and during two stints as president of the Science Fiction Writers of America he helped shape its improbable move from the dime-store back shelves to a major force in contemporary literature.

No longer merely the stuff of Saturday morning TV serials, Dickson insists that what he calls "SF" is the "thinking man's" fiction—intellectual and argumentative. Academics, he says were the first outside addicts to embrace SF seriously.

"Essentially, what hard SF does is to take an established fact, then very rigorously extrapolate to its logical conclusion," he said in an interview.

He likes to compare the genre to a kind of laboratory of the imagination where experiments can be pursued safely without the dire consequences that real laboratories have been known to produce.

"There are certain technical differences in writing science fiction," he said. "A good writer has to think through his plot and tell his readers how a place works.

"In a normal novel, a man may get into an elevator, but you don't have to explain to your readers what an elevator is or how it works. In science fiction you have to provide more "furniture'."

Providing that detail means a lot of research, which Dickson said he enjoys as much as the writing itself. For his current novel, he has hired a researcher on Indian languages and customs.

"Ninety-five per cent of it I won't end up using. But the five per cent I do use will fit naturally into the story."

But it isn't all enthusiasm. For a man who has lived through both the high and low points of science fiction writing, the past has its own bitter memories.

"There was a newspaper city room I used to know in 'the 1940s," he recalled ruefully. 'A lot of men supplemented their income by writing pulp westerns and were admired. The ones who wrote science fiction couldn't admit it. Now we've landed on the moon and everybody wants to get on the bandwagon."

Voluntary Energy Measures Cuts Britain's Consumption

LONDON (CP) — Nearly half of the 4.5-per-cent cut in Britain's energy consumption last year was probably due to voluntary energy savings before the government started to impose new restrictions towards the end of the year.

This is stated in the treasury department's monthly economic progress report, which adds that greater savings should be achieved this year as the new measures and a major publicity campaign launched at the beginning of this year take effect.

Last year's total fall resulted from decreases of nearly 12 per cent in consumption of coal and of 6.5 per cent in petroleum, offset by increases of 20 per cent in the much smaller element of energy demand met by natural gas and nuclear electricity.

Economic correspondent Paul Garton writes: At the beginning of last year the oil embargo was in force and Britain faced industrial problems that had a marked effect on industrial consumption of fuels. However, as the report shows, over the whole year, a considerable genuine economy in the use of energy appears to have been achieved.

In his November budget the chancellor of the exchequer announced the phasing out of subsidies to the electricity, gas and coal industries in order to bring about a more realistic price level, appropriate to the energy crisis.

This has since been put into operation. It is estimated that once these prices reflect true coss there will be a saving of £50 million (115 million) and perhaps much more in a full year's import bill. This is because, with coal accounting for the greater part of the base load in electricity generation, oil is needed to satisfy extra demand.

At the same time, the chancellor raised to 100 per cent from 40 per cent the investment allowance for expenditure on the insulation of industrial buildings and discouraged wasteful use of fuel by raising the rate of value added tax on gasoline to 25 per cent from eight.

Last December the secretary of state for energy announced a 12-point program of energy-saving measures, including a loan scheme for projects aimed at saving heat losses in industrial buildings, investment designed to cut the fuel bill in government offices by 20 per cent, a limit of 20 degrees Celsius on the heating level in buildings other than homes, a lower speed limit on the roads and the doubling of thermal insulation standard in new homes.

Rainmaking May Stop Bush Fires

VANCOUVER (CP) — Recent tests in the Northwest Territories have given Canadian scientists a start on trying out the theory that a large forest fire can be doused by a million gallons of water from rain clouds seeded with silver iodide.

The silver iodide particles create nuclei around which water globules form and rain is caused.

Because most water bombers have capacities of only 800 gallons of water, seeding clouds appears to be an efficient method of putting out forest fires.

But, Dr. A. J. Chisholm of the Atmospheric Environment Service says the method has about a one-in-four chance of being suitable for any given day because of the need for the right type of cloud.

Want a home with our help?
Take this ad to your Builder or Lender.
Before you start, let's make one thing clear. This help applies to moderate-income families with at least one child. Family income cannot exceed a certain level, nor can we help you buy a home more expensive than a set maximum.
These income and house price maximums vary considerably, depending upon where you live in Canada. In Toronto, for example, the maximum family income for eligibility is as high as $20,000. Similarly, maximum house prices range up to $43,000 in high cost areas. To find out the maximums for your area, send in this coupon.
So, for this assistance, you've got to have a family, earn an average income, and buy a new, reasonable-cost home. In those cities where costs are highest, these homes are likely to be town houses or condominiums.
How do we help you? In two ways.
First, we'll reduce your down payment to as little as 5% by insuring your loan with your bank, trust or insurance company, for up to 95% of house value.
Second, we'll subsidize your monthly mortgage payments up to a maximum of $100 a month, or $1,200 annually.
The aim of the subsidy is to ensure that you pay only about 25% of your family income on monthly mortgage payments.
Now, how do you take advantage of our help?
First, take this ad with you to your local builder. He will show you his choice of homes under the house-price maximum. Then, through him, apply for federal government assistance.
If, on the other hand, you want to build your own home, using National Housing Act standards, or hire your own builder to build it, then you'll go to a bank, trust or insurance company, or other lender to raise the mortgage money. Then, if you're eligible, apply for federal government assistance through your lender.
For further details about this and other programs of federal and provincial assistance in buying a home, contact your local C.M.H.C. Office or builders' association member.

Aircraft Still Being Flown

OTTAWA (CP) — The taxpayer apparently is to reap little benefit from a defence department economy move which saw the armed forces drop seven executive jets early this year from military use.

A defence department spokesman said Monday the aircraft still are being flown and maintained by military personnel but paid for out of consolidated revenues rather than the defence budget.

The jets—nine - passenger French-built Falcons—still bear military markings.

The aircraft are being used to augment the ministry of transport fleet and are used to fly ministers and senior civil servants about the country at about 550 miles per hour, the spokesman said.

No more than five of the seven Falcons have been used at any one time and the total cost of operating these five has been about $180,000 a month.

Labor spokesmen have predicted that the current dispute will last longer than the 13-week strike in 1969 which shut down 103 Vancouver-area stores.

Their prediction is based on the long list of items in dispute between the unions and the British Columbia Food Industry Labor Relations Council, which represents the 11 companies.

The unions involved are the Bakery and Confectionery Workers International Union, Local 468; the meatcutters local of the Canadian Food and Allied Workers Union; and the Retail Clerks Union, Local 1518. Contracts for the various locals expired at the end of May.

NDP Voters Asked To Change Liberal

WOODSTOCK, Ont. (CP) — Liberal Leader Robert Nixon Monday called on NDP supporters to swing their votes to his party to help defeat the Conservative government in Thursday's Ontario general election.

Mr. Nixon told more than 500 persons at a barbecue that the Liberals are the only "legitimate and logical" choice to upset the Conservatives.

"We will turn the Davis government out and we will bring in an alternative government that is based on the historic traditions of Liberalism," he said.

In an interview following his address, Mr. Nixon said the Liberals are picking up support from Conservatives and New Democrats alike as the campaign winds to a close.

Earlier Monday, Mr. Nixon visited Whitby, Toronto and Peterborough.

Des Newman, former mayor of Whitby and Liberal candidate in Durham West riding, took Mr. Nixon on a tour of the town's business section.

To a voter who said he preferred county councils to regional government, Mr. Nixon promised that a Liberal administration would conduct reviews of regional governments throughout Ontario if elected to form a government.

Another voter wanted to know Mr. Nixon's position on the proposed international airport at nearby Pickering.

Mr. Nixon pointed at Mr. Newman, who has supported the airport proposal since it was put forward seven years ago, and said Mr. Newman would have "an influential voice" in any decision a Liberal government would make.

Mr. Nixon said last week that Mr. Newman would be part of a Liberal cabinet.

In Toronto St. David riding, Mr. Nixon criticized Mr. Davis for suggesting a Liberal government in Ontario would be nothing more than a "branch plant" of the federal Liberal government.

Davis Turns to Northern Ontario

HAMILTON (CP) — Premier William Davis turned his attention to Northern Ontario today after delivering his most scorching attack yet on the federal Liberals and provincial leader Robert Nixon with only two days to go to Ontario's general election.

Speaking to about 2,000 persons at a party rally here, the Conservative premier Monday night charged Mr. Nixon with "deliberate, outright deception."

"A party and a leader that cannot bring themselves to admit the truth in an election campaign would make a career of deception in government," Mr. Davis said.

He added that when Ontario voters go to the polls this Thursday, "they can either endorse political deception or they can repudiate it."

Earlier in the day, while campaigning in Toronto, Mr. Davis warned that the government will not stand for any excessive price increases on gasoline and oil if oil companies try to recoup profits they may feel they have lost because of a provincial government freeze.

His government froze the Ontario prices of gasoline and home-heating oil July 1. During the election campaign, the freeze was extended to Nov. 15 from the original expiry date of Sept. 30.

"No way we are going to see the consumers taken advantage of—no way," Mr. Davis said in an interview.

In Hamilton, the premier heaped scorn on the federal government of Pierre Trudeau and quoted Mr. Trudeau promising a year ago that a Liberal government would wrestle inflation to the ground.

"The wrestling match is over, my friends, and inflation has been the clear winner."

He said now Mr. Nixon and his federal friends want the opportunity to wrestle the province of Ontario to its knees.

"They want a government at Queen's Park that will be equally as inept—that will toe the federal line—a Nixon government that will run Ontario the way his federal friends run the post office."

Food Buyers Cross Borders

VANCOUVER (CP) — Hungry consumers are travelling across the street, across the city and sometimes across the U.S. border to get their groceries.

They've been doing it for more than a week and present indications are they will be doing it a lot longer as labor and management remain poles apart on the contract dispute that has shut down 125 supermarkets in the Greater Vancouver area.

Corner stores report business up by 100 per cent in some cases and a brisk trade is reported at the few supermarkets unaffected by the strike. Meanwhile, some Vancouverites are even travelling 50 miles to Bellingham, Wash. to buy groceries.

About 5,000 supermarket employees, including clerks, bakers and meatcutters have been off the job since Sept. 5 when the supermarkets closed their doors after failing to get a union pledge of three days notice of picketing.

No talks have been held since the closure and none are scheduled.

Clive McKee, an industrial inquiry commissioner appointed by the provincial government, was unable to find enough common groups to make recommendations for a settlement. And, Labor Minister Bill King has said the provincial government will not intervene.

Ships for Vietnam

TOKYO (AP) — The Soviet Union has presented a number of ships to North Vietnam recently, the Vietnam news agency said Monday. In a broadcast monitored in Tokyo, the agency said a presentation ceremony was held at the harbor of Haiphong, North Vietnam's major port, last weekend.

Disease Spreads

CLEVELAND (Reuter) — The number of suspected cases of encephalitis, a mosquito-borne disease that can be deadly, rose to 51 in this industrial Ohio city Monday, even as public health officials sprayed 80,000 acres with insecticide.

Will Ease Travel

MOSCOW (AP) — In what might be the Kremlin's first concrete step toward fulfilling the Helsinki agreement, the Soviets have informed U.S. officials they are ready in principle to permit U.S. correspondents in Moscow to travel more easily in and out of the Soviet Union.

New Cases

TORONTO (CP) — A medical health officer for Windsor and Essex County said today there are 38 possible cases of encephalitis in the Windsor area which show symptoms of being a strain of the disease spread by mosquitoes.

Due to Pressure

CHARLOTTETOWN, P.E.I. (CP) — Finance Minister John Turner's resignation was brought on by the pressures of his work and was not connected to his relationship with the cabinet or the prime minister, Senator Gildas Molgat, president of the Liberal Party of Canada, said Monday. He said he knew Mr. Turner had been tired and unhappy for some time.

Questions Reluctance

MONTREAL (CP) — Citing soaring costs, Health Minister Marc Lalonde has questioned the provinces' apparent reluctance to impose auto seat-belt legislation and to enforce industrial safety regulations.

Work Stopped

KAPUSKASING, Ont. (CP) — More than 2,000 workers in all will be off their jobs by Friday at Spruce Falls Power and Paper Co. Ltd. and Kimberly-Clark of Canada Ltd. as the result of a strike by 1,500 mill workers, company and union spokesmen said Monday.

The striking workers—members of Locals 89 and 256, Canadian Paperworkers Union, and Local 1149, International Brotherhood of Electrical Workers Union—walked off their jobs last Friday after a breakdown in contract negotiations.

Last Hold Out

CLAREMONT, Ont. (CP) — The last holdout on the site for the first runway of the Pickering airport turned over his keys to a government official Monday but members of People or Planes (PoP) later occupied the 119-year-old house vowing not to leave.

Meeting Will Not Name New Finance Minister

OTTAWA (CP) — The economy is expected to dominate the all-day federal cabinet discussion scheduled Wednesday in the nearby Gatineau Park but observers say they will be surprised if a new finance minister is named before next week.

However, the successor to John Turner will be getting a sobering report from the finance department based on the economic record.

That record seems certain to strengthen calls for tougher measures against inflation, including more price and wage restraint—perhaps controls officials say.

They point to such developments since the June 23 budget as continuing increases in prices and wages, contributing to an inflation rate of more than 11 per cent.

Deficit Drops

OTTAWA (CP) — Canada's international trade deficit for the second quarter of 1975 dropped by almost $500 million compared with the first three months of the year, Statistics Canada reported Monday.

The second-quarter deficit was $1.061 billion, down from $1.533 billion in the first quarter.

The first-quarter deficit had shot up by more than $500 million from the previous quarter due largely to a deterioration in merchandise trade. The second-quarter improvement was attributed partly to stronger merchandise trade.

The balance of payments measures the value of what Canada paid for goods and services compared with what it sold to other countries and the flow of investment capital in an out of the country. The deficits are adjusted to account for seasonal variations.

Healing Substance... Shrinks Piles, Checks Itch

Exclusive healing substance proven to shrink hemorrhoids...and repair damaged tissue.

A renowned research institute has found a unique healing substance with the ability to shrink hemorrhoids painlessly. It relieves itching and discomfort in minutes and speeds up healing of the injured, inflamed tissues.

One hemorrhoidal case history after another reported "very striking improvement." Pain was promptly and gently relieved . . . actual reduction or retraction (shrinking) took place.

And most important—this improvement was maintained in cases where clinical observations were continued over a period of many months. Furthermore, these tests and observations were made on patients with a wide variety of hemorrhoidal conditions. All this was accomplished with a healing substance (Bio-Dyne) which quickly helps heal injured cells and stimulates growth of new tissue. Bio-Dyne is offered in ointment and suppository form called Preparation H.

In addition to actually shrinking hemorrhoids, Preparation H lubricates and makes elimination less painful. It helps prevent infection which is a stated cause of hemorrhoids.

Just ask your druggist for Preparation H Suppositories or Preparation H Ointment (with a special applicator).

Satisfaction or your money refunded.

We need more housing for Canadians.

Builders: We can help you build it.

We're attacking the housing shortage on two fronts. Rental. And purchase.

Our rental housing assistance program has already taken off.

Builders across Canada are erecting apartment complexes under agreement with Central Mortgage and Housing Corporation.

Why? Because we're offering a subsidy of up to $900 per rental unit for up to 15 years, provided that rents are set at a moderate level.

This Assisted Rental Program is successful. Builder participation is encouraging. And reasonable-rental accommodation will be coming onto the market as a result.

As for Home Ownership Assistance, it's getting off the ground, too. Here we subsidize average-income families in the purchase of new, moderate-cost homes from you. These may be individual homes, town-houses or condominiums, as long as they sell under the maximums set by C.M.H.C. in your area. As in the case of Rental Assistance, you go to your regular sources of mortgage funds for the money to build. Through NHA-insured financing, you'll obtain competitive rates and terms. Then we subsidize your customers so that they pay about 25% of their family income on monthly mortgage payments.

So, builders, get in on the action and get your share of these benefits. At the same time, you'll be helping to increase the supply of affordable housing in your community.

For more information about Rental Assistance, and Home Ownership Assistance, contact your local C.M.H.C. Office.

Loyalist Debate Victory for NDP

By ROBIN CHASE
Staff Reporter

The New Democratic Party scored a moral political victory Monday during a special all-candidates debate held by Loyalist College.

The three NDP candidates from the ridings of Quinte (Carson McLauchlan), Prince Edward-Lennox (Jan Nicol) and Hastings-Peterborough (Bob Thompson) received the loudest applause and warmest reaction from about 200 students whose homes are in the three ridings.

The other candidates were James Taylor, Progressive Conservative from Prince Edward-Lennox, Progressive Conservative Robin Jeffrey and Liberal Hugh O'Neil from Quinte riding.

Floyd Hawley of Shannonville, campaign manager for Nancy Arnold, the independent Social Credit hopeful in Hastings-Peterborough, spoke on behalf of his absent candidate.

Two Liberals — David Hobson of Hastings - Peterborough and Keith MacDonald of Prince Edward — Lennox — and Progressive Conservative Clarke Rollins of Hastings — Peterborough failed to appear.

The three New Democrats were applauded loudly both during and after their presentation and in the question period. They concentrated their efforts on youth-oriented NDP policies and pointed out they are in about the same age group as the students — sprinkling their comments with humor.

"We believe you are the future and we want to be with you and help you," said Mr. McLauchlan. He pointed out automobile insurance restrictions for those under 25 years of age charging, "the young are being penalized."

"You will note that all three NDP candidates are present," said Miss Nicol. "We go to all the all-candidates meetings. It's the other parties who don't show up."

She decried that young people have difficulty finding jobs, saying there are many graduates with B.A.s out of work.

"I think it's time that young people stand up and be counted. I'm under 25 so I'm still being discriminated against by the insurance companies," said Mr. Thompson.

"I don't think I should be judged guilty before I'm proved guilty," he remarked.

Poll Clerks View Film

It isn't just the candidates who work long hours preparing for an election. Poll clerks under the direction of returning officer Gerald Joyce have spent hours in preparation for Thursday's election including a two-hour session Monday morning at the Legion Hall.

Some 200 officials, mostly women, viewed a government film about the ballot counting process and received color co-ordinated manuels, seals and step-by-step directions. Bags containing polling place banners, a voting barrier, pens, seals and even scotch tape and a scratch pad were distributed.

Ballot boxes will be distributed this afternoon at 4 p.m. to the 173 ballot centres in the city.

Tuning in to Youth

Student Work on Display

By SUSAN McCONNELL
Staff Reporter

The old phrase 'a picture is worth a thousand words' takes on a new meaning at a refreshingly different art display at Corby Library featuring the efforts of Quinte Secondary School's Camera Club.

The four main contributers —president Jeff Evoy, Grade 12; vice-president Michael Andersen, Grade 11; Bob Sinclair and Tom Hallana, also Grade 12 students; have put together an interesting array of scenery shots, both in color and black and white, and some in-depth character portraits.

This is the first public exhibition of the club's work.

Members work regularly after classes discussing photos, developing and enlarging prints and learning mounting skills. Many photographs have been taken on weekend jaunts around Belleville and the surrounding area.

The club, which operates on an approximate $450 annual budget from the Student Parliament and produces photos for the school's yearbook, hopes to raise funds to purchase more equipment through the library display.

The photographs will be on display until Sept. 29 in the Upper Lobby.

Mounting Enrolment Taxing Separate School Board Resources

By COLIN BRUCE
Staff Reporter

A larger - than - expected Grade 9 and 10 enrolment has only added to the Hastings — Prince Edward Separate School Board financial problems, says board director Ed Neville.

During an interview Monday, Mr. Neville revealed that 301 students have signed up for classes in the two grades at Nicholson Catholic College — 85 more than anticipated.

While in the public school board the increase would bring jubilation, it means more difficult financial straights to be navigated by the separate school board.

In the public system, the province subsidizes students at a per capita cost arrived at through cost of secondary school education costs.

"High school students in the separate board receive grants based on the cost of elementary school education," said Mr. Neville.

"The elementary grant (given to separate school board Grade 9 and 10 students) is only half the actual, per capita secondary school costs," said board superintendant of business Ed Paquet.

Because of the upswing in enrolment, the separate board this year had to resort to purchasing a four-class, relocatable structure. The cost of the structure and the hiring of three more teachers to handle the student overflow is stretching the budget to the limit.

"When you boil it down — the more kids we get, the more financially difficult it is to take care of them," said Mr. Neville.

Nicholson's entire population is 504, compared with 459 last year. At a student-teacher ratio of 18 to one, the increase has meant the hiring of three additional teaching staff.

Unlike public school boards who consider themselves lucky if student population doesn't decrease from year to year, the local separate school board is growing.

"I think many parents — including non-Catholic parents — are looking for the structure of the separate school system," said Mr. Neville. "We have also increased our programs and have made a stronger appeal to grade 8 students to entice them to remain in the separate school systems rather than altering public schools.

Windows Smashed

City police are investigating two cases of vandalism which occurred during the last few days and caused about $200 damage to windows.

Insp. Ralph Blatchford said today $100 damage resulted when the skylight on the roof of Triple A Van Lines Ltd. at 47 Oak St. was broken sometime during the weekend.

He said rocks were apparently used and there was no attempt made to enter the building.

In addition, a pellet gun was used to break a window at 25 Keller Dr. to the tune of $10 and to smash glass patio doors at 27 Keller Dr. in the amount of $90, he said.

Driver Charged

A 27 - year - old Pieton man has been charged with unsafe lane change in connection with a two—car collision on Highway 401 near Belleville Monday.

Ontario Provincial Police at Belleville identified the man today as Dennis Robinson, 17, of 12 Elm St.

Police said both a 1974 Dodge Monaco station wagon and a 1970 Volkswagen driven by Gerhard Sonntag, 54, of Ottawa were eastbound when the accident occurred.

Police said the Sonntag car was in the process of passing when the other vehicle changed lanes. Sonntag and his daughter, a passenger, were slightly injured but did not require hospital treatment, police added.

Lottery One Suggestion To Supplement Funds

The private board of directors which administrates senior separate school students is considering running a lottery to subsidize education costs.

Richard Barrett, chairman of the board, said during an interview Monday "the idea of a lottery is being considered."

He would not comment on details only that a "committee is working on the idea."

Mr. Paquet, chairman of the committee, said a lottery of 1,000 tickets selling for $104 each is being considered. Of the $104,000 raised,half would be offered as prizes.

The $52,000 designated for prize money would be divided into weekly prizes of $1,000.

Because of a provincial government stand, no public monies are given to separate school students in Grades 11, 12 and 13. Rather, each student pays a tuition of $150 — matched by an equal sum from his parish.

"Even these fees do not come near the cost of putting a student through a year of senior, secondary school," said Ed Paquet, member of the private board.

In the public school system, each student receives a $1,400-grant from the province to take care of his per capita cost.

Bondy Steps Down As Drum Corp Director

Belleville Yardmen Drum and Bugle Crops director Hugh Bondy, citing lack of internal co-operation and poor communication with corps sponsors, has resigned as director, a position he has held for the past three years.

Mr. Bondy revealed his decision to The Intelligencer in an interview Monday.

"I will resign as director," said Mr. Bondy. "But I will be still active in the drum corps if we can get a proper board set up so we can administer the drum corps in Belleville."

His resignation is the third by corps board members in the past two months, months marked by friction between the corps and the sponsoring Belleville Yardmen Benefit Fund.

Twice Benefit Fund officials have seized band instruments. once, instruments have been returned. Fund officials now have band equipment, valued at about $60,000 in storage.

Mr. Bondy indicated internal friction with in the corps' immediate administration was a factor in his resignation.

He suggested that "people who administer the corps should be outside the corps, only in administrative posts."

An earlier statement by Benefit Fund officials sited their dissatisfaction with "irregularities" in band operation and the need to protect Yardmen investment as reasons behind with drawal of band instruments.

Secretary Ernie Belanger is quoted as saying that equipment will be available to a "responsible band administration, when it comes forward."

Hijack A Hoax

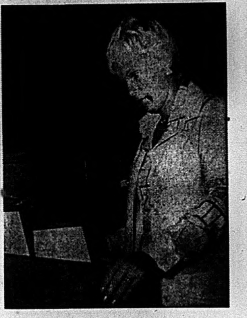
Two Toronto men have been charged with public mischief following a 10-hour search for a reported truck hijacker armed with a gun in the woods north of Belleville Monday.

Ontario Provincial Police at Belleville identified the men today as Mario Simonelli, 21, and Clifford Michael Nolan, 18. They will appear in provincial court in Belleville Sept. 29.

Police said they received a report at 5.15 a.m. that two persons, a driver and a passenger in a transport truck, were approached by a man wielding a gun at a service station near Cobourg who ordered them to drive him eastbound on Highway 401.

The truck turned north on Highway 37 at Belleville and the occupants became lost in the woods on the River Rd. extension north of Concession 5 in Thurlow Township, police said. It was reported the gunman ran north on foot in the woods.

Over a dozen provincial policemen and tracking dog Sabre were summoned and searched for miles, finding nothing, police said.



New Terminal

Terminal, the newest addition to the staff of Belleville's Royal Bank, on Front St. is being eased into the daily bank routine by co-ordinators like Sherry Denike. The Royal Bank of Canada has launched a province-wide changeover from clerk to computer.

New Computer Speeds Banking Procedures

The newest member of Belleville's Royal Bank's staff doesn't wear a suit or dress or give service with a smile but it does provide the customer with an up-to-the-minute status report of his savings account.

Its name is Terminal, as in IBM machine, and the cost of this time saver is approximately $1,500 every three months.

In the three or four minutes it would take a clerk typist at the bank to ready your account for the files, Terminal can reel off the customer's name, address, phone number, balance on hand, cheques going through, interest rate and foreign exchange, if any, in 10 seconds.

It's part of province-wide program sponsored by Royal Bank of Canada, eliminating some of the responsibility of bank personnel. Belleville is only one bank of an estimated 280 undergoing this switch since the program got underway in 1973.

In approximately three weeks conversion co-ordinators like Sherry Denike will feed thousands of names and pieces of information into the computer bank, it's an instant memory at your fingertips.

The unit plugs into IBM headquarters in Toronto through a Bell Canada exchange.

Terminal doesn't work any overtime. It quits automatically at 6.30 p.m. every night and enjoys all company benefits — a cheerful office, its own desk, assistants and the occasional new typing ribbon.

The biggest benefits offered by Terminal, says Ms. Denike, its keeper for the next two weeks, is that it saves time, eliminates a lot of paperwork and the account can never get misplaced.

Committee Rejects Request For Signs

Belleville's traffic and light committee Monday turned down a proposal to post 30 mile an hour signs on Cannifton Rd.

Committee chairman Ald. Jack Ireland appealed to members of the committee stating the case of a motorist who might not be acquainted with the speed limit. "Could we consider it as a public relations gesture of sorts," queried Ald. Ireland.

"Whenever a speed limit is not posted, and the roadway is within town or city limits, the province states the speed limit is 30 miles an hour . . . thereby doing away with the need to post every such area," said city manager Wilbur Purcell.

Labor Survey Reveals Candidates Views on Provincial Issues

By AL ZABAS
Staff Reporter

New Democratic Party candidates in Quinte, Prince Edward-Lennox, and Hastings-Peterborough ridings differed little in their responses to a Quinte District Labor Council-initiated poll on broad labor, educational and social questions contained in a 16-point survey of Quinte area candidates.

The near conformity, as compared to answers from Liberals and the lone responding Conservative, Quinte's Robin Jeffrey, emerged clearly from amid the seven of 13 responses received.

Responses to the survey came from Quinte riding Liberal Hugh O'Neil, and the NDP's Carson McLauchlan; Prince Edward-Lennox's Liberal Keith MacDonald and Jan Nicol (NDP); and Hastings-Peterborough's Liberal David Hobson and Robert Thompson (NDP).

Several patterns emerged in candidates responses.

All candidates agreed employees should be allowed to sit on the public service's labor relations tribunal and grievance board as well as the classification rating committee.

All would vote for tighter gun control legislation.

Excluding Mrs. Jffrey (Conservative), all would give public servants "the right to participate in the political process."

Excluding Mr. Hobson (Liberal) and Mr. McLauchlan (NDP), all other candidates would not eliminate university tuition fees.

The only other major point of difference between NDP candidates was over the compulsory use of seat belts. Jan Nicol supported compulsory seat belt use while Mr. McLauchlan and Mr. Thompson were opposed.

On other questions, differences between candidates becamse wider, with Liberals Mr. Hobson and Mr. O'Neil choosing not to respond to several questions (indicated by NR). Mrs. Jeffrey's answers to eight points, where only yes or no responses were requested, were supplemented by written comments.

Specific opposition to, or support of survey questions follow, with the exception of Mrs. Jeffrey, whose answers, in some cases, are briefly summarized.

Messrs. Hobson and O'Neil oppose giving all Ontario workers collective bargaining rights. They, along with Mrs. Jeffrey, would withhold such rights from essential-service (fire, police) workers.

All respondants (Mr. Hobson-NR) opposed the NDP support of a provincial government auto insurance plan.

Rent controls are supported by all candidates with Mrs. Jeffrey and Mr. Hobson the exceptions.

Prince Edward — Lennox Liberal Keith MacDonald opposes mandatory, joint labor-management safety committees in plants of 15 or more employee. (Mr. Hobson — NR) Mrs. Jeffrey said that "the Government looks favorably on — committees and is studying their compostion."

Higher taxation of the mining industry received affirmative resoponses from only the NDP. (Mr. O'Neil — NR)

Mrs. Jeffrey said "In 1973, the tax on mining industry profits was 15 per cent. In the 1974 Ontario budget taxes on the mining industry were increased on sliding scale to a maximum of 40 per cent which created an increased revenue of $100-million."

Liberals Messrs. O'Neil and Hobson want legislated use of seat belts, (Mr. MacDonald-NR). And Mrs. Jeffrey wants retention of the status quo.

Along with Mr. MacDonald she opposes allowing school principles and vice-principles to strike. (Mr. O'Neil — NR).

No response was made by Mr. O'Neil to the proposal of establishing a $3.50 an hour minimum wage. Other candidates supported the suggestion.

Quinte riding Conservative, Mrs. Jeffrey said the "minimum wage law was increased in May 1975 and is continually under review."

Neither Mr. MacDonald nor Mrs. Jeffrey would propose, as all other candidates would, a method, other than through municipal property tax, of financing local education costs.

Mrs. Jeffrey said existing Ontario Labor Relations Act regulations provide for automatic certification of an union at 55 per cent of employee vote cast. Mr. MacDonald opposed to the survey suggestion certification be dropped from 65 to 50 per cent, plus one. (Messrs. O'Neil and Hobson — NR).

All candidates (Mr. O'Neil (NR) expressed concern over provision of either more nurses, denti-care, or free milk programmes in schools. All candidates, with the exception of Mrs. Jeffrey, saw the need for a revitalized elementary schools system with greater emphasis placed on the 3 R's. Mrs. Jeffrey said she saw no need for changes or improvements in education in Hastings County.

All candidates who had not responded to the survey, specifically in Northumberland riding, were given the opportunity through a telephone check of campaign officials. Most campaign headquarters indicated their respective candidates had not seen the survey.

Questionnaire Error Caught by Candidate

Quinte District Labor Council president Douglas Sword admitted today that labor made a mistake in framing a question dealing with the Ontario Labor Relations Act in a survey mailed to 13 Quinte area candidates.

Only Quinte riding Conservative candidate Robin Jeffrey picked up on the error.

Labor asked candidates if they would support a change in the act "to reduce the percentage required for automatic certification for the present 65 per cent to 50 per cent, plus one."

An amendment to the act providing for 55 per cent automatic certification was given royal assent and became law, July 18 this year.

Mrs. Jeffrey stated in her questionnaire response that "present legislation permits certification at 55 per cent."

In accounting for labor's error, Mr. Sword said "We've been living with 65 per cent for so long that it automatically comes to the fingers (when typing).

Ontario Fastball League Future in Question

The Belleville McDonald's had a near disasterous season in the Ontario Fastball League. They lost 42 games, even though 17 of them were by one run, lost their travel coverage from the Belleville Yardmen and lost, at the very least, a little dignity.

However, despite all their losses and shortcomings, Doug Adams general manager of the club says, "we're here to stay. We'll be back again next year."

A very definite statement. At present, the Ontario Fastball League (OFL), which just enjoyed one of its best years, is much less certain of its future.

At the annual general meeting of the Ontario Amateur Softball Association (OASA) in June, a decision was passed that any teams not participating in OASA playoffs would be ineligible for the annual Ontario Senior Championship Tournament, from which a representative for the Canadian Championship is decided.

This past year, nine of the 10 OFL squads participated in the Ontario Championship. However, upon receiving correspondence from the OASA demanding participation in playoffs the OFL responded with a solid NO.

"Our decision," said Cliff Belch, vie-president of the OASA and a member of Canadian Amateur Softball Association, "very clearly stated that if thre was no participation in Ontario playdowns in 1975, then no team would be allowed to participate in the Ontario Senior Championships in 1976."

"The OFL refused to participate in our Ontario Senior A playoffs, but we didn't count them out. We scheduled them in our playoffs and if they participate they will still be able to play in the Ontario Tournament in 1976," he said.

Belch added that if they do not comply with the playoff schedule he would consider them out according to the OASA's new regulation.

"My feeling is that if the OFL was aware of the consequences and they still refused to participate in Ontario playdowns that they do not wish to participate in the Ontario and Canadian championships in 1976," summized Belch.

What exactly will happen to the Ontario Fastball League is a good question. Moreover, what will happen to Ontario at next years' Canadian Championships?

In recent years Ontario has always been well represented in the national tournament and our Senior A representative has usually been a team from the OFL.

It makes for an interesting predicament. While the OASA can't have an affiliate league telling them what to do, can they really afford to give some the best Senior A teams in the province the boot?

The final decision on the matter should be cast at the OASA's next general meeting in October.

Eight Signed, Cats Set for Preseason Games

While most people's thoughts were probably far from the misty ice surfaces of the local arenas, the Belleville Bobcats have been preparing for the coming Metro Junior B Hockey League schedule for more than a month now.

The cats have been working out informally at the Trenton Community Gardens and just recently, moved to the ice surface at the Dick Ellis rink in Belleville, when training camp officially opened.

New coach of the Cats, Meehan Bonnar, explained that the number of young hopefuls "ranged anywhere from 50 to 75 players.' The numbers have been reduced since then to 28 and will have to be further reduced to 19 before the start of the season, September 30.

Both general manager of the Cats, Jim "Snipe" Matthews, and the new coach have expressed satisfaction with the quality of hockey displayed early in the season. The Cats will get a chance to prove themselves this Wednesday when the team opens its exhibition schedule with an away game in Oshawa.

Matthews explained that this first game "will give the out of town players a chance to play". The next game of the pre-season warm up will be Friday evening when the Bobcats will take on the Whitby club at the Memorial Arena. The Cats are scheduled to move into the Memorial as soon as the ice conditions will allow.

The Belleville squad's brass has signed a total of eight players. Jeff Merrill who spent part of last season with the Smiths Falls Junior A club will be sharing the goaltending chores with veteran goalie, Bob Moore.

Both Matthews and Bonnar are quick to agree that "the goaltending will be strong for us this season."

Rick Langstaff will be back to strengthen the Cats' blue line forces for another season. Scott "Scooter" Samis has signed after returning from the training camp of the Markham Junior A entry.

Wayne Calberry, Andy Ricketts, Eric Powell and Bob Thompson have all signed again with the Cats and will add valuable experience and provide a strong scoring punch.

Other possible experience may come from two members of the now defunct Peterborough Junior B club. Paul Tilley and Pete Dettman have been appearing regularly at practices and will be two players that the Cats' management will no doubt be keeping a watchful eye on.

Coach Bonnar expressed his satisfaction with the showing of the younger players in the camp including three members of last year's Trenton Birt's Handy Stand Juveniles: "I'm really impressed with the showing by the juveniles," said Bonnar during a recent practice.

Bob Thompson, Dave Lewis and Bruce Leedham who played with the Trenton squad have been showing a lot of hustle and could provide good speed in the front ranks.

Bonnar feels that the Bobcats of the 1975-76 season will have "a strong nucleus, made up of 10 kids with experience and nine rookies." Coupled with the goaltending ability that will be provided by Moore and Merrill, this should give the Cats a winning combination this season.

The team has scheduled a total of six exhibition games three at home and three away. Game time for Friday's game with Whitby is 9 p.m. at Memorial Arena.

Busy Session

Former star performer with Belleville representative teams in the Ontario Minor Hockey Association, Jeff Merrill will be doing his goaltending with Belleville Bobcats this season after stint with Smith Falls Junior A team in 1974-75 campaign. Merrill attempts to frustrate scoring chance by Scott Samis (centre) and Andy Ricketts during practice session. All three have signed with the Cats who open a series of pre-season games, Wednesday, in Oshawa. Friday night here, Cats will play host to Whitby Bruins in a 9 p.m. match at Memorial Arena. Sunday, the team is in Kingston for a game with the Voyageurs as coach Meehan Bonnar continues to prepare his charges for the opening of the Metro Junior B Hockey League. Cats begin league play, September 30. They open the season at home, Friday, October 3 with Kingston the visitor.

BYBF Scores 6-3 Win

Sue Morton picked up her second win in as many starts Monday night as Belleville Yardmen Benefit Fund took a 2-0 lead in their best-of-seven Belleville and District Ladies Softball League final series with Madoc Furinaettes.

Morton stopped the Madoc squad on a 4-1, three-hitter in the opening game and Monday, she scattered seven hits over five innings before giving way to Shirley Gulliver in the final two frames.

Sandra Fleming took the loss. She was touched for eight hits in five innings and relieved by Darlene Bedore.

Fleming had herself a comfortable 2-1 lead until the fifth when the BYBF crew rallied for four runs. Both clubs scored one in the sixth.

Marj Reid and Gulliver had a double and a single for the winners and Sheila Smith added a triple.

Joan Bailey keyed the Madoc attack with four singles. Bedore tripled and singled.

JENSEN FIRST

HAMILTON (CP)—Al Jensen of Ottawa grabbed the first round lead in the Candian Professional Golfers' Association assistant pro championships Monday with a 68, one stroke ahead of Tom Irwin of Moncton, N.B., going into today's 36 holes of the 54-hole $5,000 tournament. Some 22 golfers from all the provinces except Newfoundland are entered in the championship.

SETS RECORD

MOSCOW (AP) — Japanese weightlifter Takeuchi Masamoto set a world record Monday in the flyweight division with a snatch of 238 pounds on the opening night of the world weightlifting championships. Masamoto beat the old record of 236 set by Alexander Voronin of the Soviet Union in the under 114.6-pound weight class.

Centurions Ready to Roll

By TOM GAVEY
Sports Staff

One of the "teams to beat" in the Bay of Quinte Football senior league for 1975 are the Centre Hastings Centurions. The Centurions senior team was 7-1 last season, losing only the Bay of Quinte final to Trenton over the year.

Although the Centurions look good for this season they do have some problems to iron out, according to coach Barry Pyear.

The reason Pyear is wary of the new season is the fact that a number of players the Madoc club hoped would return decided to go elsewhere for '75.

"A number of last year's regulars are now out working or over at Loyalist" said Pyear.

The Centurions are missing these players even more since they have had limited numbers turning out for practices. Only about 25 players will wear the Centurion uniform in the coming season, which means costly injuries could finish championship hopes in Madoc.

Like a number of other teams in the league Madoc will be going with a rookie quarterback this year in Scott Simpson.

"He looks good, but inexperience will hurt us" said Pyear.

On the offence Centre Hastings have their top ball carrier back from last year, with Harley Williamsen returning to action.

"Our team is strong defensively and our offensive line will be good if inexperienced" commented Pyear.

Joe Brooks and B. J. Singh are both looked to for special work on the defence this year.

Singh is a South African who comes to Madoc via the Toronto area. He is described by his coach as being "big and strong".

Assisting Pyear with the coaching this year will be Elmer Buchanan and Bob Pesowski, both will be looking for improvements also.

"It's hard to predict how we'll do, it depends on the rest of the league" offered Pyear.

"Any of the top five teams in the league could take the championship, Quinte, Centennial, Moira, Trenton or ourselves," said Pyear.

Good two way play should come from Jim McConnell, Cliff Reid and Randy Trumble, all returnees.

"Good team spirit will be an asset" adds Pyear.

"We'll be expecting to win in our first game against Trenton. We won't be overconfident, but we won't go in expecting to lose either" he said.

With this year's lineup of teams the league, to say the least, will be close. Look for Centennial, Madoc, Quinte, Trenton and Moira to be in the thick of things for first place. And Bayside will be out to prove something.

Tryouts Scheduled For Minor Leaguers

Saturday and Sunday the second round of tryouts for Ontario Minor Hockey Association representative teams will take place.

The OMHA all-star practices also include tryouts for representative House League Select teams. Rather than just 15 boys making an all-star squad there are 32 openings to fill. The 17 boys who do not make the first team are relegated to the house league select squad. This squad acts as a farm team to the actual representative team.

The boys will play in house league and will practise together once every two weeks. They also will travel to tournaments and, when called upon, play for the OMHA all-star team.

Practice times for OMHA and select teams are as follows: Saturday — minor atom 8 a.m.; major atom 9.15 a.m.; novice 10.30 a.m.; minor peewee 11.45 a.m.; major peewee 1:30 p.m.; minor bantam 3 p.m.; major bantam 4.45 p.m.; Sunday — minor midget 2.30 p.m.; major midget 4.15 p.m.; juvenile 6 p.m.

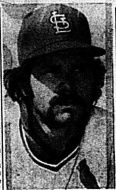
Hrabosky Will Leave If It Means a Win



AL HRABOSKY

By THE ASSOCIATED PRESS

Al Hrabosky isn't fond of being pulled from a baseball game, but when it can bring the premier St. Louis Cardinals reliever a victory, he'll leave any day.

After dousing a Philadelphia threat in the late innings, Hrabosky yielded to pinch-hitter Reggie Smith, who responded with an eighth-inning double that gave the Cardinals a 7-6 victory Monday night.

The triumph pushed Hrabosky's season record to 12-3 and let St. Louis pick up half a game on Pittsburgh Pirates who split a doubleheader with Chicago Cubs.

The Pirates lead the Phillies by six games and the Cardinals by seven in the National League East Division race.

The Cubs won the first game of the doubleheader 6-5 and the Pirates won the second 9-1. Elsewhere in the National League, New York Mets edged Montreal Expos 3-2, Los Angeles Dodgers beat San Diego Padres 5-4 and Atlanta Braves whipped San Francisco Giants 12-0.

"At this time of the season, they are all hard," the left-handed Hrabosky said after his 1 2-3 innings on the mound.

Entering in relief with the bases loaded and one out in the seventh, Hrabosky "couldn't deliver" in an attempt to strike out Garry Maddox, whose sacrifice fly tied the contest at 6-6. But Hrabosky induced Tony Taylor to line out to right field to end the frame.

Ken Reitz started the Cardinals' winning eighth with an infield hit. Ted Sizemore then bunted down the first base line and was safe when pitcher Gene Garber missed the tag.

After Mike Tyson popped out trying to sacrifice the runners, Smith was called to pinch-hit for Hrabosky and hit a double, scoring Larry Lintz, who ran for Reitz.

Two-out run-scoring doubles in the ninth inning by Jerry Morales and Jose Cardenal gave the Cubs their opening-game victory, then Jim Rooker hurled a two-hitter to bring Pittsburgh back in the nightcap.

The Pirates, trailing 4-2 going into the ninth inning of the first game, went ahead on a two-run single by Bob Robertson and an RBI-single by Al Oliver. But in the bottom of the ninth, Joe Wallis singled, then Morales and Cardenal doubled. Dave Parker's three doubles and Richie Zisk's two-run homer led Pittsburgh's assault in the nightcap.

Willie McCovey's three-run homer in the top of the eighth inning gave San Diego a 4-1 lead. But in the bottom of the eighth, Willie Crawford's three-run homer capped the Dodgers' four-run burst that carried Burt Hooton to his 11th straight victory.

Dusty Baker's five RBI and a six-run fifth inning highlighted Atlanta's 18-hit assault that embarrassed the Giants and the crowd of 851 fans who showed up to watch them.

Red Sox and Orioles

It's Showdown Time

By THE ASSOCIATED PRESS

It's a two-game baseball series in September that could lead to a seven-game series in October.

After 150 games, Boston Red Sox stand poised, ready to end Baltimore's recent domination of the American League East Division and the Orioles sit on the brink of a do-or-die situation when they visit Boston for games today and Wednesday.

Just 4½ games separate the two teams. It could swell to 6½ games by Wednesday night and all but eliminate the Orioles from the division race. Or it could dwindle to 2½ games and give the Orioles a clear shot at their sixth division title in the last seven years.

"We're still in the driver's seat," said first-base coach Johnny Pesky Monday night after Boston held off the stubborn Milwaukee Brewers for a 9-7 victory at Fenway Park.

"You naturally get up for a club like Baltimore," Pesky said. "We're due to beat that ball club in this park. But I'll settle for a split."

A split would send Baltimore away still 4½ games back but 4½ games then would be worth a lot more than 4½ games now, especially since the two top teams don't meet again this season.

Baltimore was idle Monday night and in an abbreviated AL schedule, Kansas City Royals beat Chicago White Sox 3-2, Minnesota Twins defeated California Angels 7-6 in 12 innings and the game between Oakland A's and Texas Rangers was rained out.

Baltimore takes its best shot tonight, sending 21-game winner Jim Palmer against Boston ace Luis Tiant, 16-13.

"We just gotta win all the rest of them," said Red Sox outfielder Jim Rice, who knocked in his 100th run of the season. "Nothing new."

Fellow rookie sensation Fred Lynn also reached the 100 RBI mark Monday night. Dwight Evans added four RBI to the Boston attack. The Red Sox built an 8-0 bulge in the first two innings, more than enough to stave off a late Milwaukee surge that included George Scott's 30th homer of the year and Robin Yount's eighth.

Paul Splittorff's six-hitter and John Mayberry's tie-breaking two-out single in the ninth inning carried Kansas City past Chicago and inched the Royals within 6½ games of the idle A's in the West Division.

Steve Braun's single and Glenn Borgmann's double in the 12th inning gave Minnesota its victory over California, overshadowing Bruce Bochte's 5-for-5 night at the plate for the Angels.

Mets Shade Expos 3-2

Rookie in the Record Book

NEW YORK (AP) — It started out as a discouraging night for rookie Mike Vail of New York Mets but he wound up with a National League baseball record.

In the fourth inning Monday night, the New York Mets' rookie sensation hit a line drive right into the glove of Montreal third baseman Larry Parrish.

"I said to myself, 'That's it, that's the best shot I'll have at a hit'," said Vail.

His chance at a niche in the record books, he decided, was fading fast. "I got discouraged for a moment. I figured it was gonna be one of those nights."

Two innings later, though, Vail got the hit and the share of the record—a 23-game hitting streak, the longest ever by a National League rookie. It also drove in the Mets' first run.

And two innings after that, he got his second hit and second RBI of the game, an eighth-inning tie-breaking single that vaulted the Mets to a 3-2 victory over the Expos.

The sixth-inning RBI single off Steve Rogers put the Mets on the scoreboard and put Vail in the book alongside Philadelphia's Joe Rapp, who set the NL's rookie streak record of 23 straight games in 1921, and Richie Ashburn, also of the Phillies, who matched it in 1948. Guy Curtright of the 1943 Chicago White Sox owns the 26-game major league mark.

Vail's first hit scored Del Unser, who had walked and stolen second. In the eighth, Wayne Garrett batted for winner Jerry Koosman, and singled, then Unser bunted pinch-runner Gene Clines to second and Vail lined his game-winning single to left.

A Personal Letter to the Electors of Hastings-Peterborough Riding

My Friends:

The election campaign will be over Thursday night. Although this campaign has been shorter than usual, we have all heard the promises and criticisms of the opposition over and over again. It would appear that they believe that constant repetition will make those promises valid. I write this letter to help you sort out reality from dreamland.

Almost everything that I see as I drive around the riding has come under their attack but, you know, in this late summer sunshine, a lot of things look pretty good here in Hastings-Peterborough. Somehow, negative thinking seems so out of place here.

First of all, the level of prosperity that we enjoy here seems good indeed. The hundreds of cars and busy shoppers at the malls in the riding every Friday night is the highest ever. I have seen thousands enjoying themselves at your local fairs . . . the biggest crowds ever! The statistics show that we have a very high rate of employment. As you move around the riding, you just have to believe that we are a prosperous group. Prosperity, however, doesn't just happen. The Davis government of which I have been a member must have done the right things financially to lead us to that prosperity despite the noisy criticisms. Housing is another inappropriate issue in this riding. I am sure you have noticed the dozens of new homes being built in many parts of the riding. I see the good, snug, well-kept homes where you live and they look very comfortable and happily used. Housing is no issue here and all the talk seems out of place doesn't it?

In my rounds, I have met a lot of happy Senior Citizens. For the most part, they enjoy greatly their later years free from money worries. A great many Senior Citizens apartments at reasonable rents provide good housing for them and these apartments have been built in all parts of the riding with more to come. Once again there is no real election issue arising from the Senior Citizens of Hastings-Peterborough.

It has been a dry summer . . . good for tourists and holidayers who have visited our lakes and rivers in record numbers this year. It has shown how valuable our water resources really are and our great need to conserve them. Our riding has many recently built dams (and will have more) to control and conserve not only water but the whole environment that depends on it. Conservation is another non-issue in Hastings-Peterborough.

The opposition seems to have missed the only real issue in the campaign. It is simply the quality of service you have the right to expect from your elected representative and whether or not he has the ability and the skill to solve your personal political problems. My friends, when you cut through all the media patter, the claims and counter claims, there is only one issue:

Do you want the amateurish approach to representation loaded only with promises and hopes.

Do you want my professional, dedicated proven performance for the next four years?

I make only one promise . . . to continue my service to everyone in Hastings-Peterborough with all my skill, experience, dedication and concern as I have in the past.

Beverly, the boys and I thank you all for your many past kindnesses to us and for your generous support over many years.

I ask you once again to vote to elect me as your representative.

In all sincerity

Four Argos Lead in Offensive Statistics

By THE CANADIAN PRESS

Despite their last-place standing in the Eastern Conference of the Canadian Football League, members of Toronto Argonauts lead in four of seven offensive categories, statistics released Monday by the CFL reveal.

The EFC's top scorer is Zenon Andrusyshyn with 80 points; Doyle Orange leads the rushing department with 721 yards on 132 carries; Mike Eben with 34 receptions is the top pass receiver and Eric Allen has returned 24 kickoffs for 565 yards to lead that department.

The Argos' domination ends in the passing department, where Jimmy Jones of Montreal Alouettes passing total of 1,259 rates as top in the EFC. Montreal's Johnny Rodgers is the top punt returner and Ken Clark of Hamilton Tiger-Cats leads in punting.

DOYLE ORANGE

In the West, Edmonton Eskimos continue to dominate in both team and individual performances. The Eskimos' 7-1 record is best in the West and members of the team lead in three of seven offensive categories. Tom Wilkinson is the WFC top passer, Dave Cutler leads the scoring race and George McGowan leads the pass receiving department.

Calgary Stampeder sensation Willie Burden continues to top the rushing department while Gerald Kunyk is the leading punter in the conference.

The only man to lead two categories in either conference is Rocky Long, who tops the WFC in both punt and kickoff returns.

Late Cuts In Camp

TORONTO (CP) — Running back Dickie Morton and offensive tackle Joe Sullivan, a pair of late cuts from National Football League teams, started five-day trials Monday with the Eastern Football Conference Toronto Argonauts.

Morton, 5-foot-10 and 175 pounds, was dropped by Pittsburgh Steelers. Sullivan, 6-foot-4 and 245 pounds, was released from Buffalo Bills last week.

Tom Pullen, a former tight end with Ottawa Rough Riders who dropped him before the start of the season, was expected to arrive today to discuss the possibility of trying out with the Argos. Toronto lost first-string tight end Pete Muller with a knee injury in their last game Saturday night against British Columbia Lions.

The courage to do what is right... the competence to do it well.

Premier Bill Davis. The man who has led Ontario for the past 4½ years. Who has stood up firmly for Ontario when our interests were at stake. Under his leadership, our provincial economy is strong. Just look at the record:

- 170,000 new jobs a year since 1972; the best employment record in Canada
- Wages 25% higher than in Liberal Quebec and 20% higher than in NDP Manitoba
- Sales tax reduced to 5%, eliminated altogether on automobiles for 1975
- Freeze on gasoline and heating oil prices
- Canada's finest health care program without raising OHIP premiums
- Create Trauma Centres for special treatment of highway accident victims
- Over ⅓ of all housing starts in Canada
- More Provincial money for Ontario housing than all other Canadian provinces combined
- $1500 grant to first-time home buyers
- Land speculation tax to help control land costs and housing prices
- Rent review boards to prevent excessive rent increases, if necessary through court action
- Mortgage interest subsidy to continue 10¼% mortgages on low cost ownership housing units
- Equal rights to credit for women
- A firm positive stand against allowing partisan political activity in the Civil Service; a firm stand against giving Crown employees the right to strike
- School and university systems second to none, while re-emphasizing basic skills and maintaining educational spending ceilings to control costs
- Income tax rebates to seasonal farm workers
- Grants and loans to strengthen farm economy
- Far-reaching programs for senior citizens—Guaranteed Annual Income Supplement higher than any NDP or Liberal Provincial Government in Canada; free prescription drugs and OHIP coverage; proposed special supplementary allowances for those whose rents have been increased over 12%
- Proposals for tougher gun control laws; increased provincial support for Ontario police forces

Not all of these measures have pleased everyone. But leading a government is not like entering a popularity contest. And Bill Davis knows it. That is why, as Premier, he has always had the courage to do what is right—and has never backed away from the tough decisions. Today, with a Liberal government already squeezing you from Ottawa, Ontario simply can't afford a "kissing cousin" Liberal government at Queen's Park. On September 18th, vote for the Progressive Conservative candidate in your riding. Elect a P.C. government—and keep the strength and leadership of Premier Bill Davis.

A time for strength. Vote Progressive Conservative, September 18th

The handicapped or anyone requiring transportation to the polls should call the P.C. committee room in his or her riding.

Familiar Faces Missing at Leaf, Hab Camps

By THE CANADIAN PRESS

Traditional rivals Toronto Maple Leafs and Montreal Canadiens opened their National Hockey League training camps Monday with many familiar faces absent.

Gone from the Canadiens are captain Henri Richard and Jacques Laperriere, both retired. Dave Keon, Norm Ullman and Eddie Shack were among a half-dozen veterans discarded by the Leafs.

At Fitchburg, Mass., coach Don Cherry of Boston Bruins said his team would stress defence and backchecking this season. His job should be made easier since reports have indicated that star defenceman Bobby Orr will not sign a lucretive contract with the Fighting Saints.

Monday was the scheduled start of training camps for all 18 NHL teams with the exception of California Seals who started a day earlier.

Most World Hockey Association clubs start their training camps later this week and some don't open until early next week. The exceptions are the Toronto Toros and Winnipeg Jets who opened camp almost two weeks ago in Europe.

The NHL's 76-game pre-season schedule begins Friday and continues right up to Oct. 7—the date the regular season opens.

Canadiens opened camp in Montreal with the announcement that speedy winger Yvan Cournoyer had been chosen to replace the retired Richard as team captain.

Cournoyer was chosen in a vote by his team-mates, in contrast to the apppointment by management of Darryl Sittler last week as the Leafs' replacement for the departed Keon.

Montreal coach Scotty Bowman, like Cherry of the Bruins, also announced that one of his prime objectives this season is to cut down on the goals against.

The Leafs opened their camp in Toronto with the biggest competition at the centre. Rookies Jack Valiquette, Pat Boutette, Don Ashby and former California Seals player Stan Weir are all fighting for a centre job.

JIM PAPPIN

YVAN COURNOYER

With the departure of veterans Keon and Norm Ullman, the Leafs have only Sittler and George Ferguson set at centre.

The Bruins roster has few positions open to competition but coach Cherry said he would be taking a look at some rookies and minor-league players from the Rochester club in the American Nockey League.

The Stanley Cup champion Philadelphia Flyers also had little room for rookies to break in as they opened camp in Philadelphia.

The Flyers top draft prospect is forward Mel Bridgman. Forward Bob Sirois, who spent last season with Richmond in the AHL, is another promising prospect in camp.

The only departed Flyers veterans are centre Bill Clement who was traded to Minnesota and defenceman Ted Harris, who retired to take the coaching job at Minnesota.

At Ottawa, Atlanta Flames opened camp with Fred Creighton starting his first full season as coach and reporting that most of his players had reported in good condition.

Buffalo Sabres had about 50 players report for physical examinations at their St. Catharines, Ont., training site.

Veteran defenceman Terry Harper, acquired from Los Angeles Kings in the off-season trade for Marcel Dionne, was the only player who failed to report to the Detroit Red Wings camp at Kalamazoo, Mich.

Wings general manager Alex Delvecchio and coach Doug Barkley said they expected Harper would show up after having a few more days to consider his hockey future.

Pappin Absent

PORTLAND, Ore. (AP) — Right winger Jim Pappin was a notable absentee today at the California Seals' National Hockey League training camp.

Pappin, 36, who scored 36 goals for Chicago Black Hawks last season, was traded to the Seals in June for their team captain, Joey Johnston. The Oakland club has officially declared him a holdout.

Pappin had said after the trade was announced that he didn't want to move to California and preferred to be traded to an eastern team.

Bayern Aiming For 3 Straight

By REUTER

Bayern Munich parades in Luxembourg Wednesday, the beginning of its campaign to win Europe's soccer crown for the third year running as all get under way.

Even if Franz Beckenbauer's all-star squad retains the European Cup, other trophies must find new homes. Kiev Dynamo, holders of the Cup-Winners Cup, and Borussia Moenchengladbach, European Fooball Union (UEFA) champions, also won and now figure in the current European Cup play.

One West German team seems likely to be through to the second round of the UEFA Cup before its rivals strip for their opening matches. Duisburg built a 7-1 lead over Paralmini of Cyprus Sunday and will be playing the second leg on home ground tonight.

Two famous names are among the handful of clubs getting a 24-hour start in the and Ajax of Amsterdam.

Ajax, one point behind the leaders in the Dutch League, shouldn't encounter much difficulty during a visit to Glentoran, Northern Ireland, while Barcelona is confident of victory over Paok at Slonika.

The generous seedings mean that several of the European Cup matches look one-sided.

It would be surprising if Bayern Munich was to find itself in trouble against Jeunesse Duesch or if Kuopion Palloseura of Finland draws anything more than a shutout from its trek to Poland to meet Ruch Chorzow.

But Derby County, replacing Leeds United, last year's beaten finalists, as England's standard-bearer, faces tough opposition in Czechoslovakia where Slovan Bratislava, with several national team members in the lineup, is confident after a 4-0 win during the weekend.

Dynamo Kiev, too, can expect a severe test from Greek champion Olympiakos, just back from a North American tour and a three-week training camp in Toronto. But Dynamo Kiev, which doubles as the Soviet Union national side, is eight points clear in the Soviet league and in top form.

World Wrestling

Two Victories For Canadian

MOSCOW (AP) — Clive Llewellyn of London, Ont., won both his matches Monday in the under-150 pound class at the world freestyle wrestling championships in Minsk.

Llewellyn outpointed Hans Zbinden of Switzerland in the first round and pinned Poland's Ryszgard Soigalski in the last two seconds of the other contest.

In another match, Mark Massery of the United States pinned Gary Gardiner of Kitchener, Ont., in the under-126-pound division. Gardiner suffered injured ribs in the match and will be sidelined for the remainder of the tournament.

Meanwhile, the traditionally dominant Soviet team suffered a setback when three of their top wrestlers were defeated.

Anatoly Kraritonyuk, a favorite in the under 106-pound division, was outpointed by European champion Khasan Isaev of Bulgaria. Boris Bayayev lost on points to world champion Zeveigin Oidov of Mongolia in the under 137-pound class, and 1973 world champion Vasily Syulzhin was outpointed by Mehmed Uzun of Turkey in the under 181-pound class.

Protest Upheld

TORONTO (CP) — A protest filed by Oshawa Tony's of the Ontario Fastball League over their fourth semi-final game with Newmarket Ray's was upheld by the league Monday.

Oshawa protested the game Sunday after the first pitch, saying Newmarket pitcher Larry Marshall had not appeared in 10 league games as required.

A league spokesman said Monday that the 5-2 victory over Oshawa had been taken away from Newmarket because of Marshall's ineligibility. Marshall had played in seven league games during the season.

The spokesman said the best-of-five series would resume in Oshawa tonight with Newmarket leading the series 2-1.

No Wind, No Race

DETROIT (AP) — For the second day in a row, a lack of wind has forced postponement of the Canada's Cup yacht race series.

Sunday's race was cancelled because winds on Lake St. Clair were too quiet. Monday, American defender Golden Dazy and Canadian challenger Marauder from Toronto began what could have been the final race of the series, but the 10-knot winds died away and Golden Dazy crossed the finish line 26 seconds after the six-hour limit set by race officials expired.

Dazy leads the Canadian challenger Marauder 3-2 in the race series, which will be won by the first boat to earn four points.

Another race was scheduled for today on Lake St. Clair. If Marauder wins and ties the score, the deciding race will be held Wednesday.

Howe Will Play

HARTFORD, Conn. (AP)—Gordie Howe, recently named president of Houston Aeros, will be in the Aeros lineup Oct. 11 when they play New England Whalers. Howe's appearance as a player for the World Hockey Association will mark the first time in modern professional sports that a team president has been in the starting lineup. Howard Baldwin, managing general partner of the Whalers, said Howe telephoned Monday with the news.

Striking Patriots a Problem

NFL Executives Are Sweating

By THE ASSOCIATED PRESS

While the rest of the National Football League slumbered, six executives endured nightmarish hours of negotiations over the fate of the striking New England Patriots—and possibly that of the 1975 football season.

At an undisclosed meeting place in Washington, D.C., three members of the NFL management council met through the early morning over the Patriots' crisis with two representatives of the NFL Players Association and federal mediator W.J. Usery.

With each minute of discussion, the prospect loomed that matters could be wrenched from the hands of the six tired men. Some time in the morning, the striking Patriots planned to practise at the club's Amherst, Mass., training site.

But "if the Patriots report back to practise, we're going to lock them out,' said Sargent Karch, executive director of the management council and one of the men locked in the Washington meeting as dawn prepared to break. "They'll be locked out until there's a bargaining agreement or a no-strike pledge by the union (the NFLPA)."

That was exaclly what Karch, Theodore Kheel and Wellington Mara were trying to do in representing the 26 NFL owners: work out some kind of agreement with NFLPA executive director Ed Garvey and assistant Dick Berthelsen that could forestall further unpleasantness when the players showed up at camp.

There had been unpleasantness enough Monday, with threats flying of cancelled seasons and more player walkouts.

"If the Patriots don't practise, there will be problems," said player representative Brig Owens of Washington Redskins, who voted to back the Patriots if they were barred from practising. "There has to be unity."

Some NFL owners have also taken a firm stand. Carroll Rosenbloom, owner of Los Angeles Rams, said Monday that "there would be no choice but to fold up for the year" if the strike spread. "I am sure I speak for all the owners when I say we can not sit still for such blackmail.'

Meanwhile, early returns began to come in from training camps across the country. Dallas Cowboys voted 22 to 1 in f vor of walking out if the P were locked out of their Sund home opener against Housto. The New Orleans Saints "unan mously voted to support the re cent action of the Patriots an demand the reinstatement o the team," said player rep Rich Kingrea.

Cleveland Browns took a "wait and see" attitude regard- g the Pats' situation and ayer rep Bill Bergey of Phila- phia Eagles said: 'I can't ink of anybody on our club ho would support a strike."

The Pats strike began Satur- ay and forced cancellation of st Sunday's Patriots-New ork Jets exhibition game.

This is the second strike—most veteran players walked out on the exhibition season last year—since Jan. 31, 1974 when the last contract expired between the player union and the management council. Negotiations have been stalled because the NFLPA insists that league rules which bind a player to a team are illegal and must be resolved in the courts, while the league demands that such issues become a subject of collective bargaining.

Lancaster Expected to Play

CALGARY CP) — Quarterback Ron Lancaster will start as Saskatchewan Roughriders take on Calgary Stampeders in a Western Football Conference game tonight despite speculation he may have to be sidelined because of an aggravated knee injury.

Roughriders general manager Ken Preston confirmed Monday that Lancaster injured the knee against Edmonton Sept. 6 but said rumors of its seriousness are "exaggerated a little, as usual."

RON LANCASTER

It had been reported that a buildup of fluid in the knee had caused painful swelling that kept Lancaster off the practice field for two days after the injury, while Randy Mattingly, who hasn't played since July 23, practised at quarterback.

Asked whether the knee is expected to cause any problems in tonight's game, Preston replied: "I don't know about that, but all he has to do is stand back and throw."

Preston rated Jimmy Elder, suffering from torn stomach muscles, a "doubtful" starter and said Mike Jones, who arrived in time to play against Calgary last week, will start again as safety.

In the Calgary camp, general manager Gary Hobson predicted a tough defensive game. The Stampeders will be without their their top running back Willie Burden, who suffered a leg injury in last week's game.

David Means, a defensive end recently shipped out by the Buffalo Bills of the NFL, can be expected to play. However, linebacker Evan Jolitz, who came to the Stampeders on a five-day trial over the weekend, is rated only a slight chance of seeing action.

The Stampeders are in last place with three wins and five defeats. Tonight's game will not be televised.

The Roughriders, who easily whipped Calgary in all three of their encounters last year and first two this season, look to the game as a chance to regain a share of first-place with Edmonton Eskimos.

INDIANAPOLIS (AP) — Indianapolis Racers of the World Hockey Association announced Tuesday the signing of second-round amateur draft choice Kim Clackson and sixth-round pick Eric Sanderson. Clackson, a five-foot-10, 195-pound defenceman, and Sanderson, a 215-pound left winger, were teammates on Victoria Cougars of the Western Canada Hockey League.

THREE ON TRIAL

VANCOUVER (CP) —British Columbia Lions placed three players on five-day trials Monday with the Western Football Conference team. The Lions, winners of their last three games, decided to look at Canadian place-kicker Ed Thomas of Vancouver after he kicked three field goals Sunday for the junior Meralomas, and import running backs Wayne Harris and Alan Webster, recent cuts from Kansas City Chiefs of the National Football League.

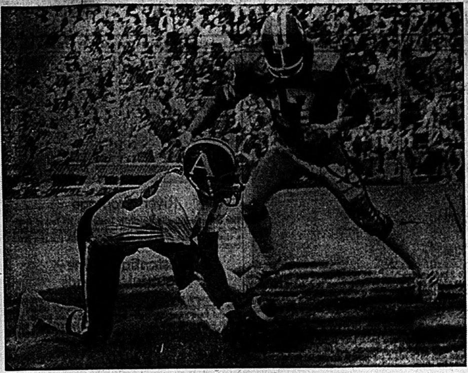
Hard Hitting Not for Riders' Richardson



Defender Zeroes in on Target

Lorne Richardson (17), the brilliant Saskatchewan Roughriders defensive back, admits he doesn't like to hit hard. Despite the heresy, the 190-pound Richardson would be welcome on any roster in the Canadian Football League. He was rookie of the year in the Western Conference two seasons ago and has made the al-star team in both his pro seasons. Richardson, now playing on his option year, expects to play elsewhere next year because there have been no meetings with Rider management. (CP Photo)

REGINA (CP) — To football coaches who preach that hard hitting is the only way to win, Lorne Richardson represents the exception to the rule.

The brilliant Saskatchewan Roughriders defensive back, in his third season in the Canadian Football League, admits he doesn't like to hit hard.

Despite the heresy, the 190-pound Richardson, a native of Moose Jaw, about 60 miles from where he now makes his football home, would be welcomed on any roster in the CFL.

He was rookie of the year in the Western Conference two seasons ago and has made the all-star team in both his pro seasons

Richardson's dislike of heavy contact came to light earlier this season when he was shifted from his accustomed cornerback spot because of an injury to safety Ted Provost.

Richardson, who attended University of Colorado on a football scholarship says he hurts all over because of the switch. The reason is that an inside back does more tackling than a corner.

"I pick my spots," he said. "I know when to do it now, but I pick my hits.

"I'm only going to do it when I know I'm going to get the best of it".

Richardson is a heretic in another sense, too; he thinks Ronnie Lancaster and George Reed get too much credit.

He said Roughrider players learn to accept the fact that quarterback Lancaster and fullback Reed, two of the greatest players in Canadian history, get most of the attention.

On a recent swing through Eastern Canada, where the Roughriders defeated Montreal Alouettes and Toronto Argonauts, Richardson pointed out that football is a two-way game.

"The defence won the game in Montreal . . . but all we hear about is the Ron and George show.

defensive end, but I haven't seen his name (in print) once since we've been down here."

Richardson specifies that he is not critical of Reed and Lancaster.

"Those two give great team leadership. They are team players. They've had success and they've handled it well. They still enjoy the game."

It's Time To Chop

By THE ASSOCIATED PRESS

With one National Football League team refusing to play, all 26 clubs Monday went about the business of telling some players their season was, for all intents and purposes, over, reducing their rosters to the final maximum of 43.

The teams had to trim their roll calls to 43 names but many of them said the final cuts might not be announced until today.

The 43-man roster limit has been criticized by the NFL players association and some head coaches, who claim there just aren't enough bodies around. This issue is just one of several that has kept the players association at odds with the NFL Management Council, bargaining agent for the 26 NFL owners.

These differences came to a head Saturday when New England Patriots voted to strike, forcing cancellation of last Sunday's game with New York Jets.

A spokesman for the Patriots said that no announcement would be made until today concerning New England's final cuts. He said the waiver wire opened at 4 p.m. EDT and it will take some time for the players to clear.

He also said that coach Chuck Fairbanks wanted to talk to the three released players but the strike situation had made it more difficult to reach them.

Meanwhile, several long-time NFL players, including all-pro offensive guard John Niland, were either given pink slips or new uniforms.

Niland, a 10-year standout with Dallas Cowboys, was traded to Philadelphia Eagles for an undisclosed draft choice. The Cowboys also announced they were cutting running back Bob Anderson and veteran offensive lineman Rodney Wallace.

DURBANO SIGNS

PITTSBURGH (AP) — Pittsburgh Penguins of the National Hockey League announced Sunday they have reached a multi-year contract agreement with veteran defenceman Steve Durbano. Durbano, a native of Toronto, played only one game last year, and was sidelined for the remainder of the season with a broken wrist.

AUCTION SALE

TOOL AUCTION
Due to the ever increasing demand for used tools and the scarcity of these items we have found it necessary to conduct a consignment tool and mechanics auction this month.
SEPT. 24/'75, WEDNESDAY
Because the price of new items is soaring more and more every day due to inflation, mechanics, handimen and other individuals are forced to pay higher prices for used items but still save money.
Items in great demand which you should sell if you don't need them are: air compressors, welders, grinders, sanders; power saws, socket sets, misc. tools, buffers, small steel and wood lathes, all kinds of measuring tools.
If you have any of these items, call us and find out how to consign them to our sale — (you pay only the commission).

Your Horoscope

By BERNICE BEDE OSOL

Wednesday, Sept. 17

Aries (March 21-April 19) You'll be generally fortunate at what you undertake today. However, for some reason you'll shave your own chances a bit.

Taurus (April 20-May 20) Be sure to acknowledge one who is helpful today, or else he may be hesitant to do you a favor again.

Gemini (May 21-June 20) There will be an opportunity presented to you through a friend, but you're likely to take less advantage of it than you could.

Cancer (June 21-July 22) Make it a point to see that each share equally today where there will be three parties involved, or someone will be slighted.

Leo (July 23-Aug. 22) You're still lucky today in matters requiring teamwork. Your partner will hold up his end. Just be sure you hold up yours.

Virgo (Aug. 23-Sept. 22) You'll be tempted to slack off a bit where your work or career is concerned today, but you shouldn't. The possibility of larger rewards is still there.

Libra (Sept. 23-Oct. 23) If you're doing any entertaining today, keep the group to a manageable number. A few extra guests will tip the boat.

Scorpio (Oct. 24-Nov. 22) You'll enjoy reasonable success today, provided you don't let one who doesn't know what to do with her time involve you in a fruitless pursuit.

Sagittarius (Nov. 23-Dec. 21) You'll be a bit reluctant to put your ideas to the test today, though they'll work surprisingly well if given half a chance.

Capricorn (Dec. 22-Jan. 19) Your material prospects are still promising, but there's a small caution: You may not be fully aware of the opportunities surrounding you.

Aquarius (Jan. 20-Feb. 19) Your imagination is your most dependable ally today. It's wise to consider suggestions, but don't let them overwhelm your views.

Pisces (Feb. 20-March 20) Something profitable to you will suddenly develop out of the blue today. Failure to follow through will diminish its worth.

Opening lead — Q♣

By OSWALD and JAMES JACOBY

American Bridge Teacher's Association's President Ed Gordy and his wife, Laura Jane, believe in giving beginner's hands that show some important principle of play, but where there is only one really good line.

The bidding as shown employs a 1935 Jacoby gadget. This gadget is that the jump to four after partner opens two shows trumps, but denies an ace, king or singleton.

South is disappointed to find dummy with three spades, but the hand is still a sure thing.

All South has to do is to draw trumps, cash his clubs and diamonds, enter dummy with the nine of trumps, lead a spade and stick in the jack or 10 after East plays low.

West wins and is totally and completely end-played.

A Jacoby modern gadget gets to the slam after a bidding sequence that differs from the one shown in the box. Two clubs (artificial), two diamonds (no ace, king or queen), two hearts, three hearts, six hearts.

Ask the Jacobys

An Iowa reader wants to know what you should open with:
♠AJ32 ♥K96 ♦A84 ♣Q72.

The answer is that in standard American, Jacoby modern or any normal system you should open one club. This makes your rebidding problem a cinch. You bid one spade over one heart or diamond, two spades over one spade and pass to either two clubs or one notrump. If partner responds by jumping to three clubs you bid three notrump.

Tilted Uterus Common Problem

By G. C. THOSTESON, MD

Dear Dr. Thosteson: What would cause a retroverted uterus in a woman of 57? I am past menopause. I have much pain in the lower back and lower abdomen. My doctor gave me some exercise to do, and he told me to sleep on my tummy. Will this help the uterus?—Mrs. B. H.

The uterus normally tilits forward. A backward tilt is called a retroversion. It is held in normal position by a complex system of ligaments, and it would be difficult to say in any case just what causes these shiftings.

It is doubtful that your pains are due to the retroversion after 57 years, and it is also doubtful that exercise and position of sleep will alter the position of your uterus.

Many women have retroversion, and are unaware of it until they are told about it. Then, rather strangely, the symptoms appear. It's just human nature.

However, this is not to discount your back pains. They could be related to other factors such as back muscle problems, etc. In this event, an adjustment in sleeping position might help you. This is most likely your doctor's reason for suggesting it.

Dear Dr. Thosteson: What is the difference between cholesterol and triglycerides?

My doctor told me that my cholesterol is normal, but that my triglycerides level is too high. I am on a low-fat diet and also take medication to lower my triglycerides.

I am 67 years old.—Mrs. G.

While both cholesterol and triglycerides are involved in lipid (fat) levels in the blood, they may arrive there from different routes.

Cholesterol, translated from the Greek, means solid bile. Gallstones, for example, contain more than 95 per cent cholesterol. Triglycerides are also lipids, but they are produced in the body from carbohydrate foods (starches and sugars) as well as from fatty foods.

About a third of our body's cholesterol comes from certain foods that contain what are known as "saturated fats." These are animal fats that remain solid at room temperature (butter, for example) as opposed to "unsaturated fats," vegetable oils, for example. The rest is manufactured within the body.

Both of these lipids are thought to be involved somehow in the formation of arterial hardening and plaque formation, although it is not clear just to which degree each is a culprit. In cholesterol, the body seems at fault, perhaps manufacturing more of this than it normally should, independent of the amount of fat intake.

Not too long ago it was cholesterol which was getting all the bad press for its role in arterial deficiency. Only in recent years have physicians been looking to the triglycerides levels, as in your case.

The point, which I have made on other occasions, is that both must be watched simultaneously. And importantly, both levels can be markedly reduced by cutting total calorid intake from foods of all chemical composition—starches, sugars or fats.

The blood lipids problem may prove to be as much a factor of how much we eat as of what we eat. For, while it is unclear just what role each (cholesterol and triglycerides) play in arterial wall deposits, it seems clear that they both appear more abundantly in obese persons.

Dear Dr. Thosteson: Would you give me some hints for eating without swallowing air. I am having some digestion disturbances which my doctor says are caused by air swallowing.—A. W. B.

Eat more slowly. Chew your food well. Don't talk too much while eating. Don't gulp your food.

Oil Producers Buy Arms and Equipment

NEW YORK (AP) — Military hardware, manufactured goods and construction equipment are the goods most sought after by the oil-producing nations.

With nearly $100 billion in oil revenues last year, the nations belonging to the Organization of Petroleum Exporting Countries (OPEC) increased imports by about 70 per cent to $36 billion, according to figures compiled by the United States state department. Another $14 billion was paid for services.

It is to pay for these imports, and their increasing cost, that OPEC countries say they need even higher oil prices.

Arms make up a big part of the total. The Pentagon says U.S. arms sales to OPEC nations during the fiscal year 1974 totalled $4.4 billion, double 1973 shipments.

Most other imports by OPEC countries have been for national development, construction of housing and factories, port facilities and transportation systems.

"They are importing to build their countries," said J. Richard Pryor, president of a small New York export house which specializes in automotive repair equipment.

OPEC import prices have not risen as fast as oil prices. A U.S. treasury department study concluded that the price of OPEC's imports has increased 220 per cent since 1955, while crude oil costs have risen more than tenfold.

And a recent United Nations stuy found that raw commodity price increases—excluding petroleum—have outstripped price gains of manufactured goods in 11 of the last 15 years.

The U.S. commerce department says U.S. exports of transportation equipment to the oil producers nearly doubled last year to $925 million, while shipments of iron and steel products surged to $481 milllion from $159 million.

New York bankers expect OPEC's imports of goods and services to continue to rise by as much as 20 per cent a year as a result of mammoth development plans proposed in Iran, Saudi Arabia and Venezuela. Saudi Arabia, for example, is completing details of a $140-billion plan that will emphasize road construction, housing, hospitals and schools and industrial development.

Venezuela, with iron and coal reserves as well as oil, plans a major steel complex.

Whether the oil nations carry out their plans depends on oil revenues, inflationary trends and the co-operation of the industrialized world.

At least one oil economist, Walter Levy, doubts the OPEC lands can maintain their import pace. Port and transport congestion, lack of labor, and money problems will cause the oil nations to delay or cancel some of their plans, Levy says.

In addition to machinery and other durable goods, the oil nations imported food in large quantities last year. Commerce figures show $892 million in wheat bought from the United States, up from $397 million the year earlier. Imports of vegetable oils and fat climbed to $353 million, rice to $223 million, other foods and tobacco to $585 million.

The U.S. state department says Iran was the biggest of the OPEC importers last year, buying $7.2 billion outside the U.S. Second was Venezuela, with $4.5 billion, followed by Indonesia ($3.8 billion), Algeria ($3.7 billion) Saudi Arabia ($3.6 billion), Iraq ($3.1 billion), Libya ($3.1 billion), Nigeria ($2.7 billion), Kuwait ($1.8 billion), United Arab Emirates ($1.4 billion), and Ecuador and Quatar, both under a billion.

Chops Delivered

KETTERING, England (CP) — A local meat company delivered 100 lamb chops and 65 steaks to David Steele, a Northants and England cricket player. The company had promised Mr. Steele a lamb chop for every run he scored up to 100 in the Headingley Test match and a steak for every run after that. Mr. Steele hit 73 in the first innings and 92 in the second.

Cattle Registered

TORONTO (CP) — About 11,500 cattle producers have registered under the government's beef-calf income stabilization program which guarantees producers 50 cents a pound this fall for stocker calves, an agriculture ministry spokesman said Monday.

Average Rose

CALGARY (CP) — Liquid petroleum production in Alberta averaged 1,420,945 barrels a day for the week ended Sept. 8, the Alberta energy board has reported. Production in the previous week averaged 1,393,263 barrels a day.

Had Surplus

PARIS (Reuter) — France had a $280-million trade surplus in August on a seasonally-adjusted basis, the foreign trade ministry announced Monday. French exports in August were worth $4.28 billion and imports $4 billion.

Developed Microbe

SCHENECTADY, N.Y. (CP) — Ananda Chakrabarty, a microbiologist for General Electric, says he has developed a microbe that eats oil and other hydrocarbons faster than any previous strain tested. He said the microbe could be used "in Canada's North . . . where oil pipeline spills are a serious threat to the permafrost environment." He said tests in fresh water have shown the microbe can eat oil or petroleum products at a faster rate than any other tested.

New Bond Issue Sets Record Interest

OTTAWA (CP) — The federal government, under strong attack for encouraging high interest rates, will pay a record 10-per-cent interest rate on money borrowed through a new bond issue next month.

The rate will be paid on an Oct. 1 issue of 20-year bonds, which the finance department announced Monday will be sold at 98 per cent of the face value—giving the bonds an annual yield of 10.24 per cent.

The 10-per-cent rate is a record for regular government bonds—its major method of borrowing—and is topped only by bonus payments on some past issue of Canada savings bonds—a special type of bond.

Announcement of the new bond rate came in the wake of the resignation last week of John Turner as finance minister and criticism that a recent increase in the lending rate by the Bank of Canada will lead to further unemployment and higher housing costs.

Bank governor Gerald Bouey announced the increases—to nine from 8.25 per cent—on Sept. 2, saying it was an attempt to curb inflation by dampening credit spending and slowing the expansion in the amount of money in circulation.

The move was quickly followed by an equivalent increase in chartered bank prime rates, the basis for consumer loan and mortgage rates.

Opposition politicians and labor spokesmn attacked the rate increase on the basis that it would make corporate borrowing more costly and increase unemployment by slowing recently revived productive activity.

In the week following the Bank of Canada increase, the value of the Canadian dollar increased marginally by four-tenths of one lent and is now worth 2.8 cents less than the United States dollar.

Until Mr. Turner's successor is found and review of economic policy undertaken, "the bank can be expected to persevere in a determined effort to apply monetary restraint," says economist William Mackness.

Mr. Mackness says if interest rates increase any further, there will be a greater inflow of foreign capital because some provinces and corporations will have a greater incentive to borrow outside the country where interest rates are lower.

The government's concern at paying the 10-per-cent interest rate on the latest bond issue is demonstrated by the fact that it hopes to buy up as much as 60 per cent of the 20-year bonds before they reach maturity.

The terms of the issue prohibit calling all the bonds in before the term is completed. But it intends to operate a purchase fund to buy at least three-quarters of one per cent of the outstanding bonds every three months, provided they are available on the open market at the original price plus interest.

Regulations Must Cover Private Swimming Areas

KITCNENER, Ont. (CP) — Private swimming areas which charge admission to the public should be governed by the same regulations as publicly-operated swimming pools, a coroner's jury recommended Monday.

The jury was investigating the death of Kurt Hartfiel, 7, of Kitchener, at a private swimming area here last June 22.

He was unable to swim and was found dead, floating in about six feet of water. The boy, who had come to Canada from Germany six days before his death, had gone to the area with friends of his parents.

Irving Gendel, the resort's owner, told the jury that lifeguards were not hired because attendance dropped in the last few years. It was not profitable to employ lifeguards because the largest daily attendance during the summer was 350.

The swimming area once had as many as seven lifeguards when 4,000 persons used the area daily, he said.

Michael Parsons of Burlington, a water safety expert with the Canadian Red Cross, said the Red Cross would like similar private swimming areas to be put under the same regulations as public pools.

Lewis Appeals to Voters, Give the NDP a Chance

HAMILTON (CP)—Stephen Lewis blasted Progressive Conservative and Liberal campaign tactics Monday and asked voters to "give the New Democratic Party a chance" in Thursday's Ontario election.

The NDP leader said the Conservative re-election drive has collapsed and the Liberal campaign has been damaged by rude, intemperate and empty election rhetoric.

The result, he said at a news conference, is an unusually large segment of undecided voters late in the campaign.

The public is frustrated and disenchanted with the two old-line parties but unsure about the NDP, he said.

He urged voters to look closely at the NDP campaign before deciding to support another party.

"It's been a thoughtful campaign. It's been an honorable campaign. ...Give the New Democratic Party a chance."

The NDP is the only party to [illegible] personalities and focus solely on issues that affect [illegible], he said.

He promised, whether in government or opposition, that NDP members would work to increase housing supplies, hold rents in check, preserve agricultural land, restrain petroleum prices and put the public interest ahead of big business.

By contrast, Premier William Davis had campaigned "and lost" on his record in office, and Liberal Leader Robert Nixon had run a smug and self-serving campaign.

He accused the premier of selling out long-standing Conservative principles with a rash of last-minute promises to retain voter support. But he predicted that the voters would see through this.

"Where have you been (for the last four years) Billy Boy?" he asked.

Mr. Lewis said many voters are reluctant to support the NDP because of inherent anti-socialist attitudes. But increasing numbers are beginning to see that the party can operate effectively and soundly, he argued.

This had been proven by NDP governments in British Columbia, Saskatchewan and Manitoba. All three had governed in the public interest without driving business under or grinding the economy to a halt.

Smallwood Back

Victory for PCs In Newfoundland

ST. JOHN'S, Nfld. (CP) — Premier Frank Moores and his Progressive Conservatives were returned to power Tuesday in the Newfoundland general election but the premier lost several of his ministers to the Liberals.

The 42-year-old premier, with two fewer members on the government side than he had at dissolution of the legislature Aug. 25, will face an enlarged and almost certainly enlivened opposition when it reconvenes.

Back in the house will be Joey Smallwood, 74, onetime Liberal powerhouse who Mr. Moores toppled four years ago but who says the time to retire is when "they bury me."

The Conservatives won 30 of the 51 seats in the house. The Liberals, under Ed Roberts, Smallwood's successor, picked up 16, and the former premier leads a four-man group under the banner of a new Liberal Reform Party.

Steve Neary, a former Smallwood Liberal cabinet minister, won the other seat as an independent Liberal.

JOEY SMALLWOOD

The number of seats was increased from 42 in the last election in 1972.

Final standings:

	1975	1972
Conservatives	30	33
Liberal	16	9
Liberal Reform	4	—
Independent Liberal	1	—
Totals	51	42

Mr. Moores was cautious when asked if he was satisfied.

"I would be if I knew we had 30 seats," but many of the ridings were won by the narrowest of margins.

Nine seats went by margins of 153 votes or less, two of them by eight votes and one by six.

Mr. Moores said he expects Mr. Smallwood to take his seat as the new member for Twillingate ,the northeast coast riding where he was elected personally.

"He's got a toy now. I think he can have a lot of fun with it."

Another development that took a lot away from the PC win for the premier was a wide swath cut through his 18-man cabinet by the opposition.

Mr. Smallwood defeated Recreation Minister Tom Doyle and four Liberals knocked off other ministers. Manpower Minister Ed Maynard ended a see-saw battle through the election-night counting with an 83-vote margin over his Liberal opponent.

The New Democratic Party failed again to elect its first member to the Newfoundland legislature.

With 90 per cent of the votes counted election night, results showed the PCs with 46 per cent of the ballots cast, well down from the 60 per cent they gathered in 1972.

The Liberals equalled their 37-per-cent showing of the last election and the NDP had four per cent, compared with a fractional showing in 1972.

The Liberal Reform Party, organized by Mr. Smallwood this summer, finished with 12 per cent of the vote and the aging political warrior displayed some quick mathematics concerning the vote percentages.

He said the combined Liberal and Liberal Reform vote—he prefers to refer to the followers of Mr. Roberts as "old line Liberals"—was 49 per cent compared with 46 per cent for the PCs.

May Eliminate CIA Covert Operations

WASHINGTON (AP) — President Ford intends to revamp the Central Intelligence Agency, and among plans being considered are stripping the agency of its covert operations and naming an over-all co-ordinator of United States intelligence activities.

The co-ordinator would not be the CIA director, said administration sources, who added that any major change should not be expected for several months.

Ford told a news conference Tuesday that no matter what the fate of the CIA, American political action aimed at influencing events in other countries was likely to continue.

"I wouldn't rule out necessary political activities by the United States if it involves our security," he said.

Ford said his staff and appropriate federal agencies are studying recommendations made by the Murphy and Rockefeller commissions, which have investigated the CIA.

From these and other sources Ford will make administrative changes in the agency and propose legislative recommendations to Congress on U.S. intelligence gathering apparatus, he said.

On other subjects in the informal news conference, Ford said:

—Federal courts apparently have not taken sufficient notice of 1974 legislation that would make forced busing of school children a last resort.

—The U.S. has made no firm commitment to supply F-16 fighter bombers and Pershing missiles to Israel as part of a new Sinai agreement. "They are on the shopping list," and they will be discussed with the Israeli government, he said.

—He was disappointed in the House of Representatives intelligence committee's release last week of classified information relating to events preceding the 1973 Arab-Israeli war. Such action by a private citizen would represent a "serious criminal offence," he said.

—He opposes wage and price controls as a means of fighting inflation and he again assailed Congress for excessive spending.

Ford declined to specify what changes might be made in the CIA or when.

'Don't expect in the next two or three, or even six months, to suddenly see 4,000 persons transferred from the CIA to some other agency . . . ," a White House official said.

The official said the role of the Foreign Intelligence Advisory Board, National Security Agency and the Defence Intelligence Agency must be considered in the over-all analysis. A merger of certain functions of two or more of these agencies was a possibility.

Danson Seeks Approval

OTTAWA (CP) — Urban Affairs Minister Barney Danson will seek firm approval next week from provincial governments for a draft national home warranty plan worked out in July.

An aide to Mr. Danson said this week the minister is concerned about slow provincial reaction to the plan which was developed with the help of provincial government officials.

The Consumers Association of Canada (CAC) says it suspects provincial governments are more interested in creating their own warranty programs than in backing a national plan. The CAC says the consumer would be better protected by a national scheme.

Cabinet Faces Economic Woes

OTTAWA (CP) — The federal cabinet, facing some major shifts among the existing 28 portfolios, is meeting all day today in a Gatineau Hills retreat to prepare for the resumption of Parliament Oct. 14.

Harsh economic problems have been gathering momentum since Parliament rose at the end of July and Prime Minister Trudeau's problems include naming a finance minister to succeed John Turner.

This will be the third such gathering of the Trudeau cabinet since the government's near-defeat in the 1972 general election.

The aim is a political stocktaking and setting priorities on the basis of more than a dozen policy papers that have been forged into a single document for discussion purposes.

It will include the latest conclusions about an economy that continues to show an inflation rate of more than 11 per cent, unemployment of more than seven per cent, renewed tight money with high interest rates and little sign that wages and prices are slackening their upward climb.

The meeting, beginning at 10 a.m. EDT, at the estate of a former mining millionaire will have few if any civil servants present and one new face.

That is Pierre Juneau, former chairman of the Canadian Ra- named to succeed Gerard Pelletier who resigned to become ambassador to France.

Mr. Juneau is busy campaigning for election in Montreal Hochelaga in a Oct. 14 byelection.

The key debate is expected to be just how tough to get in cracking down on the persistent rate of inflation.

Mr. Turner's last budget June 23 shied away from price and wage controls once again but the recovery rate has been discouraging since then and there are reports that more experts now feel that controls are necessary, especially in view of signs that the Canadian economy will be lagging behind the U.S. recovery for another year at least.

Meanwhile, there is plenty of speculation about who will be involved in the cabinet shifts Mr. Trudeau may feel it necessary to make. A sense of change is evident among the ministries.

Slasher Gets Life

LOS ANGELES, Calif. (Reuter) — Vaughn Greenwood, the man police say is the prime suspect in the Los Angeles slasher murders, was sentenced to prison from 32 years to life.

Greenwood, 32, who has not yet been charged with the slasher murders, was sentenced for a hatchet-and-knife attack on two men and six burglaries, including two at the home of actor Burt Reynolds, in January and February.

Judge Jack Goertzen, at the beginning of Greenwood's trial, placed a ban on police making any statements about the slasher killings in case it would prejudice the trial.

U.S. Pledges Israel PLO Veto Power

By THE ASSOCIATED PRESS

The United States has secretly pledged that Israel will have a veto over participation of the Palestine Liberation Organization (PLO) at future Arab - Israeli peace conferences in Geneva, the Jerusalea Post says.

The English-language daily's Washington correspondent says a secret "memorandum of agreement" gives Israel veto power over any additional participants at Geneva.

The Post says the memorandum was a bilateral agreement signed Sept. 1 by Foreign Minister Yigal Allon and U.S. State Secretary Henry Kissinger in connection with the new Israeli-Egyptian pact.

A spokesman for the Israeli foreign ministry declined to confirm or deny the existence of the memorandum. But he said the Israeli government has "the very decisive right" to decide whether additional parties are invited to future Geneva peace talks.

The Post said diplomatic sources confirmed that if there were no substantive negotiations between Israel and Syria within the next few months, the Geneva conference would most likely reconvene by the end of the year or at the start of 1976.

Meanwhile, the PLO issued a statement rejecting a charge by Egyptian President Anwar Sadat that the Palestinian command was being manipulated by the Soviet Union.

LIP Funds Double In Hastings County

By HARRY MULHALL
Staff Reporter

More than double the money is available in the Bellevile area and much of Hastings County for Local Initiatives Program funding this year.

The number of applications is also up.

About $314,000 is available for projects in Hastings riding, says a letter from Manpower and Immigration Minister Robert Andras to Jack Ellis, the constituency's MP.

This compares with $149,000 in 1974 when 17 applications for LIP funding of local projects was received.

To date, about 30 projects have been proposed from various sources in the area.

This year LIP allocations are based on a formula that takes into consideration the projected unemployment rate.

Mr. Andras' letter says the rate has been estimated at 8.37 per cent of a labor force of 28,846 in Hastings.

Meantime, a local citizen's advisory committee will meet tonight to begin a scrutiny of the Hastings applications. Membership on the committees — aimed at injecting grassroots advice into the final selection process — are suggested by local MPS.

Belleville Plaza Will Be Covered

By COLIN BRUCE
Staff Reporter

The Belleville Plaza will be completely roofed-in by the end of November, it was announced Tuesday.

Plaza manager T. A. Carruthers, Tuesday, said a contract for the work was let Monday. Contract price is $750,000. The Trenton firm of Mirtren Construction Ltd. (Formerly Miron Wiggers) won the contract.

Work is to begin immediately on the mall roof and some related renovations of the plaza.

The spokesman said once the roof is in place work will stop allowing plaza merchants to handle the heavy Christmas season trade.

"Work will resume in January with everything completed before the spring," the spokesman said.

The renovation of store fronts will not be undertaken immediately but will be completed "on an-ongoing basis."

"Our first and foremost objective is to completely re-vamp the existing mall . . . and possibly as early as next spring we will be getting along with an addition to house an anchor tenant," the spokesman said.

The roof will mean a whole change of ideas and attitudes among the merchants at the plaza, said the spokesman.

Negotiations are continuing with a number of major tenants for plaza floor space but no announcements have yet been made.

One change that will be taking place at the plaza will be the transfer of the LCBO from its existing quarters beside the Canadian Imperial Bank of Commerce into the vacant furniture store across the plaza walkway. The bank is making plans to enlarge its operation into the LCBO quarters, said the spokesman.

"We're situated on major roadways in the middle of a strong residential community," the spokesman said. "We have been looking forward to enclosing the structure since we bought the plaza in 1974."

Parties Differ on Methods To Control Education Costs

PICTON — Unless there are ceilings on education spending "the sky is the limit" says James Taylor, MPP Prince Edward-Lennox.

At an all-candidates session sponsored Tuesday by the Picton Rotary Club each of the three candidates in Prince Edward-Lennox riding was asked to outline how he would curb "runaway spending on education".

Mr. Taylor observed provincial assistance to different parts of Ontario varies depending on the region in question.

"We believe spending must tie in with the number of pupils in elementary and secondary schools," he said.

Grant formulas have been established and ceilings at the elementary level are bout $900 per pupil. At the secondary level the figure is about $1,400 per student.

"We don't believe in taking off the ceilings," commented Mr. Taylor.

New Democratic Party candidate Jan Nicol said the cost of education is a common concern and in terms of dollars it will not drop.

"The wrong people pay for these things," emphasized Miss Nicol.

She observed that the middle-class "pays over and over".

The NDP candidate said education should be a priority and commented that teachers should be consulted to learn where the areas of overspending exist.

Miss Nicol remarked that the three R's should be stressed more at the elementary school level instead of taught repeatedly at high schools and universities.

Liberal candidate Keith MacDonald says he has no solution for cutting education costs.

He noted that "good, strong education" is needed with a return to the basics and more discipline. The candidate favors a better parent-teacher-pupil relationship.

Nixon Says Tory Grants Won't Sway Grit Voters

BRIGHTON — Robert Nixon, provincial Liberal leader, told almost 500 cheering supporters he is pleased with his party's campaign and is optimistic local candidates Isobel Kirkpatrick and Hugh O'Neil would be at Queen's Park to help him form a new government after Thursday's election.

Addressing a group in the Brighton High School gymnasium Tuesday night, he told the Northumberland and Quinte Liberals the Davis government would not be able to buy the election saying the premier had kept his word not to make "cheap promises" and is making only expensive ones.

Mrs. Kirkpatrick, one of 18 women Liberal candidates, is not running just for show and that she had contested and won the nomination and would defeat her rival, Russell Rowe, Speaker of the House, Mr. Nixon said.

The Liberal leader said the premier's fiscal and educational policies have been the focus of his attacks because Mr. Davis said he would stand on his record.

The Liberal leader said th present government is totally responsible for the $4 billion net debt which was non-existent when the premier took office.

Directing his speech towards the educational system, he said Mr. Davis "was the godfather" of the present structure having been a former minister of education and closely in on the policy decisions for more than a decade.

Mr. Nixon said that since "the big blue balloon" called the election the Conservatives have travelled the province offering monies and grants to different areas, even resurrecting discarded development plans, like the Spadina Expressway in Toronto, when it was convenient.

Three Candidates Split On Death Penalty Issue

By MARG HAYLOCK
Staff Reporter

PICTON — Unemployment, government spending on education and capital punishment numbered among the issues debated during a meeting of all three election candidates in the Prince Edward-Lennox riding sponsored here Tuesday by the Picton Rotary Club.

Progressive Conservative MPP for Prince Edward-Lennox, James Taylor, New Democratic Party candidate Jan Nicol and Liberal standard-bearer Keith MacDonald each addressed Rotarians briefly on topics of their choice before facing questions.

Mr. Taylor stressed Ontario has the most prosperous economy of any province in the western world but often this prosperity is taken for granted.

"A good, strong economy does not just happen. In Ontario there is good sound government and good sound leadership," he emphasized.

The MPP noted that measures have been taken to create 170,000 jobs a year and action recorded in stimulation of employment and efforts to dampen inflation.

Government has been streamlined with a cutback in civil servants.

Mr. Taylor said the Conservative Party is the only party that states it will stick with ceilings on government spending on education. He added that education costs cannot be cut without these ceilings.

Jan Nicol, NDP candidate for Prince Edward-Lennox asked why the Progressive Conservatives should be considered the business party "other than that is where they get their funds."

She said since the Davis government came into power the gross national provincial product increase has dropped from five per cent a year to .3 per cent for 1975.

Housing starts are at an all-time low and from 1966 to 1975 the farm population has dropped 38 per cent.

Ontario's unemployment rate now is at the highest it has been since the end of the wars.

"We think that we are the only party that can pay for more social progams," said Miss Nicol.

She said this would be done, in part, by raising corporate taxes.

Miss Nicol said inflation must be controlled through selective price controls on oil companies and large food chains. Controls on oil prices would benefit all Ontario industries as well as tourism.

Liberal candidate Keith MacDonald told Rotarians he does not believe in making "a lot of promises" during his campaign.

He said that if elected he would listen to all constituents and take their views to Queen's Park.

"I am definitely not a policy man," he asserted.

The Liberal candidate said that too many politicians keep only a small per centage of the promises made on the campaign trail.

He did state that he would support the type of local government favored by his constituents should restructuring fall under discussion. Also, he favors more support to local planning boards and farm stabilization programs.

When questioned as to, his stand on capital punishment Mr. MacDonald said he believes in "an eye for an eye" approach and would like to see the death penalty enforced.

James Taylor strongly supported capital punishment and said the law provides for it and it should be carried out.

Miss Nicol did not support capital punishment. She said there is no study in the world to show correlation between the death penalty and a decrease in murders.

Road Conditions Prompt Complaints from Council

PICTON — At a special meeting Tuesday night town council passed a bylaw to authorize the borrowing of $290,000 upon debentures toward the cost of improvements to Picton's water works system in Delhi and the core area of town.

The debentures will be dated October 1, 1975, and will be issued one at a time, payable in 20 annual installments of principal on October 1 in each of the years 1976 to 1995.

Councillor Charles Hepburn said he feels Picton residents should be aware of the fact that council has committed itself for a 20 year period. He observed the commitment is "perfectly legitimate" and offered his comment only as an observation that taxpayers should be informed of the terms of the bylaw.

Councillor Hepburn strongly criticized the condition of Picton streets where work to improve the water works system already has started.

He said the streets are not properly marked or maintained and represent "a disgrace to the town."

"I don't think they are being patched properly. It's a lousy job," said councillor Hepburn.

Councillor Norman March noted that when he travelled down Bridge Street recently he observed a six inch drop in the pavement that had not been marked.

He added that it was "a disgrace" to leave such a potential hazard without a caution light on a heavily travelled street.

"I've heard of two or three near misses, as people try to stay on the paved sections," said Picton reeve Larry Richardson.

Picton mayor Donald King commented that he strongly agrees with complaints of the street conditions and said that he has requested the manager of the Public Utilities Commission to see that back-filling is properly done. He stressed that he will speak again with the PUC manager to convey council's observations.

Picton Gets Approval For Plant Expansion

PICTON — Picton town council Tuesday passed a bylaw accepting a tender of $848,228 for modifications and improvements to the sewerage treatment plant here.

An order from the Ontario Municipal Board was read granting the town's application for the project. The order authorized the town to issue debentures for a sum not exceeding $580,000 for a term not to exceed 20 years providing the project was approved by 75 per cent of council.

Town engineer David Hickman said the disposal plant now has a capacity of 540,000 gallons a day. After improvements are made the new capacity will be one million gallons a day with a maximum peak of three million gallons.

Mr. Hickman added that when the pant was built initially it was geared to handle 85 gallons per capita per day.

The improved treatment plant will have the capacity to serve 8,000 persons, about double the number that can be served through the present plant.

Mr. Hickman, in an interview following the council meeting, said terms of the contract state that during construction of plant improvements no sewerage will be allowed to overflow into Picton Bay.

Target date for completion of the work is 65 weeks from the start of contruction.

The contract for the job was awarded to Hadovic Construction Limited, the lowest bidders.

The Last Hurrah

Subdivision Halted

TRENTON — Town officials are perplexed by the rejection of an eight-home subdivision by the ministry of housing (MOH) saying a restriction on new development was lifted three years ago after the town agreed to build the new sewage treatment plant and correct an inadequate storm drain system.

Work on the three - year drain improvement is ahead of schedule, and is 40 per cent complete.

The issue was brought before council this week when it was notified the developer, Mark Kathis of Belleville, had been granted a hearing before the ministry of environment's appeal board on October 1, to be held in council chambers.

Arie Hoornweg, commissioner of works for Trenton said larger developments have been approved by the housing ministry, including the Apple Grove development, Phases I and II and an apartment building with more than 200 units being serviced by existing sewage facilities.

Mr. Horrnweg said the problem may be related to a change of personnel at the ministry offices in Kingston, and an uninformed employee might have lodged the stop-order with the housing ministry.

The proposed subdivision is located on Dundas St. West, east of Orchard View Dr.

One Charged In Mishap

TRENTON — A 27-year-old Trenton man has been charged with careless driving in connection with a two-vehicle collision at the intersection of highways 2 and 40 west of here late Tuesday.

Ontario Provincial Police at Brighton identified the man today as Sam Scalletta of 103 Wall St.

Police said a westbound truck on Highway 2 attempted a left turn onto Highway 40 on a green light when it was in collision with an eastbound 1975 car driven by Lucille Gauthier, 43, of Brighton.

Pipes Weigh 11 Tons

BLOOMFIELD — Giant conduit pipes weighing eleven tons each have arrived at Bloomfield mill dam. Project co-ordinator for the Prince Edward Region Conservation Authority Ian Balsillie said the pipes measure about 90 inches in diameter and have walls about 8.5 inches thick.

Rehabilitation of Bloomfield mill pond and dam has been undertaken by the Prince Edward Region Conservation Authority and work has been in progress for several months.

Enrolment Unchanged

CLOYNE — Enrolment at the North Addington Education Centre here has remained virtually unchanged from June, 1975, when it stood at 568 students, with 381 in elementary classes and 187 in the secondary school. The September enrolment is 565, with 355 in the elementary classes and 210 in the secondary school. Some late enrolment is expected.

Booth A Success

TWEED — The committee in charge of the Tweed tourist information booth, recently reported the booth, operated by Miss Joan Campbell (of Tweed) during the later part of June and the full months of both July and August, had concluded a highly successful season, with visitors registered from all the provinces of Canada, from the United States of America, Mexico and several countries in Europe.

The booth was operated by the Tweed Chamber of Commerce.

Cloyne Resident Killed

OSHAWA — Raymond Gerald Perry, 50, an Ontario Hydro worker, died Monday when struck on the head by an aluminum pulley which fell 60 feet from a transmission-line tower near here.

Mr. Perry was a resident of Cloyne, located about 45 miles northeast of Belleville.

Mystery Surrounds Return of Sihanouk and Other Developments in Cambodia

By JOHN D. HARBRON
Foreign Affairs Analyst
Thomson News Service

The night of news silence descends on countries where the Marxists newly take power, recent examples being South Vietnam and Cambodia.

The newspaper critic who doesn't have to cope with the Communist determination to close all news exits until they are organized to send out only the party line, criticize editors and publishers for suddenly saying nothing or very little about these two nations.

Where South Vietnam is concerned, the reports are seeping out again, over totally censored news services more severely controlled than by the old pre-Communist Saigon regime.

So far, they are coming mainly from French and Swiss journalists who are fluent in French, the European language which has come back in Saigon in place of English because the Vietnamese conquerors from the north know only French.

The barrage of Western reporters, South East Asian pundits, television cameramen which circulated in Saigon and went out with the departing Americans, has not re-appeared and probably never will again.

All this is pre-amble to the incredible, almost unparalleled isolation of Cambodia, a nation on this planet like the rest of us, which has completely closed its doors on the world.

The early reports published at fascinating length in such papers as The New York Times, Sunday Times and Le Monde on the enforced withdrawal of the entire population of Phnom Penh, the capital, remain as the last major analysis of the shifts of population ordered by the conquering Khmer Rouge.

Even the return of Prince Naradom Sihanouk from a five year-long, comfortable exile in Peking had to be reported from a distance and with a good deal of speculation about its meaning.

No reporters outside the Communist bloc and even only chosen ones from fellow socialist nations were around at both his departure from Peking and apparently tumultuous arrival in Phnom Penh.

Hence it is curious that the man over whom much of the guerrilla war against U.S.-supported Marshal Lom Nol was fought, will have a less than secure role in the incredible Khmer Rouge government.

While in Peking, Prince Sihanouk's spokesmen said he would function as a roving ambassador for Cambodia with official visits to the United Nations and North Korea already announced.

Prince Sihanouk's future as the "hero" of the Cambodian Revolution looks uncertain, except the Khmer Rouge leaders have restored him to the family palace unoccupied since he fled from it in 1970 and his family with him.

Revolutionary leaders who detach themselves from the revolution they must, as was the case with Prince Sihanouk, run the risk of losing authority over the movement they began.

They do not share combat with all its successes and failures, nor are directly involved in the changing strategy for the time of victory which often has to be thrashed out on the battlefields.

China's Mao Tse-tung was a revolutionary leader who never left the side of his troops. In effect he worked out the future political and economic structures of the present People's Republic of China at the height of battles, some of them defeats for him at the time.

Nor can Prince Sihanouk be compared to the returning French General Charles de Gaulle in mid-1944 since he did return with an army supplied by his Allies, definitely not the case where the Cambodian prince and the Chinese were concerned.

Ontario Needs PCs

What voters in tomorrow's election in Ontario should be concerning themselves about is not which party, in the view of some, has been in "too long," or allegedly is costing the citizen and taxpayer too much. Rather, with a view to the years immediately ahead, which party is best for all the people of Ontario?

Which government will concern itself with maintaining the general level of prosperity while preserving a balance between the strength and morality that traditionally has held our society together, and acceptance that times are changing and not necessarily for the worst?

In short, which party is best fit to govern? This newspaper believes the Conservative party, at present in power, is the one to continue charting the paths ahead. The Davis government has made mistakes and acknowledges as much, but it is not so insensitive or lustful for power, for its own sake, that it cannot or will not do better another time round.

The other parties, by comparison, are untried and where the Liberals are concerned, given the example of their blood brothers in Ottawa, who knows what flights of extravagance or transports of ideological fancy might be experienced under them? Meanwhile, Mr. Nixon has been unable, or unwilling, to explain how a campaign statistic relating to the federal deficit is out by $10 billion.

As for the NDP, one of their own — federal member for Waterloo-Cambridge Max Saltsman — said in an article earlier this year that the last federal election for his party "was more than a defeat. It was a warning of approaching irrelevance, a sign of danger that the socialist dream of a society based on friendship and co-operation may have philosophically exhausted itself."

What of the party's provincial hopes? The NDP doubtless will win votes and seats in Ontario, but it is unlikely they will come anywhere near the halls of power. Possibly they could hold the balance of power.

Premier Davis is the one man in this election whose leadership qualities, and concern for many of the problems worrying people today, are known.

Mr. Davis has taken action on such vital issues as oil prices and television violence. The latter may be only the tip of the iceberg of potential social upheaval in this country, and yet the Liberals apparently are against any overt move to combat it. Grit leader Robert Nixon has been quoted as saying that while Royal Commission chairman Judy LaMarsh is a personal friend, he would not hesitate to fire her if his party should win.

Why is this, we might ask — in the same way we might fear an opening of other floodgates in the wake of a Liberal victory?

A Conservative government returned to power would be not only an experienced administration, it would be one increasingly sensitive to people's needs. We believe it is worthy of a continued vote of confidence from voters, as set against the distinctly unknown factor of the provincial Liberals and the dogma and strictures of the socialist camp.

Loyalist Program

Senior citizens in these frenetic times must feel more than a little bemused by the subject matter of the education scene.

The beauty of it of course is that, with the growth of community colleges, they can participate too.

Who, accustomed to the discipline of an earlier time, would have anticipated a course available years later in Family Life Education?

Doubtless there are benefits from a course such as one now available at Loyalist. The more so considering a recent report that formal training in the basics of parenthood is largely lacking. How true! Most parents have relied on their instincts and common sense — all too often to the detriment of the offspring — and on the books of Dr. Spock and others.

In any event, the Loyalist College program issued in an Intelligencer insert recently, includes details of courses on Family Life. To complement similar courses in the schools, they will offer parents theories of psychology and sociology.

In the jargon of the times, the information put out by the college notes the courses are aimed also at generating "interest and involvement in the preservation of the nuclear family."

There is no mention of discipline and we are all too aware that laying a hand on any youngster these days is fraught with all manner of reactionary consequence. The concept of sparing the rod and spoiling the child has been consigned largely to the scrap heap, and the results are plain to see. Permissiveness, increase in crime, alienation and other problems.

Still there is room for the courses such as are mentioned here. What passed for discipline in the past, and is meted out in varying doses today, too often lacks the vital elements of understanding and compassion. There is too much raw emotion at work; if psychological training can help people understand themselves and others better, and in turn channel or defuse the harshness that passes for discipline in some quarters, they will have served their purpose.

LETTERS

Quinte PC Candidate Answers Her Critics

Editor,
The Intelligencer:

I would appreciate the opportunity of responding to Mr. Bert Gerling's attack upon my record as a municipal politician which was published on Monday, September 15th. The promises which I made in my maqoralty campaign of 1972 have in my opinion been kept. My campaign literature from that election is available and the promises can be verified by anyone.

(1) Any development that has taken place in this city has been done through the proper planning channels, the Quinte Planning Board and its professional staff as well as the Council of the City of Belleville. At all stages the public has had an opportunity to voice its opinion.

(2) The road renewal program was instigated and the reconstruction of Sidney Street from College to Tracey is the first road completed under the new program.

(3) I have never stated that town houses would not be built in the Elizabeth Crescent area.

I took the position that whatever development was planned for the area would have controls on it that protected the residents of the area. This protection was given in the building of single family units as a buffer zone to the town house units and a down grading of the remaining undeveloped property as well as a traffic pattern that would guard against increased traffic on the residential streets.

(4) The people of Hillcrest know that the sanitary sewers have been built and that service will be available to the homes of that area.

(5) My office was open every other Monday night for 1½ years from 7 P.M. to 9 P.M.

Few citizens made use of the opportunity and I understand why. I was accessible from 8:30 A.M. to 4:30 P.M. five days a week at City Hall and citizens found me easy to contact during regular daytime hours.

Never have I referred to the people of Hillcrest in the derogatory term that you used in his letter. As an Alderman and Mayor every person of this City was considered with dignity and respect by me.

I have never considered any merit in Belleville and Trenton becoming one. What value would there be in such a suggestion? Each has its own place in the Quinte Area, servicing its residents through co-operative understanding.

I believe I have fulfilled my municipal election promises and I am prepared to let the voters of Quinte Riding be the final judge of my political record. As a public servant I have had faith in the collective wisdom of the public, a faith that has been strengthened after each election.

ROBIN JEFFREY

Union Chief on Workers' Progress

Editor,
The Intelligencer:

Reference your editorial titled "Too Good to be True" I was wondering if your paper would print anything which was slanted against the big blue machine of the Progressive Conservatives or not, now I guess I will find out. As a good union member and president of one of Belleville's local unions, I take exception at your editorial which states how the "Globe and Mail's" Wilbur List stated the working conditions and living standards steady improvement in the past 25 years, the abundance of holidays for the working man, the picture of an employee who at 47 had retired after 32 years with a $457 a month pension, and so on with the definite impression for your readers that if it wasn't for the Provincial Progressive Conservatives none of this would be possible.

Your attitude is far from correct, the holidays, pay, pensions and vacations were won by men and women who struck against big business to get what they have now, and most of the big business machines were big backers of the blue machine. Tell me how many P.C MP's walked a picket line or supported workers' stands when they were needed, not when they needed a vote. How many times has Bill Davis supported the ordinary worker when he is completely trying to suppress his own civil servants, or for that matter what has ex-Mayor Jeffrey ever really done for Belleville.

Tell me how many workers in Belleville's 33,000 earn between $15,000 - $25,000 per year as you stated, not business men but working people.

Candidates and Radio Debate

Editor,
The Intelligencer:

The Tory cry in this election is that the government has done a great job and stands on its record. Therefore, the electorate would expect the Tory candidates to seek every opportunity to debate and discuss the party record.

However, such is not the case in Tory Belleville. Mrs. Robin Jeffrey has now avoided three such opportunites and her reasons are somewhat vague. First she failed to attend the TV presentation with the other candidates over CJHO, next it was a refusal to debate the issues with NDP Carson McLauchlan on his paid radio hour and last, she failed to appear at the Kiwanis all-candidates night.

In conversation with a representative of CJHO TV I ascertained that they had told Mrs. Jeffrey they would willingly pay the cost of flying her to Ottawa to be present. She refused on the grounds that she was afraid of flying.

One would have to comment that this lady logged many thousands of miles flying to Russia and back, and more recently to Germany and back on the wine and cheese binge.

Can it be that the Tory candidate who has so much to say to her own supporters lacks the depth to debate her parties performance in public with those who may be critical.

Whatever her reasons, she should not be allowed to duck a public debate without due comment.

WILLIAM C. HOCKLEY.

A Sufficiency

Editor,
The Intelligencer:

Your editorial page recently had a letter from I. Groves of Kingston, referring to a letter from Mr. Hockley.

Mr. Groves' letter refers to the possibility that there are "perhaps, a few dozen or more knowledgeable, articulate, Wm. Hockleys".

As a frequent reader of your paper who has suffered frequently, may I suggest that ONE knowledgeable, articulate Wm. Hockley would be appreciated.

Ontario's Security At Stake

Editor:
The Intelligencer:

Election commentary reveals lax liberals' budding romance with local activists.

Bryce Mackasey correctly terms some Post Office union leaders "Potential saboteurs and guerrilla fighters." Control of our communications as in Portugal is the eventual target.

Davis would prevent similar disruption by barring strikes in the Ontario Civil Service.

Nixon and Lewis have declared their approval of Ontario civil servants right to strike as in the federal post office.

Now is the time for voters to consider which party best serves their future security.

DEMOCRAT

Civil Servants' Election Pitch

Editor,
The Intelligencer!

Mr. Davis inferred that Civil Service Association of Ontario ads are misleading yet his own ad is the most misleading I have ever read. For instance he does not differentiate between the Government of Ontario employees per set and the C.S.A.O. The C.S.A.O. represents the lower rung of the ladder. It is obvious that those persons in the position of Director or above should not become involved in political work but why should a caretaker, laundry worker, nurse or even teacher have their basic civil rights denied them when they are in no position to abuse those rights.

The ad implies that the "Leadership" of the C.S.A.O. is carrying out activities without the consent of its members. This is untrue as all members have representation and all C.S.A.O. policies have majority approval through delegates at conventions before they are enacted.

Mr. Davis has brought up the issue of the right to strike. The fact is that nowhere in any of the C.S.A.O. ads was the right to strike mentioned nor has the C.S.A.O. ever demanded the right to strike during this election campaign. Most members are willing to forego the right to strike if they could have full collective bargaining.

Other things which are not negotiable are:: discipline, dismissal, suspension, seniority, technological change, training and development" contracting out and rules for promotion. All these things are taken for granted by other unions yet Mr. Davis still says the C.S.A.O. members enjoy collective bargaining.

To conclude, it is obvious that someone is trying to produce an issue on Civil Service strikes when in fact there is no issue and it also shows the type of Government we have when they use their own employees as political tools.

The Closest Ontario Vote In 32 Years?

By DON O'HEARN
Queen's Park Bureau
Thomson News Service

TORONTO — Some final notes:

It may not show in the results, but on the basis of campaigning this has been the closest provincial election in Ontario in 32 years.

It particularly has been the most forceful. The arguments may not have been the highest we have seen. There has been a lot of half-truths and cover-ups and often it has been a battle of statistics. But all leaders have been fighting to the hilt—though each with his own style.

If the campaign has not aroused local interest in some spots, this probably can be ceded to the lack of clear issues, an off-shoot of our very mixed-up times, not to lack of effort by the leaders and their parties.

Not mentioned here before was the defeat of veteran Rev. A. W. Downer in his bid for renomination in Dufferin-Simcoe.

After 38 years in the house it was a bit of a shock to see Mr. Downer go down.

This, however, could have been the [illegible] ber of surprises.

More than any in recent years this election has about it an aura of the unexpected.

The election can't go by without [illegible] of the other parties. The Communists have 33 candidates and Social Credit 10. The safest bet you can think of is that neither will win a seat. And the hardest job you could think of would be in getting anyone to take it.

Social Credit, however, does get marks for the most ingenuous move of the campaign. Before the election was called it sent out a form letter to all sitting members inivting them to change parties and run for it. How can you be sorry for a party that can live a dream like that.

The Ontario Secondary School Teachers Federation (OSSTF), an organization with which I have not always been in full agreement, made the most constructive contribution to the election of any outside organization.

It distributed a tabloid newspaper which contained replies from the three leaders to a questionaire on the issues.

The questionnaire was not confined to education but covered the whole spectrum of issues of concern to the public, including the economy.

The OSSTF was in strong contrast to the Civil Service Association with its high-pressure and bigoted campaign.

The legislative building may need a beauty parlor after the election. There are some three dozen women candidates, a number of them with good chances. The female representation of three in the last house should at least double.

Ann Landers

Her Hubby Too Hairy!

Dear Ann Landers: This problem may seem insignificant to others, but it's ruining our sex life.

I have always fantasized about the men in muscle magazines—not only because of their great builds, but because I admire smooth, hairless skin.

My husband has a terrific physique, but the hair all over his body is long and dark and I find it repulsive. I've asked him to shave his body but he says it would irritate his skin. I suggested hair-removal products but he insists men are supposed to be hairy. He thinks something is wrong with me because most women consider hairy males very sexy.

Our live life has becom submediocre and I'm too embarrassed to talk about the problem with a counsellor. You're my only hope. Help me, please—Schenectady, N.Y.

Dear N.Y.: When you ask a man to shave his body, I hope you realize it's not a one-time thing. Hair does grow back, you know. To be the hairless husband you want, the poor guy would have to shave frequently to maintain the desired state.

Since you're big on fantasizing, I seriously suggest that you psych yourself out and accept your husband as he is. Your request is truly unreasonable.

Dear Ann Landers: I notice you are against high school smoking lounges because you say they encourage and condone smoking.

Well, I don't smoke. I am a 16-year-old girl who thinks it is a filthy, expensive, rotten, smelly habit. But I am in favor of smoking lounges in high schools because I believe all those nutty kids should be cooped up together and not be polluting the air in the bathrooms, which is what they are doing.

What's more, those smokers tie up the bathroom stalls between classes and make the rest of us late. If they had a room to smoke in it would free up the johns for us non-smokers.

So you see, there are two sides to this question, Ann. Please change your mind.—Hate Smoking

Dear H.S.: There are two sides to EVERY question. Sometimes more.

Your arguments are excellent, in fact they are the ones most often cited to get the administration to knuckle under.

I believe however, that smoking should not be permitted under any high school roof. The administration ought to post monitors in the bathrooms if necessary, and see to it that the rules are not violated.

Non-smokers shouldn't have to choke in the johns nor should they be made to wait while tobacco addicts light up between classes.

What it boils down to is this: Who is going to run our high schools—the students or the administration?

Dear Ann Landers: My dear mother made her home with me until she passed away a few days ago.

My sister and brother gave her some rather nice gifts through the years. After the funeral they announced they'd be back next week to take back the gifts. Do you think this is right?—Stunned

Dear S.: No. It's cheap and petty. But let them have their gifts. Things are not worth fighting about. It was worth the price to find out what the clods are really like.

Wonder Woman Lives on Water

BOMBAY (CP) — Some people call her a "wonder woman." Others think she is a vampire.

But there is no mistaking the fact that 21-year-old Naar Devi has become the most talked-about citizen in the mountain villages of India's northern Himalayan region.

Miss Devi is said not to had eaten for the last eight years and lives on water from mountain streams. A number of local doctors have verified the claim.

The latest tribute to the mountain girl's powers of survival came from Prof. Balram Varmani of the Government College at Dharamsala, a Himalayan town.

"There is absolutely no doubt that the girl has been living on water since 1967," the professor told reporters at Dharamsala. He said he met Miss Devi while trekking with a student group in the Himalayan mountains.

"She is undoubtedly a wonder woman," Prof. Varmani said. "I have not heard of any person surviving on mere water for such a long time."

Miss Devi, a pretty, rather sad-looking girl, says she lost her appetite in early 1967 after a month-long headache.

"I did not have a wink of sleep during this period," she said. "When I did not eat anything I felt better. But the violent headache returned the moment I took solid food. Even milk or lemon juice had an adverse effect."

Local elders in the 6,000-foot-high village confirmed that Naar Devi has been subsisting on stream water for the last eight years.

One theory is the minerals in the mountain water provide Miss Devi with adequate nourishment.

The girl spends most of her time in her parents' humble cottage in the picturesque village of Chajota. Barring her parents, brothers and sisters, almost everyone in the village keeps away from Miss Devi.

There are ugly rumors that Miss Devi is a vampire who lives on the blood of fatally-wounded mountain residents in the high Himalayas.

"I heard quite a few people saying she is a vampire," Prof. Varmani said. "But this is sheer nonsense. One cannot meet a more gentle and civilized person."

Now, Chajote village is a must for mountaineers. Canadian, American and British hippies are also converging on Chajote out of curiosity.

Some Chajote citizens are toying with the idea of raising a fund from the curious visitors in order to send Naar Devi to New Delhi or Bombay for advanced medical treatment.

Supermarket Tests Will Show Who Buys Returnable Bottles

TORONTO (CP) — Faced with pressure from ecologists and the threat of legislation, grocery retailers say they are beginning to stock an increasing number of returnable soft drink bottles.

Loblaws Ltd., Toronto, has started a controlled experiment in six city stores to measure consumers' responses when presented with the option of purchasing either returnable or non-returnable bottles, said James Gregory, the company's senior vice-president.

However, he said he is not optimistic that the experiment will lead to the removal of disposable bottles.

"I personally think the majority of the 55 per cent of Toronto residents living in high-rise apartments want the convenience of non-returnable bottles," he said in an interview.

A spokesman for Oshawa Group Ltd., Toronto, which operates IGA stores in Ontario and Quebec, said the company has started stocking some returnable bottles. And stores of Canada Safeway Ltd., Winnipeg, report they now stock 26-ounce returnable bottles in most major brands.

But one soft drink distributor said he has found the larger chains reluctant to stock returnable bottles because of higher costs of handling and storing empties.

"The chains want everything to come in the back door and go out the front door and they don't want to see their customers at the front door with a load of refillable bottles," he said.

William Newman, Ontario environment minister, has promised legislation to prevent the proliferation of disposable soft drink bottles and in British Columbia, Alberta and Saskatchewan, legislation is already in force to ban the use of non-returnable bottles.

'Retired and Restless', They Do Good Works

TORONTO (CP) — When you are retired and restless it helps to get together with others who are the same.

Or that is the feeling of a group of retired men who get together regularly for a game of golf or bridge and quietly, without publicity, do good deeds for others.

The prime mover behind the founding of a loosely-knit organization, called appropriately enough, Retired and Restless, was former Ontario lieutenant-governor Ray Lawson, 89.

The members poke fun at themselves and the name of their group.

"We indulge in several variations of the R and R theme," said founding-member Charlie Colwell, a 76-year-old former executive of Ford of Canada. "There's Rude and Ridiculous, Rough and Ready, and even Rusting and Resting.

Nobody is quite certain of the month R and R emerged but there is general agreement that it was sired in the summer of 1971.

The setting was the Oakville Golf and Country Club. A sprinkling of retired members found an antidote to boredom by playing golf and bridge together.

Few men have more successfully defied the perils of retirement than Ray Lawson. One of the reasons for his loyalty to R and R is that he has such an understanding of retirement's problems.

"The great danger, I have come to see, is that a retired guy will get to drink too much out of boredom. His mind is not on constructive things. He is lonely and missing the company of his own kind.

"R and R supplies that companionship. A little golf, a little gin rummy, a little conversation. Some talk gardening Some talk stocks. Sometimes the conversation is how we can help others less fortunate than ourselves.

One of Mr. Lawson's personal ambitions is the building of a home for infirm or incapacitated senior citizens in his neighborhood, a home he would like to see run by the Salvation Army.

"That's all I'm willing to say about the idea at the moment. Publicity of that nature is distasteful to anyone in R and R. You try to do what you can without making a great production about it."

Outstanding Women To Be Honored

TORONTO CP) — The Ontario government will honor 25 Ontario women at a dinner in October for contributions they have made over the years to their community or country.

The women were chosen by a three-member committee from among 260 women whose names were sent in by clubs, organizations and councils across the province.

The names of the women were released Friday by the office of Margaret Birch, provincial secretary for social development and responsible in Ontario for activities during International Women's Year.

Among Toronto women selected were: Ursula Appolloni, Liberal MP for York South; Rosemary L. Dudley, author and founding executive director of the Migraine Foundation; Edith Ferguson, who worked in education and social services for more than 50 years; Reva Gerstein, for work in education and on commissions and councils; and Lynne Gordon, consumer affairs expert who created the consumer desk on radio station CKEY.

Also from Toronto are: Grace Hartman Grout, first woman mayor of Sudbury, Ont., in 1966-67 and a former president of the Ontario Municipal Association; Pearl Langer, for work in the field of old age and its diseases; and Amalia Maria Stocker, founder of a school for retarded children.

Others from Toronto are: Marian Axford, for her contribution to education; Kim Ondaatje, artist; and Grace Price Trotman, who has trained about 1,200 piano students during a 45-year period.

The Hamilton women chosen were: Ellen L. Fairclough, who was on Hamilton city council and in federal Conservative cabinets during 18 years of political work; and Marnie Paikin, chairman of the board of directors of the Hamilton Performing Arts Corp.

Selected from Ottawa were: Jacqueline Martin, national president of the Federation of French-Canadian Women; and Marguerite Elizabeth Ritchie, lawyer and the first women to receive a federal Queen's Counsel.

Among other women chosen were: Judy LaMarsh, Niagara Falls, former Liberal federal cabinet minister, and chairman of the province's royal commission on violence in the media; Flora MacDonald, Progressive Conservative MP for Kingston and the Islands; and Margret Armstrong Beckman, Waterloo, chief librarian at the University of Guelph.

Marinades:

Easy, Economical Method for Tender Flavor

Meat is marinated to improve its flavor and to tenderize it. Marinating most helps cuts of beef and lamb from the chuck, rump or flank, but is seldom done to pork, although sometimes seasonings are rubbed into a pork roast before cooking.

Meat can be marinated anywhere from a few hours to several days. A cool, airy room is the best place to do this, but you can also marinate meat in the refrigerator.

Several days of marination in the refrigerator will be penetrating enough to preserve the meat a little longer, and if you are a once-a-week shopper, instead of freezing, you may sit your meats in marinade while you wait to cook them.

Most of the ingredients in marinades are common to kitchen cupboards, and thus afford an easy and inexpensive way to dress up everyday meats. Here are some basic marinades and some recipes using meat, shrimp and fish.

'Down Home' Marinade

two cups red wine
one cup tomato juice
½ cup olive oil
½ cup lemon juice
one sliced lime
one sliced onion
one tsp. each dried oregano, basil, marjoram one tsp. salt
one tsp. freshly ground pepper
one tbsp. horseradish chopped parsley
dash of Worchestershire sauce

This marinade is good for tenderizing braising ribs and other cheaper cuts of beef, and should be used in the cooking process as well. Marinate the meat in the mixture for a few hours. Remove lime, and then transfer (in an ovenware casserole) both meat and marinade to a 325-degree oven. Length of cooking time depends on amount of meat; three hours for three pounds of meat, or until fork-tender. Vegetables, such as onions, rice, peas or carrots, may be added during last hour of cooking.

Soy Barbeque Marinade

½ cup peanut oil
½ cup soy sauce (or more, to taste)
½ cup sherry or vermouth
three garlic cloves, crushed several pieces of fresh ginger, or several slices of candied ginger small pieces of orange peel dash of Tabasco
½ cup honey (optional, if you want a heavy glaze)

This is an excellent marinade for chicken, beef, lamb or pork. Use as a marinade and basting sauce for any number of meats or fowl, roasting or barbequeing.

Basic Marinade

one carrot, sliced
one large onion, sliced one stalk celery, sliced
two cloves garlic, sliced
two sprigs parsley
½ tsp. dried thyme
½ bay leaf
four crushed peppercorns
two cloves
one cup per two pounds of meat of dry white wine
½ cup oil per two pounds of meat
½ cup lemon juice per two pounds of meat

This marinade may be used with any meat you want to make more tender and flavorful.

Season the meat with salt and pepper. Use a glass or earthenware bowl just large enough to accommodate both meat and marinade. Put half the carrots and onions in the bottom, and place meat on top, then put the rest of carrots and onions, and the remaining flavoring ingredients on the meat. Then add the lemon juice, oil and wine.

Turn the meat often, and keep the bowl covered in between turnings. The top of the meat should not be allowed to dry out.

Marinades for Lamb shish kebob

The basic mixture, for three or four pounds of cubed lamb is:

one cup olive oil
one-third cup lemon juice two garlic cloves, crushed
salt and freshly ground pepper

To this may be added, for variance:

Greek style — add either oregano or sage to the marinada, serve the meat with onions and green peppers.

Lebanese style — add mint or thyme to the marinade, serve the meat with onions, green peppers and tomatoes.

Turkish style — crushed bay leaves are added to the marinade, and are placed on the meat as it broils.

The meat should be left in the marinade for anywhere between two hours and two days, before being skewered and roasted.

Shashlik Marinade

one cup oil — corn or peanut one cup red wine
three crushed bay leaves fresh dill or parsley
two tbsp. wine vinegar
three garlic cloves, crushed
one tsp. freshly ground pepper
½ tsp. ground allspice

Marinade cubes of lamb in this mixture as for shish kebob.

Marinated Chuck Steak

one cup salad oil
two cups beer or ale
¼ cup lemon juice
two cloves garlic, crushed
1½ tsp. salt
one tsp. freshly ground black pepper one tsp. dry mustard
two bay leaves
one tsp. each of basil, oregano and thyme one chuck steak — eight to 10 pounds — of top quality, cut thick and tied.

1. Combine all ingredients in a deep bowl. Put the meat in last and turn several times. Marinate for two days, turning several times each day.

Place the meat on a rack in a roasting pan, and baste with the marinade. Roast at 425 degrees for 3½ hours for rare, or for medium steak at 425 degrees for one hour and then at 300 degrees for four hours. Baste periodically with the marinade. Serve with cornmeal slices and braised cabbage.

Marinated Shrimp

two pounds raw shrimp, shelled and deveined three cups water
¼ cup mixed pickling spice
¼ cup chopped celery leaves
3½ tsp. salt
one pound onions, sliced six bay leaves
one cup olive oil
two-thirds cup tarragon or wine vinegar two tbsp. capers
two tsp. celery seed

Wash the shrimp. In a saucepan, combine the water, pickling spice, celery leaves and twp tsp. of the salt. Bring to a boil and add the shrimp and cook over low heat for four minutes. Drain thoroughly, and put half on the bottom of a glass or pottery oblong dish. Separate the onion slices into rings, and put half over the shrimp and put half the bay leaves over these, and then repeat the layers.

Beat together the oil, vinegar, capers, celery seed and remaining salt. Pour over the top, cover, and let marinate in the refrigerator for at least 24 hours. They may be kept for up to a week. Serve as first course, or on picks as hors d'oeuvres.

Marinated Fried Mackerel

four mackerel
sprigs of dill
one tbsp. chopped onion
¼ pint vinegar
one tbsp. salt
½ tbsp. sugar pepper
butter or margarine for frying

Clean filleted mackerel, then dry. Place four fillets in a bowl large enough to hold them side by side, leaving meaty side up. Place generous amounts of dill on them and sprinkle with a lot of pepper and the chopped onions. Place the other four fillets on top, meaty side down. Mix vinegar, salt and sugar and pour over fish. Let marinate overnight.

Remove fillets, wipe them off and fry in margarine or butter. Place on a hot serving dish. Pour five tbsp. of the marinade into the empty frypan to heat it up, and then pour over the mackerel. Serve with hot potatoes.

Board Claims Unions Have Upper Hand

TORONTO (CP) — The Construction Labor Relations Association of Ontario says unions still hold the upper hand in bargaining in the province's construction industry and employers must accept much of the blame.

In a report on 1975 bargaining, called War and Peace—Ontario Style, the association says the average increase in 120 agreements was $2.88 an hour over two years in wages and fringe benefits.

The majority were in the $3 range.

In stating that employers must accept much of the blame for the situation, the report says:

"With the absence of any centralized control over the bargaining process, they lacked unity and power.

"The unions, on the other hand, were able to work together whenever and wherever it suited their needs."

The report, prepared by association president Claude Heywood, said much of what happened in bargaining this year was a repeat of previous bargaining years.

"The difference, of course was the cost of settling. It was higher."

Courier Business Grows With Pending Strike

TORONTO (CP) — Canada's private courier services are reaping a boom because of an increase with mail deliveries caused chiefly by strikes, industry spokesmen say.

Demands for a faster, more reliable movement of essential materials, such as cheques, food plasma, critical data-processing information, has spawned a new interest in the couriers.

One courier spokesman said the post office does a good job with mail but inter-city courier services can provide faster and more reliable movement of materials.

"Increasing numbers of businesses are relying on private courier services because of strikes and ineptitude affecting parcel delivery" the spokesman said.

Couriers say business is doubling annually because they can normally deliver to major Canadian cities between the close of one business day and the beginning of the next.

The traditional customer of couriers is the banking system, says Joseph Macaluso, president of Purolator Courier Ltd. in Toronto. He said about $6.5 billion in cheques is cleared in Toronto and Montreal daily and a one-day delay in cashing them could cost banks $1.5 million.

On a national basis, however, Mr. Macaluso estimates that 75 per cent of Purolator's revenue comes from other than bank deliveries.

Industry officials say the development of a national electronic fund transfer system (EFTS) by the chartered banks would reduce cheque usage and cut into the courier business. But a spokesman for the Canadian Bankers' Association said the EFTS "is not feasible for a good many more years."

The inter-city courier business relies on trucks and scheduled airline flights for the movement of parcels. Mr. Macaluso said his company sends a uniformed guard to accompany parcels on each airline flight.

Crystal Art

Tiger Tank Motor Creates Beauty

Written for CP

By MARGARET NESS

Among Czechoslovakia's artists in crystal are two brothers who have been commissioned by a Toronto collector to create one-of-a-kind signature pieces — miniature designs of Toronto landmarks.

Zdenek and Vladimir Kepta use the motor of an old German Tiger tank to sandblast their designs on crystal blocks in a technique they invented. The blocks are first stored for two years in an outside yard of their suburban Prague studio to test resistance to any temperature.

Five Kepta pieces are in the collection of Joseph Markovic, owner of a Toronto wholesale company.

His first, ordered five years, was Toronto City Hall worked from a sketch. An etching on a block of pale green crystal, the base is 12 inches and the taller tower is 8½ inches.

Mr. Markovic also commissioned a sculpture of Toronto's Commerce Court. For it, the Keptas chose a pale yellow block.

Two years ago Mr. Markovic included it, along with several pieces from his private collection, in a display at a Toronto store. Commerce Court was stolen and Mr. Markovic ordered a replica.

Another Kepta treasure is the oldest synagogue in Prague, in palest green. A fourth is entirely different, a nine-inch-diameter open rose sandblasted out of an aqua crystal block with deep crevices like leaves.

The most valuable of Mr. Markovic's Kepta pieces is called Eternal Light. A collector in Venice ordered the design. Mr. Markovic saw the finished work and persuaded the collector to allow a replica. The original was shattered en route to Venice.

Czech Engraver

Master engraver Bohumil Horacek holds large vase on which he engraved four scenes based on Michelangelo's flooding of the world. It took the Czech artist 1,500 hours to complete the engraving and is now in the private collection of Joseph Markovic of Toronto. Photo at right shows one on the scenes of the vase. (CP Photo)

Ruins Rebuilt

GLENGARRY, Ont. (CP) — The congregation of St. Raphael's Church has restored the ruins of the 1821-built stone church, ravaged by fire in 1970. Financed by the Ontario Heritage Foundation, the church is used in good weather for regular services, theatre and pageants.

Gets Hole-in-one

FRINTON, England (CP) — Jamie Wedge, 9, of London hit a hole-in-one on his first-ever golf shot. Jamie used a seven iron on an 80-yard hole.

First Pentecostal Church pastor Rev. George Shalm (from left), Rev. Allan Ellis and Belleville Mayor Ben Corke watch Sunday as church elder W.S. Rhodeniser sets a lit candle a single bond symobilizing the retirement of the church's debt, incurred in 1953 when it was built. Rev. Ellis, of Milford, Conn., U.S.A., the founder of the North Front St. church, gave a sermon during the service.

Business Folds to Make Hartford a Better Place

HARTFORD, Conn. (AP) — Because of a shrinking stock market portfolio, a private foundation has decided to go out of business to make Hartford a better place.

Using $3 million left by the late Councilwoman Betty Knox, the foundation which bears her name has underwritten programs ranging from kite-flying to the rehabilitation of old downtown buildings.

But the foundations' board members felt its efforts were spread out—"a drib and a drab," said Executive Director Jack Bollard. "Everybody expressed the frustration that Hartford wasn't a better place, that it would take a team of archeologists to uncover what we had done."

When the stock market plunged downward, the foundation found its holdings worth only $2 million. In her will, Mrs. Knox had asked that her money be left to "make Hartford a better place."

Capital Site Picked For Shipping Port

WASHINGTON (AP) — George Washington was authorized in 1790 to select the site for the national capital, anywhere from the confluence of the Potomac and Anacostia rivers to a point 80 miles up the Potomac. He chose the southernmost location, perhaps because it was close to his home, almost certainly because it was at that period an important shipping port.

The site turned out to be beautiful, although hot and humid in summer, but it took a century and a half for its development as his friend Pierre Charles L'Enfant envisaged: 'On such a scale as to leave room for that aggrandizement and embellishment which the increase in the wealth of the Nation will permit it to pursue at any period however remote."

As the nation's capital, with a metropolitan population of more than three million persons, it has become one of the world's most popular tourist attractions.

No one knows how many people will come, but officials are planning parking areas on the outskirts with shuttle buses running into the downtown area, where parking is scarce and expensive.

For anyone staying a week or less, an excellent guide is one published by the Smithsonian Associates. It may be bought for 30 cents at any of the Smithsonian museum shops or ordered by mail from the Reception Center, Smithsonian Institution, Washington, D.C. 20560.

A one-day tour should start with a visit to the White House.

The U.S. Capitol should be the next stop; there are informative guided tours for anyone who has the time.

Some of the major Smithsonian buildings come next: the National Air and Space Museum, behind the original Castle and next to it, with the Wright Brothers' plane, Lindbergh's Spirit of St. Louis and space hardware; the Museum of Natural History with the Hope diamond and the hall of dinosaurs; the Museum of History and Technology with the original Star-Spangled Banner.

Anyone spending two days might also plan to go to the National Gallery of Art, The Hirshhorn Museum and Sculpture Garden, the National Portrait Gallery and the National Collection of Fine Arts, which share one of Washington's most beautiful old buildings, and the Kennedy Centre for the Performing Arts, where the National Park Service conducts regular tours.

Most of these buildings have cafeterias where one may eat well and inexpensively.

Other visitor attractions, depending on one's personal inclinations, are the Library of Congress, Ford's Theatre with a Lincoln museum in the downstairs, the Petersen house across the street where Lincoln died, the National Archives, the National Zoo, the Department of Commerce, Aquarium, historic Georgetown, the Botanic Gardens at the foot of Capitol Hill, the National Arboretum, Dumbarton Oaks in Georgetown, the Supreme Court, and near it the Folger Shakespeare Library.

Important churches are the National Cathedral, the Shrine of the Immaculate Conception and St. John's Church across Lafayette Square from the White House.

Still Earn More

LIVERPOOL, England (CP) — Male white-collar workers still earn more on the average than skilled manual workers, researchers at the University of Liverpool report. They say the widely-held belief that manual workers have become the better paid is untrue.

The Government of Canada undertakes to use its best efforts to purchase during each quarter of each calendar year to maturity, commencing October 1, 1975, when available in the open market at prices not exceeding the original issue price, plus accrued interest, at least ¼ of 1% of the principal amount of the 10% bonds maturing October 1, 1995. The Government of Canada may, however, in any quarter of any year apply to this undertaking the purchase of those bonds made during the immediately preceding twelve months and not previously credited. By maturity the maximum amount of this issue which would be required to be purchased by the Government of Canada under these provisions would be 60% of the original issue.

Bank of Canada has agreed to acquire a minimum of $250 million of the new bonds, open as to maturity.

Proceeds of the offering will be used to redeem $430.4 million of Government of Canada 5½% bonds maturing on October 1, 1975 and for general purposes of the Government of Canada.

The new 9% bonds due February 1, 1978, the new 9% bonds due October 1, 1980 and the new 10% bonds due October 1, 1995 will be dated October 1, 1975 and will bear interest from that date. Principal and interest are payable in lawful money of Canada. Principal is payable at any Agency of Bank of Canada. Interest is payable at any branch in Canada of any chartered bank without charge. Definitive bonds will be available on October 1, 1975 and thereafter in two forms: bearer form with coupons attached and fully registered form with interest payable by cheque. Bonds of both forms will be in the same denominations and fully interchangeable as to denomination and/or form without charge (subject to Government transfer requirements where applicable).

The new bonds are authorized pursuant to an Act of the Parliament of Canada and both principal and interest are a charge on the Consolidated Revenue Fund of Canada.

Applications for the new bonds may be made, subject to allotment, through any investment dealer eligible to act as a primary distributor or through any bank in Canada.

BELLEVILLE, ONTARIO, WEDNESDAY, SEPTEMBER 17, 1975

Lawrence Urges All To Vote

Progressive Conservative candidate Robin Jeffrey staged her last major effort to win the Quinte riding Tuesday night at a rally in Belleville.

More than 400 people attended the function — the last major attraction of the Tory campaign.

Mrs. Jeffrey gave a short address commenting she "shook thousands of hands and knocked on thousands of doors," in her effort to win the Sept. 18 contest.

Allan Lawrence, MP for Northumberland, was the guest speaker at the rally.

He told party workers, "everything you and Mrs. Jeffrey have done will go down the drain if you don't get the vote out on Thursday."

Today Mrs Jeffrey held door-to-door campaigns in Belleville and Trenton along with several plant and business tours.

Tools Stolen

City police are investigating the theft of $165 worth of tools from the Tuff-Kote building at 199 East Dundas St. — the former undercoating business — sometime after Sept. 9.

Chief Douglas Crosbie said today entry was gained by forcing open an overhead door on the west side of the building.

The break-in was reported to police at 12:07 p.m. Tuesday. The owner had last checked the vacant building Sept. 9.

Bear, Car Collide

ELDORADO — A 21-year-old Madoc area man is listed in satisfactory condition with cuts and bruises and a back injury at Belleville General Hospital today following a one-car accident caused by a black bear just south of this hamlet late Tuesday.

Ontario Provincial Police at Madoc identified the man today as Wayne Edward West of RR 1, Madoc — the driver of a northbound 1970 Barracuda which swerved left to avoid the bear which ran onto the road, went onto the shoulder of the road and slipped down a 60-foot bank, landing on its wheels.

There were three passengers in the vehicle but only Debbie Ann Pounder, 16, of RR 2, Madoc was injured. She was treated and released for cuts and bruises at BGH.

Constable Dennis Bush estimated $3,000 damage in the 7.30 p.m. mishap. The bear escaped.

Transport Jack-knifes

SCOHARIE — A Willowdale man escaped serious injury Tuesday afternoon when his tractor trailer jack knifed on wet pavement on the Schoharie Rd.

Keith Whaley, 41, received minor cuts when the northbound tractor-trailer slide out of control, causing an estimated $1,500 damage.

Constable Garnet Rombough of the Picton detachement of the OPP investigated the accident which occured shortly before 4:30 p.m.

Getting Ready

Poll officials lined up in the rain Tuesday afternoon waiting to pick up their ballot boxes for Thursday's election. Some 172 boxes, piled to the ceiling at the Returning Office, were distributed. Above, Mrs. Pearl Holmes picks up the ballot box for poll 56 in Belleville.

Community Role Stressed in Redevelopment

By CLIFF KENYON
Staff Reporter

Belleville must seek control of downtown redevelopment as soon as possible, according to Bill Wills, Century Place developer.

The whole community should be included in developing the downtown area, he said Tuesday at a meeting of the Downtown Merchants Association.

"We must put vision in our plans to develop a place for people."

Mr. Wills said the downtown area should be planned as the dominant shopping area and customers must be given what they want.

"A community without a heart is no longer a community."

The centre of the city should be picked and an architect hired to give imagination to plans.

"We should try to encourage the whole community in the project."

The downtown area, he said, is a city's "front window".

Ray Mikel, of the Subordinate Planning Advisory Committee (SPAC) said he had no pre-conceived ideas of what should happen in the downtown area.

The committee,he said, is beginning to study existing downtown plans/

Core areas in a number of Ontario cities, he said are dying, but Belleville's obviously isn't.

Mr. Mikel said he is "frightened" that with an increased number of suburban malls the shopping balance may be destroyed and the downtown may die unless there is "uniform effort" to save it.

"It's up to the community to determine what is desirable in downtown redevelopment," said Mr. Mikel.

Bill White of Bel-Con Engineering said the official plan is only an over-all framework and that development is "up to the free enterprise system."

Developers, he said, must be encouraged to come to Belleville.

Deficit a Problem

Red Cross May Reduce Services

By COLIN BRUCE
Staff Reporter

The Red Cross Society will reduce its services to Prince Edward County, Belleville, Trenton and the southern portion of Hastings County unless the area begins paying its share of the bills, Red Cross Ontario commissioner Barry Brooks said Tuesday.

During an interview, Mr. Brooks said "we hope a phase out of service won't be necessary and that the community will respond to the financial problem."

Mr. Brooks pointed to insufficient funds from the United Way and "inaction" on the part of Belleville General Hospital and Hastings County Social Services as the contributors to the problem situation.

In the past year, the Red Cross has spent $41,000 on society programs in the Quinte area and received only $17,868 from the United Way. On top of this imbalance, the Red Cross has suffered a net financial loss of $30,000 on a local home maker program.

Top ranking provincial officials were to meet today with United Community Services staff to explain the situation "and to put the cost of most of these programs squarely on Belleville's shoulders," said Mr. Brooks. "The Red Cross needs at least $6,000 more from the United Way to at least begin closing the gap between what the society spends in Belleville and what it receives in donations."

The major financial problem facing the Red Cross lies with Belleville General Hospital and the county social services department, he said.

Nearly half of the $71,000 in services should be handled through the hospital and the social services, said Mr. Brooks.

The Red Cross last year spent nearly $250,000 on the homemaker program in the Quinte District and finished the year with a net loss of $30,000 — "due to inaction on the part of these two bodies," Mr. Brooks said. (The bulk of the cost was recovered through government and agency grants.)

Simply, each case on the homemaker files costs the Red Cross $28 but Belleville General Hospital and the social services department give us only $24, he said.

The Red Cross officials were to meet with hospital and county officials today to clear up, the problem. "All they need to do is apply to the provincial government Home Care Program and the money will be on its way," said Mr. Brooks. (Of the $30,000, 80 per cent would be subsidized by the province and the remainder by the municipality.)

"Until now, other areas of the province have been subsidizing the Red Cross in Belleville," said Jack Curtis, society director of revenue. "These other municipalities are getting to the point where they don't want to subsidized other communities anymore."

OPP Report 3 Mishaps But Details Sketchy

Ontario Provincial Police at Belleville were summoned to three accidents Tuesday but details are sketchy.

The first one involved a three-car collision at 3.50 p.m. on Highway 2 about a quarter mile west of Belleville by Tebworth's Texaco.

The drivers are identified as Lawrence Clow of 94 Sidney St. in Belleville, John Norman MacLeod and Beatrice Hunt with a 1975 Ford.

The second accident occurred at 3.30 p.m. on Sunningdale Rd. about two miles north of Belleville when a car driven by Marty Wilmot Bell of RR 1, Stirling went into a ditch.

And at 9.30 p.m. at the junction of Frankford Rd. and Main St. in Foxboro, there was a two-vehicle collision between a pickup truck driven by Stephen Eric Brown of RR 1, Foxboro and a car driven by Charles Twa of 132 MacDonald Ave. in Belleville.

Ellis Defends English Use In Air Traffic Control

Jack Ellis, MP Hastings, is critical of any introduction of bilingualism in air traffic control.

Mr. Ellis, himself a private pilot, says use of anything but English would prove a safety hazard to both private and commercial air operations.

He levelled the criticism in a statement issued today.

The MP noted Transport Minister Jean Marchand recently set up a committee to look into charges made by Mr. Ellis and other opposed to the program.

But the minister has said he will only accept a unanimous report, said Mr. Ellis.

This is a further indication of the minister's "intention to try and force a second language in this unnecessary area," he said.

"It is hoped the committee will report soon and remove the threat of this potentially dangerous policy from being carried further," said Mr. Ellis.

Since the minister is likely to be replaced in early October, said Mr. Ellis, he hoped a successor would take "a more objective look at the situation and return to an English-only policy."

Mr. Ellis said he wrote the minister in July, indicating his support of both English and French "as it was intended in legislation and where necessary . . ." But he could not accept it in other areas — particularly air traffic control.

Radio Show Ends Drive

Carson McLauchlan, NDP candidate in Quinte riding, faced no criticism from 12 sympathetic callers to an NDP-sponsored open-line radio show in Belleville Tuesday.

The last major event of the NDP campaign allowed Mr. McLauchlan to touch on party planks on rent controls, auto insurance, housing costs, industrial safety and residential landbanking policies.

During the hour-long show, his strongest words of criticism were leveled at Conservative Robin Jeffrey, who had been challenged, but had declined, to debate issues last night.

Mr. McLauchlan said her refusal has denied Quinte riding voters the opportunity to hear candidates debate.

Pig Has Headache

STIRLING — Somewhere in the wilds of centre Hastings County, there is an escaped domestic pig with a king-size headache.

Ontario Provincial Police at Madoc said today a 1972 Dodge car driven by Harry Bruce Bennett, 26, of RR 4, Madoc was westbound on Huntington Township Rd. 13-14 late Tuesday when a pig ran out from a ditch head-on into the right side of the car.

Police said about $300 in damage resulted from the collision but the pig ran off into the woods. Its owner is not known.

Constable Dennis Bush investigated the 11:30 p.m. mishap which occurred 4.2 miles west of Highway 62

Commission in Bancroft

BANCROFT — Bancroft has been selected as one of 34 communities in which the Royal Commission on Violence in the Communications Industry will hold public hearings between October and mid-May, 1976. A date has not been announced but the hearings begin in Cornwall Oct. 24. Meetings will be preceded by a short film outlining the issues.

Loss of Sight Doesn't Hamper Former Farmer

Mike Mulroaney is considered exceptional at what he does.

He designs, constructs and weaves wicker and reed into serving trays, hanging lampshades, baskets and other decorative pieces of equipment for the kitchen.

His handy work is perfect; especially so since he's blind and designs and constructs his projects from touch-perception.

Mr. Mulroaney, a resident of Hastings Manor for the last two years, is one of the main contributors to the annual tea and bazaar scheduled for Oct. 15 from 1.30 p.m. until 4 p.m. in the crafts department. His articles, along with creations by 30 other residents, will be on sale to raise funds for materials necessary in the department.

"There aren't too many things I can do," commented Mr. Mulroaney. "I never was a reader so I spend a lot of my time contributing my crafts in here," he said.

Mr. Mulroaney is a retired farmer from Stoco. "I never really though I'd be good at anything like this," he laughed.

Blind Weaver

Mike Mulroaney, a retired farmer from Stoco, enjoys contributing his skills in the crafts department at Hastings Manor. Mr. Mulroaney's specialty despite being blind is wicker hanging lamps.

Local Red Cross in Jeopardy

Ontario Red Cross Commissioner Barry Brooks (right) says Belleville and district must start paying its own way for Red Cross services and not be dependant on other Ontario municipalities providing a subsidy. He talks over the situation here with local Red Cross president Murray Workman and East-Central Ontario region vice-president Betty Spry. Red Cross met with hospital and social services to try and rectify part of the financial imbalance.

Reduce Powder Milk Levy Urges Ellis

By HARRY MULHALL
Staff Reporter

Levies charged dairy farmers to make up the export differential prices on skimmed milk powder may soon be changed, predicts Jack Ellis, MP Hastings.

The levy took two big jumps this year — from 15 cents to a current 90 cents a hundred lbs. of milk.

The Dairy Farmers of Canada which has been pressing for action to reduce the levy calls its present level "intolerable."

Because of current pressure "I predict Mr. Whelan is going to back down and reduce the levy," said Mr. Ellis.

Mr. Ellis said 25 per cent of skimmed milk powder is exported to the United States and the levy "doesn't seem fair."

The levy is to offset the difference in price between domestic and foreign markets.

"If you're going to assess such a levy it should be against the general government rates — or you shouldn't export the stuff," said Mr. Ellis.

Neville Defends Board Use Of Part-time Counsellors

Separate school director of education Ed Neville believes his method of attendance counselling is first class and objects strongly to recent criticism in the press.

A Tuesday's meeting of the Hastings-Prince Edward Separate School Board Mr. Neville unveiled the names of his four part-time attendance counsellors who will replace the services formerly provided by the Family and Children's Services of Hastings County. The agency dropped its services last May without reason.

The new counsellors are Sister Marion Muldon, for the Whitney, Madawaska, Maynooth and Bancroft areas, John Garrett, for the Marmora, Read, Batawa and Marysville and Trenton areas and Estella Burkett for the Belleville, Read and Marysville areas.

Mr. Neville took strong objection to a recent Education Beat column in The Intelligencer which suggested that by hiring four-part-time counsellors instead of one professional attendance counsellor the board was enduring a "second-rate" service through lack of funds.

Mr. Neville said that in his experience few boards have more highly qualified personnel than the Hastings-Prince Edward Separate School Board.

Voters Have Day of Rest to Make Decision

Since the stroke of midnight Tuesday, you, as a voter, were alone.

No Quinte riding political candidate implored you over the radio for your vote. No candidate's face, except perhaps in the course of normal news coverage, peeked at you from a newspaper advertisement.

If any candidate advertised after midnight tonight, he or she is now in trouble with the new Election Finances Reform Act. Any contravention of the act could cost a successful candidate his or her seat.

The Act's key aim is bringing the financing of provincial political campaigns into the open by requiring public disclosure of campaign receipts and expenditures.

It provides for revelation of all contributions over $100; provincial income tax credits to contributors; and the end to media (or billboard) advertising by candidates one day before polling day.

The act has affected the Conservative. Liberal and NDP campaigns in Quinte riding in so much as all candidates must now follow its rules.

But in the key area of contributions, spokesmen for all three parties say it is difficult to access the act's role in the volumn of contributions.

All admit to an increase in contributions over those in the 1971 election.

But Hugh O'Neil's campaign manager Lyn Harrington says he's "not sure tax credits have had as much affect as we had hoped they would."

And Robin Jeffrey's Conservative campaign manager Fred Deacon says "no one is making huge contributions", but 'a lot of small givers are increasing the size of their gifts."

NDP candidate Carson McLauchlan says his campaign coffers have tripled to about $5,500 over the $1,900 available in 1971. The "average working guy" is giving more because the tax credit does not force him to cut deeply into the household budget.

But Mr. McLauchlan says the new act may not account solely for the increase in his party's financial fortunes.

Influencing contributions is the high interest among voters in the close race, as well as visibility of the three campaigns, he says.

Liberal fund-raiser John O'Flynn echoes Mr. McLauchlan's comments: "We've got three good candidates running. It's created interest and spurred donations."

Conservative Mr. Deacon says Liberals are running a stronger campaign than in the past. Liberals are spending more money, and "we're spending more money to match them."

But what is being contributed, and what is being spent Mr. Deacon wouldn't reveal. He said expenses are more than the approximate $15,000 spent in 1971.

Liberals also refused to disclose expenses.

Both the two older parties say maximum contributions allowable under the act ($500 to candidate and $2,000 to provincial party) are not applicable in the Quinte riding.

Mr. Deacon says most companies in Belleville are subsidiaries, or branch plants, and have contriubtions made through headquarters.

Mr. O'Flynn says home offices make contribution decisions. But he notes a reluctance, especially among professional people, to donate.

They fear, he says, to be "tagged with a political label" if they contribute over $100, the amount at which the disclosure of the contributor is required by the act.

Bucs Use Cubs for Practice

Hit Barrage Led by Stennett

By THE ASSOCIATED PRESS

Pittsburgh Pirates took some extra batting practice at Wrigley Field Tuesday and Chicago Cubs supplied the pitchers.

RICHIE STENNETT

With the aid of the Chicago staff, the Pirates raised their batting averages—and plenty of eyebrows—with 24 hits en route to a record-making 22-0 National League baseball victory.

Rennie Stennett was the most ferocious of the Pirate hitters, getting seven straight hits for a modern major-league record. In addition, the Pirate second baseman tied a major-league mark by getting two hits in two separate innings.

The Pirates as well set a record for the most lopsided shutout margin in modern baseball history.

"Unreal, just unreal," said Pittsburgh pitching coach Don Leppert, talking about Stennett's feat. "You know, I could throw batting practice forever and not have a guy get seven straight base hits. Imagine doing it in a game."

Stennett called his performance "lucky" and thought that his record hit—a triple in the eighth—might have been an out.

"I thought that last one might be caught," said the second baseman who raised his batting average 11 points to .287. "I hit it real good, but I was afraid it was starting to float."

The victory kept the Pirates six games in front of Philadelphia Phillies in the National League East Division. The Phillies kept pace with the Pirates by beating St. Louis Cardinals 4-3 in 13 innings. The Pirates and Phillies open a two-game series in Philadelphia tonight.

Elsewhere in the National League, Houston Astros beat Cincinnati Reds 5-1, New York Mets defeated Montreal Expos 4-3 in 18 innings, Los Angeles Dodgers defeated San Diego Padres 5-2 and San Francisco Giants beat Atlanta Braves 7-6.

Stennett led the hit-happy Pirates with a triple, two doubles and four singles before he was lifted for a pinch runner in the eighth. You have to go all the way back to 1892 to find a player who got seven hits in a game—Wilbert Robinson of the old Baltimore Orioles.

Every Pirate in the starting lineup had at least one hit and scored at least one run. Their 22-run total was the highest in the majors this season and the most in the National League since Sept. 2, 1957, when Milwaukee Braves routed the Cubs 22-10.

Mike Anderson's 13th-inning sacrifice fly sent home pinch-runner Alan Bannister with the winning run as Philadelphia beat St. Louis.

Larry Dierker pitched a five-hitter and Milt May knocked in three runs, leading Houston over Cincinnati.

Jimmy Wynn slugged his 18th home run and Dave Lopes stole two bases as Los Angeles defeated San Diego behind the five-hit pitching of Rick Rhoden and Charlie Hough.

Willie Montanez' run-scoring single in the ninth inning gave San Francisco its victory over Atlanta.

STARS REPLACED

BOGOTA (Reuter) — Tennis stars Ivan Molina and Jairo Velasco will not represent Colombia in the Davis Cup tie against Canada in Montreal Oct. 16-18 because of previous commitments in Europe and their demands for appearance fees. Enrique Santamaria, president of the Colombian Tennis Federation, says Colombia will be represented by Alvaro Betancqur and three other young players.

Walk to Unser Ends Marathon

NEW YORK (AP) — Mike Vail went from a hitting streak to a slump all in one night. But luckily for New York Mets, they didn't need his bat—just Del Unser's feet.

Unser's bases-loaded walk with two out in the 18th inning Tuesday night gave the Mets a 4-3 victory over Montreal Expos in the longest game of the major-league baseball season.

Unser walked on four straight pitches from Don DeMola, 4-6, to end the marathon four-hour, 29-minute affair. The previous longest game this year was a 17-inning meeting between Texas Rangers and Cleveland Indians on June 8.

The Mets tied the game on Unser's run-scoring single with two out in the ninth. Phillips singled and moved to second on a walk by John Milner before scoring on Unser's base hit to right off reliever Dale Murray.

Vail, meanwhile, had his famous hitting streak stopped at 23 games. New York's young sensation, who had tied the National League record for rookies with the hot streak, was held without a hit in seven official appearances.

Bob Bailey hit his fifth home run of the season leading off the game, giving the Expos a 1-0 lead. The Expos made it 2-0 in the second on Pete Mackanin's run-scoring single.

A two-out double by pitcher Don Carrithers and single by Ellis Valentine in the fifth expanded the Expos' lead to 3-0.

Carrithers gave up the Mets' first run on Dave Kingman's RBI double in the sixth, then allowed a run in the eighth on Rusty Staub's run-scoring grounder. Carrithers left in the ninth after giving up a single to Phillips and going to a 3-1 count on Milner.

In the New York sixth, Vail hit into a forceout and took second on a two-out wild pitch by Carrithers before scoring on Kingman's double off the wall in left.

In the Mets' eighth, Del Unser and Felix Millan singled and after Vail flied to the warning track in left field, Unser tagged up and took third. When Staub forced Millan at second, Unser came in with the Mets' second run.

Two More NFL Teams Strike

Jets, Redskins Join Patriots

By THE ASSOCIATED PRESS

The National Football League, five days away from opening its 1975 season, is in a state of chaos.

The players are angry and disorganized. The owners are indignant and more or less unified.

New England Patriots lit the spark in this latest dispute when they went on strike and skipped last Sunday's exhibition game with New York Jets in an attempt to force a new contract. New England officials responded by locking the players out of training camp. The fire spread Tuesday with the Jets and Washington Redskins joining the Pats on strike, and sources close to New York Giants and Detroit Lions said those clubs may join the strike today.

Unity, however, is not the players' strong point. Houston Oilers, Cincinnati Bengals, Minnesota Vikings and Miami Dolphins, among others, have come out firmly against the strike.

The latest bid by the NFL management council, bargaining agent for the owners, was a six-point proposal that, in essence, called for the Patriots to return to camp and management to present a new contract offer by Sept. 25.

New England rejected the proposal and the strike spread to New York and Washington.

"We saw a lot of teams giving New England lip service and we decided to do nothing wishy-washy," said Jets' player rep Richard Neal. "We need something to show us they're serious about doing something to obtain a fair and just bargaining agreement."

The two sides couldn't even agree on the origin of the six-point offer. Ed Garvey, executive director of the players' union, claimed federal mediator W. J. Usery had originally proposed eight points, two of which would have increased rosters to 46 from 23 players until Oct. 1 and temporarily reinstated the old 1970 contract. Both points were turned down by the management council.

Sargent Karch, executive director of the council, said Usery never recommended the eight points and that Garvy had a hand in preparing them.

Raiders Cut Bubba Smith

By THE ASSOCIATED PRESS

While the roster of National Football League teams joining the strike against management mounted Tuesday, the rosters of several of the league's 26 teams dwindled, and among the players cut was Bubba Smith by Oakland.

At the same time that New York Jets and Washington Redskins were deciding to join New England Patriots in the strike effort, such clubs as St. Louis Cardinals, Pittsburgh Steelers, Miami Dolphins, Chicago Bears, Cleveland Browns, Houston Oilers and Minnesota Vikings were busy reducing their squads to the required 43-man limit for Sunday's scheduled opening games.

The Cardinals perhaps pulled the biggest surprise, releasing offensive co-captain Ernie McMillan, a 15-year NFL veteran.

The Cards also cut defensive end Willie Holman, defensive tackle Greg Wojcik and running back Hubert Ginn, and acquired defensive lineman Charlie Davis from Pittsburgh for a future draft choice.

In addition to trading Davis, Pittsburgh surprisingly waived veteran running back Preston Pearson, the Steelers' third leading rusher last season despite missing five games, and rookie tight end Walter White.

And Oakland cut Smith, the defensive tackle who said he was allowed to practice with the club Monday before he was told about it. "He said they tried to trade me, but it didn't work out," Smith said of Oakland coach John Madden.

Miami dropped rookie wide receiver Morris Owens—leaving the Dolphins with only three wide receivers—and offensive tackle Tom Wickert.

Chicago claimed veteran linebacker John Babinecz on waivers from Houston and dropped linebacker Larry Ely. Houston also cut No. 3 quarterback James Foote and guard Solomon Freelon, and placed Al Johnson on injured waivers.

Cleveland obtained safety Jim Hill from Green Bay and cut cornerback Lonnie Hepburn and safety Charlie Miller.

Minnesota disposed of defensive backs Randy Poltl and Jackie Wallace and rookie wide receiver Dave Hazel of Ohio State.

Junior World Series Goes to Evansville

EVANSVILLE, Ind. (AP) — Marv Lane and Ed Kurpiel slammed fifth-inning home runs Tuesday night to drive in five runs and lead Evansville to a series-winning 8-5 victory over Tidewater of Virginia in minor league baseball's Junior World Series.

The American Association-champion Triplets, a farm club of the American League's Detroit Tigers, rode the relief pitching of left-hander Tom Makowski to overtake a 5-0 Tidewater lead and win the series 4-1.

Lane's a 390-foot drive to left-centre field followed singles by Artie James and Bob Molinaro.

After a walk to Ed Scrivener, Kurpiel followed with a belt over the right-field wall.

The Trips took the lead for keeps in the seventh inning on a run-scoring single by John Gamble and a run-producing squeeze bunt by Boots Day.

Tidewater, International League champions, scored three runs in the first inning on three Triplet errors. Ron Diggle, George Theodore and Benny Ayala scored with help from singles by Randy Trapp and Diggle.

Tiant Outduels Palmer

Red Sox Dim Orioles' Hopes

By THE ASSOCIATED PRESS

Luis Tiant picked the perfect time to be perfect.

"I've thrown faster than I did tonight but my control was at its best," said Tiant. "When you have your control it doesn't matter who's hitting."

Cheered by a pennant-hungry Boston crowd that included his proud father who is visiting from Cuba, Tiant was nearly unhittable as he pitched the Red Sox past Baltimore Orioles 2-0.

Tiant, 17-13, limited the Orioles to five hits, two of them infield singles, and helped smother Baltimore's bid for its sixth American League East Division title in seven years.

A victory over Baltimore tonight, which would give Boston a 6½-game lead with 10 games left, would just about end the Orioles' hopes.

"When the big game comes he's unbelieveable," said Carlton Fisk, who hit one of the two homers off Baltimore ace Jim Palmer. "His pitching completely dominated the game.

"I don't think we can lean back and rest on our laurels but if we win tomorrow night it will be bottoms up to them."

LUIS TIANT

Elsewhere in the AL, Oakland A's took a pair from Texas Rangers 11-5 and 6-4, Cleveland Indians beat Detroit Tigers 9-2, Chicago White Sox nipped Kansas City Royals 6-5, Milwaukee Brewers defeated New York Yankees 5-2 and Minnesota Twins beat California Angels 4-3.

Palmer, 21-11, who, like Tiant, struck out eight and walked one, was tagged for Rico Petrocelli's homer in the third and Fisk's in the fourth.

The Orioles won't have to battle Tiant tonight, when they send Mike Torrez, 18-8, against Rick Wise, 18-10 in the last regular season meeting between the two clubs.

Any combination of Boston victories and Baltimore losses totalling seven means the Red Sox clinch the East Division pennant.

Ferguson Jenkins and Gaylord Perry, two of the best right-handers in baseball, each lost to the A's Tuesday night, lowering their records to 16-17.

"They beat our two best pitchers," said Texas manager Frank Lucchesi.

Reggie Jackson hit his 32nd home run to pace the second-game victory after Sal Bando's three-run homer touched off an eight-run eighth inning that sealed the opening-game triumph.

The Indians beat the Tigers on homers from Boog Powell, Oscar Gamble and George Hendrick.

Minnesota's Jim Hughes, 15-13, became the winningest rookie pitcher in baseball but he needed pinch-hitter Craig Kusick's three-run homer with one out in the ninth to get the victory over California.

Finger Zipped

JACKSONVILLE, Fla. (AP) — Quarterback George Mira of Jacksonville Express lost the tip of his left index finger in a World Football League game Sunday at Honolulu's new Aloha Stadium.

Trainer Brady Greathouse of the Express said Mira apparently caught his finger in one of the giant zippers on the artificial turf when he was tackled.

"The stadium is set up for baseball, too, and when it's converted to football they cover certain areas with turf by using giant zippers," Greathouse said.

Mira also suffered strained knee ligaments and is expected to miss next Saturday's home game against Philadelphia Bell.

Mira formerly played in the Canadian Football League.

Quebecois Cap Big Comeback

MONTREAL (CP) — Montreal Quebecois outscored Boston Bolts 7-2 in the second period Tuesday night and went on to defeat the Bolts 16-8 and win their best-of-seven National Lacrosse League semi-final series 4-3.

The Quebecois, who trailed 3-1 in the series at one stage, now will meet Quebec Caribous in the best-of-seven final for the Nations Cup. The first two games of the series will be held here Thursday night and Sunday night.

A crowd of 10,899, the largest ever to watch a NLL game in Montreal, saw Dave Litzenberger score three goals to lead the Montreal attack. Ron Pinder and Nick Delmonico each had two goals with Dave Tasker, John Davvis, Bill Sheehan, Bill Squire, Dale MacKenzie, Gord Floyd and Ross Jones getting the others.

Kevin Parsons and Jerry McKenna scored twice for the Bolts with singles going to Bram Wilfong, Duffy McCarthy, Dave Johnston and Brian Davidson.

Montreal goaltender Ernie Mitchell, voted as the best defgensive player in the game, turned aside 28 Boston shots, including several breakaways in the second period.

"That's the best second period we've had from our goaltender this year," said Montreal coach Jim Bishop. "Overall, I thought we played well in the first and third period, but Ernie was the story in the second."

Illegal Fishing

PORT CREDIT, Ont. (CP) — Police and game wardens have laid 31 charges of illegal fishing in the first two weeks of the coho salmon run in the Credit River, in contrast to last year when only 50 charges were laid during the whole four-month spawning run.

Malcolm Linklater, an official of the Ontario department of natural resources, said none of those charged would be permitted to settle out of court.

He said 20 of the 31 charges were laid for fishing within a temporary sanctuary which is well posted.

Patrol officers were preparing for heavy action this weekend when a local club stages a $2,000 fishing derby for which more than 1,200 tickets have already been sold.

10 Turnovers the Killer

Roughriders Are Stampeded

CALGARY (CP) — Saskatchewan Roughriders, plagued by 10 turnovers, were swamped 38-17 by Calgary Stampeders in a rain-soaked Western Football Conference game before 27,188 fans Tuesday night.

Quarterback Ronnie Lancaster was intercepted three times, including two that were returned for touchdowns, while backup quarterback Randy Mattingly suffered four interceptions. Both clubs lost three fumbles apiece.

The Roughriders also lost their two offensive mainstays, fullback George Reed and quarterback Ron Lancaster.

Both players failed to appear during the second half, although the seriousness of their injuries was not known. Reed started the game with a hand injury, while Lancaster reportedly had knee problems.

Defensive coach Dick Moore of the Stampeders said Lancaster's injury is a severe blow to the Roughriders.

"Ronnie is their key," he said. "No way they can win with Mattingly."

Saskatchewan got off on the wrong foot when Tom Campana fumbled the opening kickoff into the end zone. He managed to recover, but Lancaster was intercepted on the next play by Vernon Roberson. Four plays later, Calgary had a 7-0 lead on a 40-yard pass-and-run play involving quarterback Joe Pisarcik and Rick Galbos.

On the next series, cornerback Larry Cates picked off another Lancaster pass and rambled 65 yards to score. Joe Forzani grabbed off a Lancaster pass in the final minute of the first half for another Calgary major.

Willie Burden, who gained 158 yards on 28 carries despite an injured leg muscle, scored the other Stampeder touchdown on an eight-yard run in the third quarter.

He now leads the league in rushing with 1,132 yards in nine games. Reed, second in the conference in rushing, was held to 37 yards on 11 carries.

Cyril McFall added three Saskatchewan field goals plus three converts while punter Gerald Kunyk added a 50-yard single.

Saskatchewan's only touchdown came in the final minute when Steve Molnar jogged 13 yards through the middle after the Roughriders recovered the ball on a fumble. Jack Abendschan had three field goals, a convert and a single to round out Saskatchewan scoring.

The victory pushed Calgary into a tie with the Winnipeg Blue Bombers and British Columbia Lions for third place. Saskatchewan remained second, two points behind Edmonton Eskimos and four points ahead of the other three clubs.

Calgary gained 186 yards rushing to 57 for the Roughriders. Mattingly and Lancaster completed 10 of 31 passes for 136 yards while Pisarcik and Karl Douglas completed six of 17 for 86 yards.

Injuries Cripple Ottawa

OTTAWA (CP) — Ottawa Rough Riders are scheduled to play a televised football game against Edmonton Eskimos tonight but with their injury list growing daily, they'd be more at home doing a medical show.

The Riders, who already lost the services of linebacker Wayne Giardino for the balance of the season and have been playing without defensive tackle Bruce Smith, likely will be without two other frontline players and possibly a third against Edmonton.

And in addition several players will be in uniform despite injuries that normally would keep them out of play.

Defensive end Wayne Smith definitely will be on the sidelines while another member of the front four, tackle Rudy Sims, is down as doubtful. Tight end Tony Gabriel also is a question mark and will be until game time, said coach George Brancato.

Centre Bob McKeown, with a knee injury, dressed for Saturday's 19-13 loss against Montreal Alouettes but unused, has to be doubtful again tonight.

Quarterback Condredge Holloway suffered a twisted knee against Montreal but will dress along with offensive tackle Jeff Turcott who has a shoulder injury.

The injury list has general manager Frank Clair desperately trying to get help for the defense. Clair says he has a line on a tackle recently cut by a National Football League club but so far hasn't been able to track him down.

COULD PLAY

Clair says he doesn't want to bring in anything but "quality players." But if the player he has in mind shows up before game time, Clair said he could dress against Edmonton.

Meanwhile Margene Adkins, the wide receiver who helped the Riders to Grey Cups in 1968 and 1969 before splitting to the NFL, reported Tuesday for a five-day tryout. Adkins became available again when the Chicago franchise in the World Football League folded.

The full CTV network, with the usual exception of the Ottawa area blackout, will carry the game, starting at 8 p.m. EDT.

Third Soccer Coach For National Squad

TORONTO (CP) — Canada's national soccer team has its third coach this year—Colin Morris of Halifax.

Morris's appointment was announced Tuesday following a meeting of the Canadian Soccer Association national executive committee.

He previously was assistant to national coach Bill McAllister. Earlier Morris had been technical director of the Nova Scotia Soccer Association and a Football Association staff coach in England.

Eckhard Krautzun of West Germany started the year as coach of the national team but resigned last spring when unable to acquire the players he wanted for international play.

He was succeeded by McAllister, who also resigned following a set of games pitting the Canadian Olympic team against national teams of Poland, East Germany and Hungary.

Morris's hiring is subject to financial support from either Sport Canada or the O'Keefe Foundation. The CSA will apply to both bodies.

Ken Revoy Leads the Charge

Saints Knock Devil Out of Bayside

The Bay of Quinte High School Football league officially got under way Tuesday, as the Quinte Junior Saints travelled to Bayside for an encounter with the Bayside Red Devils.

Quinte, sparked by the four touchdown performance of Ken Revoy, had little trouble in handing the opposition a 31-12 setback.

The season opened with typical Canadian football weather. A steady rain throughout the game left the teams to play a ground game for the most part. Four passes were thrown, all by the Bayside quarterback, three were incomplete and one was intercepted.

As for Quinte, they were right at home with a ground game as Revoy and Paul Banelopoulos got the call for the Saints on most of the plays. Revoy and Banelopoulos are both second year members of the Quinte team and last year finished up one and two respectively in the touchdown department.

Revoy has the added advantage of weight to go along with his speed and on most of his calls came on the end sweep which gave him room to turn on the power, usually resulting in a good ground gain for the winners.

Baneopoulos, although not having the weight of his teammate, showed that he could move the ball quickly, especially through the middle and down the outside.

Coach of the Junior Saints again this year is Barry Turnpin. He was pleased with the team's showing, although he noted that: "The team has only been in full equipment for a week and it's still early in the season."

Turpin explained that his defensive line: "are all new this year and although they don't have the size of last year's line, if they can come along, we should be alright."

First indications are that the line can more than handle themselves.

Of special notice on defence for Quinte were the efforts of Tom Haley and Dave Musclow who both showed that they were capable of breaking through the line and managed several times during the game to haul down the opposition quarterback.

Coach of the Bayside team, Phil Meeks, was impressed with the speed and size of the running backs that the Saints were sending out.

"We are going with a lot of new players this year and unfortunately for us the guys on that team (Quinte) with the speed also have the size."

Meeks also felt the weather definitely had an adverse effect on the play of both teams although surprisingly enough there were not quite the number of turnovers one might expect to see in the first game of the season.

"It's especially demoralizing for the first year players to have to go out and play in that weather," added Meeks.

Quinte started the ball rolling early in the game, after winning the flip, the Saints elected to receive the ball and found themselves on the Bayside 11 yard line in a third and eight yard situation. Rather than go for the possible three points a field goal attempt would bring, Quinte elected to go for the touchdown. Revoy got the call and put the visitors out in front by six point, on an end sweep.

A recovered fumble early in the second quarter set the stage for the second Quinte touchdown as Banelopoulos dashed over from the two yard line for the major. Neither touchdown was converted.

Nearing the end of the half Bayside managed to fight to within six points of Quinte as Kirk Cheverie ran the ball 12 yards for the touchdown on a play that was set up after Quinte had fumbled the ball on a punt return attempt.

The second half of the game belonged entirely to the Saints who just kept moving the ball downfield, pushing the Bayside team with it.

Mitch Houle had the longest run of the game in the final quarter for Bayside as he travelled 90 yards to the Quinte goal line for the last home team touchdown of the game. Revoy scored his final two touchdowns in the third quarter of the game including his longest run of the game, 60 yards.

Action will resume tonight as Centennial Secondary School will open their Junior schedule with a game in Napanee and in the senior division Centre Hastings will travel to Trenton for a game there.

Revoy Rambles

Quinte Secondary's Ken Revoy breaks away from Bayside Red Devil Scott Jones in Tuesday's opening game of the Bay of Quinte Secondary School Football Association season. Jones was hardly Revoy's only victim. The big Junior Saints' running back broke plenty of tackles and found or made just as many holes in the Red Devil defence in Quinte's 31-12 victory. Revoy keyed the scoring attack with four TD's.

Westfall Survives Back Nine

If Trenton's Mack Westfall didn't have to face the back nine holes on a golf course there would be no question of his winning tournaments. As it is, every front nine is followed by a back nine and Westfall has to play them.

On the weekend he managed to overcome his back-nine nemesis in the CKWS United Fund Golf Tournament at Kingston to record a low gross of 71 and finish first in the field of 215.

The 19-year-old, Queen's University student played brilliantly in the first half of the tournament and was one under par after the first 12 holes.

By his own admission, he relaxed, a little too much on the final holes, bogied three, parred two and ended up one over at 71. Still, it was enough to give him the championship.

Jim Bibby, Bay of Quinte golfer, topped C Flight (14-17 handicap) low gross with an 85. Another Bay of Quinte Club golfer, John Marshall, was first in D Flight (18-36 handicap) low net with a 68.

11 Teams Enter Gas House League

Expansion is the going concern in hockey these days. Locally, it has hit the Gas House Hockey League.

At Tuesday night's final league formation meeting the GHHL grew from nine teams last year to 11 this season. They are as follows: Constellation, Kelly's Esso, Chuckwagon, Proctor and Gamble, Bi-Temp, Bel Con Engineering, Yardmen, Jim's Pizzeria, Rollin's Lumber, Bob's Sports and the Belleville Generals (BGH).

The league opens its regular schedule October 6 and will play triple-headers on Monday and Tuesday nights. Each club will play a full 20-game schedule with the top eight teams making the playoffs.

Introducing the Centennial Edition of Funk & Wagnalls New Encyclopedia.

The best way to get information is to go to the source.

And that's exactly what Funk & Wagnalls has been doing since 1876, when they began publishing reference books.

The people above are just a few of the hundreds of consultants and contributors who helped put together the Centennial Edition of Funk & Wagnalls New Encyclopedia.

Each one is a recognized authority in his, or her, field of knowledge. And several have Nobel and Pulitzer prizes to their credit.

Their contributions make Funk & Wagnalls New Encyclopedia a comprehensive, accurate, home reference centre with over 193,000 indexed subjects (that's as many as encyclopedias costing hundreds of dollars more).

Each article is written in clear, simple English that gets to the heart of the subject without going over your head. And each volume is bound in covers that are as sturdy as they are elegant.

SELL YOURSELF AND SAVE.

Funk & Wagnalls sells their encyclopedias direct through supermarkets instead of through door-to-door salesmen working on commission. So there's no high commission to pay and no high pressure sales pitch.

You just pick up Volume One at the special introductory price of 49¢ and let it convince you to buy the rest of the set a volume or two a week. That way you find out if it's the right encyclopedia for your family before you buy the whole set.

And because supermarkets can sell in great volume, Funk & Wagnalls can afford to charge less per volume. So you save.

Stop by the Funk & Wagnalls display in any of our supermarkets and pick up Vol. 1. It's one of the smartest purchases you can make these days.

Canadian College Football Rules

Confusion Reigns But Lancers Out

By THE CANADIAN PRESS

Some bitterness and a lot of confusion has muddied the growing conflict over eligibility rules in Canadian college football and the only thing that appeared certain today was that University of Windsor Lancers are still under suspension.

The bitterness began to show Tuesday when one university athletic director accused the Ontario Universities Athletic Association (OUAA) of deliberately precipitating the conflict in an attempt to destroy the Canadian Intercollegiate Athletic Union (CIAU).

"They'd like to destroy the CIAU," said David Knight, athletic director at Waterloo's Wilfrid Laurier University. "They don't like the CIAU dictating rules.'

Knight was one of a few OUAA member directors who are refusing to go along with the regional organization in the dispute with the CIAU which suspended Windsor on Monday for using an ineligible player—quarterback Dave Pickektt.

John Dewar, president of the OUAA board of goverors, said Tuesday night that the board will meet in Toronto this weekend to draft a resolution covering the OUAA's position in the Pickett case.

Pickett, who played three years of football and two years of basketball at University of Saskatchewan before moving this year to Windsor, is ineligible for further intercollegiate competition under CIAU rules which specify a limit of five years competition in all sports.

However OUAA rules allow a student to play up to five years in any one sport and thus Pickett has two more years of football eligibility in the Ontario league.

After Windsor used Pickett in its first regular-season game last Saturday, the CIAU announced that Windsor was suspended indefinitely from national playoffs and that any school which played against Windsor, or any school that played against another school that had played Windsor, could also be suspended.

The suspension also prohibits Windsor from competing in other sports although the effect it will have on other universities has not yet been determined.

In announcing the weekend OUAA meeting, Dewar said: "We're attempting to work toward a compromise of some type—one that will leave a minimum of animosity."

He said that after a resolution is drafted, it will be circulated for member approval.

"At the present time, it is my feeling that the member universities should be encouraged to stay within the OUAA constitution. The majority of universities contacted in a poll on Tuesday favored playing Windsor.

"We contacted nine institutions, and five said they would play Windsor, three said they would not and one was not available."

However, there seemed to be some opposition among Quebec universities who join the Ontario schools to form the Ontario - Quebec Intercollegiate Football Conference.

Officials at Bishop's University in Sherbrooke, Que., and McGill in Montreal both said they support the CIAU while an official of Concordia University in Montreal said they are taking a wait-and-see attitude although they lean toward the CIAU's position.

The Quebec schools, however, don't have to worry about being suspended because none of them meets Windsor or any team that will have met Windsor during the 1975 schedule.

The OUAA stand has drawn little sympathy elsewhere, either. Ed Zemrau, athletic director of the University of Alberta in Edmonton, said Tuesday he agrees with the CIAU suspension of Windsor.

Zemrau said that if rules are set, "either right or wrong, you have to live with them."

Knight, claiming Wilfrid Laurier University had worked hard to build up its athletic program, accused the OUAA of destroying that program.

"They're trying to destroy my program and they're trying to force me to accept their philosophy."

The OUAA said it had intended to change the eligibility rule last week to conform to the CIAU rule but found, too late, it could not make the change in time for this year's football schedule because of a notice-of-change clause in the constitution.

Knight said he made a motion to change the eligibility rule at an OUAA meeting last spring but the move was put off.

"I feel that the OUAA is in the wrong," said Knight. "They knew about this rule and they knew they were in conflict with it."

Goring Okay

BUTCH GORING

LOS ANGELES (AP) — Butch Goring's eyesight has returned to near normal and the Los Angeles Kings centre will be able to play in the 1975-76 National Hockey League season, the King's team physician said Tuesday.

Dr. Charles Aronberg said on the opening day of the Kings' training camp Tuesday that "Butch is in great shape."

Goring's vision is 99 per cent of what it was before his eye was injured last March 1 in a game with New York Islanders, Aronberg said.

Tony's Square OFL Playoff

OSHAWA, Ont. (CP) — Daryl Hudgin hit a single into centre field in the 12th inning to score pinch runner Bob Baird from second base and give Oshawa Tony's a 1-0 victory over Newmarket Ray's in their Ontario Fastball League semi-final series Tuesday.

The Oshawa victory tied the best-of-five series 2-2. The deciding game is to be played Thursday in Newmarket.

Oshawa's Wayne Colley pitched a four-hitter and struck out nine batters. Domik gave up five hits and struck out 14.

The game was a replay of the fourth game of the series which Oshawa lost 3-2 but successfully protested over the eligibility of Newmarket pitcher Larry Marshall.

Marlies Get Gary Farelli

TORONTO (CP) — Gary Farelli, who became a Toronto Marlboro during the weekend, says the merger was a mutual admiration thing.

"Marlies really wanted me and I wanted to go to Toronto," the 18-year-old native of Pettawawa, Ont., said of the Ontario Hockey Association Major Junior A trade.

The Marlboros sent centre Mike Kaszycki to Sault Ste. Marie (Ont.) Greyhounds along with a second-round midget draft choice and a player to be named later in their bid to land Farelli.

Farelli joined the Greyhounds as a 15-year-old, scoring 33 goals and 46 assists for 79 points. He followed that up with a 51-74-125 season, trailing off pointwise a year ago to 56-65—121.

"I was a little disappointed in my performance last season," said the sturdy 5-foot-9 175-pounder. "My point total wasn't as high as I hoped for, but the main thing was my attitude.

"I can't pin it down, but my morale was low. I wasn't thinking right about hockey or school work. I thought I needed a change. I demanded a trade."

Hamilton Arena Plans Take Shape

HAMILTON (CP) — Ted Tobias, a Toronto businessman who hopes to build a hockey arena to house a World Hockey Association team here, will visit Edmonton today to look at the Edmonton Coliseum.

He said he hopes to get from builders a written estimate of construction costs for a similar project in Hamilton. His partners, John Bassett Jr. and Aldo Lorenzetti, have already seen the Edmonton arena, he said.

Tobias said Pat Bowlen of Batoni-Bowlen Enterprises Ltd. in Edmonton has made a verbal commitment to build the Hamilton facility for a price "in the area of $12 million."

Tobias has an option on a city-owned parcel of land of between 15 and 22 acres and said that while he still has a few subjects to discuss with the city, "they're relatively minor."

During a visit to the proposed Hamilton site last Friday, Mr. Tobias learned of two factors which may affect his project, but which he said caused him only momentary concern.

Hamilton plans to build a trade and convention centre which may provide competition for the arena, and the city's pollution problem may force the installation of filters in the air-conditioning system to combat air pollution, he said.

CLC Defends Pension Proposals

TORONTO (CP) — Donald Lee, a Canadian Labor Congress (CLC) executive, Tuesday defended the CLC's wide-ranging proposals for changes in pension legislation against a claim by federal Health Minister Marc Lalonde that they would destroy the private pensions industry.

Mr. Lee, assistant director of the CLC's legislation department, told a one-day conference on pensions that private plans do not meet the needs of retired employees and should be replaced by a universal system.

Mr. Lee said the CLC recommends that the Canada Pension Plan (CPP) be available at age 60, and that the level of the pension be 75 per cent of pre-retirement earnings.

The value of private pensions is seriously undermined by inflation, he said, because more than two-thirds of private plans are not related to final earnings and none include any adjustment for post-retirement inflation.

Earlier, Mr. Lalonde charged that the CLC's proposals, if implemented, Canadians would have to contribute about 30 per cent of their incomes to the pension plan and many would no longer be able to make contributions to private plans.

"It could, over time, have the effect of eliminating or seriously undermining the private pension and savings system.

"This, in turn, could seriously impair our capacity to build the new plants and create the new jobs that now are made possible . . . by the existence of private pension plans."

Mr. Lalonde also said that if 75 per cent of pre-retirement earnings were paid at age 60, many individuals would receive incomes higher than those received before 60.

Arguments that an earlier retirement age would improve the country's employment situation "must be considered with care," he said. Canada may face a labor shortage within the next decade because of a falling birth rate since the 1960s, he added.

CP News Roundup

Unveils Product

TORONTO (CP) — Keeble Selectra Corp. Ltd. Tuesday unveiled a new cordless, remote-control tuning system for television sets. The Canadian-developed system, which can tune up to 32 channels on a cable-connected television set, operates without the use of any attachment between the hand-held, pushbutton "channel control" and the set. The system, called the Selectra, was manufactured at the Sparton of Canada Ltd. plant in London, Ont. and will sell at $99.95.

Shipments Increase

PITTSBURGH, Pa. (Reuter) — U.S. Steel Corp., the largest steel producer in the United States, expects the industry's domestic steel shipments to total from 80 to 81 million tons this year and 95 millon tons in 1976, company president David Roderick said Tuesday. Domestic steel shipments totalled 109.5 million tons last year and a record 111.4 million tons in 1973.

Defends Gold

ZURICH (Reuter) — Swiss National Bank president Fritz Leutwiler defended gold's role as a monetary reserve Tuesday and said a complete switch to United States dollars would make other countries even more dependent on U.S. policies. Leutwiler said if gold were replaced by the dollar in its reserve role, countries holding dollars would be even more dependent on U.S. economic and monetary policy.

Gets No Support

ST. THOMAS, Ont. (PC) — A proposal by the St. Thomas Housing Authority to place a quota on the number of mother-led, single-parent families in any Ontario Housing Corp. (OHC) development here received no support Monday from city council. William K. McKay, spokesman for the authority, told council the quota system was being considered in a general review by the authority of eligibility for (OHC) housing.

Interest Rises

QUEBEC (CP) — The annual interest rate of the latest issue of Quebec Savings Bonds will be increased to 10 per cent from 8½ per cent, Finance Minister Raymond Garneau announced Tuesday. The increase will be effective Nov. 1, 1975.

Candu Company

NIAGARA FALLS, Ont. (CP) — Candu, a lonely male killer whale at Marineland and Game Farm, now has plenty of female companionship. On Monday, a 6,500-pound, eight-year-old female was brought in from Tedder Bay, B.C. But if Candu wants to take his newest friend to dinner, he'd better not forget that she is used to a diet of 90 pounds of herring a day. Last week, the first of Candu's new lady friends, Newta, was imported from Arlington, Tex.

Davis Predicts Liberals Would Bring Higher Taxes

SUDBURY, Ont. (CP) — Premier William Davis is in his last full day of campaigning today after predicting a majority Progressive Conservative government in Thursday's Ontario general election and suggesting a Liberal win would bring higher taxes by Christmas.

Mr. Davis, campaigning in central and eastern Ontario today, was in northern Ontario Tuesday, where he said he was not overly worried about a poll which showed the Progressive Conservative party trailing the Liberals.

The premier said the Toronto Star poll was five or six days old and the majority of uncommitted voters were swinging toward the Progressive Conservatives because of the "negative campaign" waged by the Liberals.

In Thunder Bay, Mr. Davis predicted his party would win a majority government and said the party's campaign had "firmed up" in the last week.

In Sudbury, he told an overflow crowd of about 600 at a party rally that Opposition Leader Robert Nixon has said if he were elected to power, he would bring down a budget in December.

"The only reason for bringing down a budget in December would be for the purpose of raising provincial taxes," Mr. Davis said

"What Mr. Nixon is apparently promising Ontario is a new budget and new taxes for Christmas."

The premier outlined again a series of election commitments which include:

—Provincial assistance to pensioners of at least $8 a month;

—Income tax credits for homeowners and homebuyers who are paying in excess of 10¼ per cent interest on their mortgages if the federal government doesn't act;

—Allowing rent review boards to recommend to the courts freezes in rental rates.

The premier also said he wanted to stress that "the oil companies will not be allowed to recoup their profit margins created by the freeze we imposed simply by increasing the price of gas and heating oil to the consumer."

Ontario froze the price of gas and oil until September 30 after the federal June budget imposed an extra 10 cents a gallon tax. The premier announced recently that the freeze would be extended until Nov. 15, with further action to be considered after the cabinet gets an interim report from a commission studying petroleum products pricing.

At Thunder Bay and Timmins, Mr. Davis was critical of the New Democratic Party, headed by Stephen Lewis, saying its "simplistic answers" would lead to greater expenditures and less individualism for the Ontario taxpayer.

But the premier saved his greatest scorn for Mr. Nixon's Liberals.

"His campaign has been the most negative in the history of Ontario politics," Mr. Davis said.

"We all know what he's against. No one knows what he's for—other than for a Nixon government."

The premier said it was hardly any wonder that Mr. Nixon's campaign "peaked four months ago."

Border Crossing Rules Tighten

OTTAWA (CP) — The immigration department announced Tuesday it will tighten application of border-crossing rules to make sure that those persons requiring visas have them.

Starting Oct. 1, many people from third countries who cross into Canada from the United States will require visas.

The rule would apply to persons who would normally require visas if they were coming direct to Canada from their countries.

Immigration Minister Robert Andras said in a statement that the measure will affect only a small number of the total foreign visitors to Canada each year.

It was taken "to assist in maintaining effective non-immigration visitor control and enforcement in view of the 1976 Olympics and at the same time to help rationalize our non-immigrant entry system."

A department spokesman said the department is "just applying the rules." He rejected a suggestion that the measure was an anti-terrorist action.

Seamen Caught

ST. CATHARINES, Ont. (CP) — Two Greek seamen who jumped ship while their vessel was in the Welland Canal last week were apprehended Tuesday in Toronto by immigration officials. Georgios Daskalakis, 17, and Christos Gianellis, 18, left the Greek freighter shortly before midnight Sept. 8. The two now will be held for immigration hearings. Four other crew members deserted the ship while it was in Detroit.

RE-WRAPPING MEAT FOR LONG-TERM FREEZING

When you buy Miracle Food Mart meat for freezing, you'll receive it in our super-vue trays so you can see the cut and quality of the meat. For short periods it can be slipped into your freezer as it is.

However, if you are freezing meat for longer than two or three weeks, it should be removed from the tray and re-wrapped in heavy duty aluminum foil, durable plastic film, durable plastic freezer bags, or laminated freezer paper. Carefully press out all air as its presence in the package can cause drying, or "freezer burn."

Be sure to label and date all packages so that the meat you freeze first will be the first used. Properly wrapped meats are safe indefinitely at 0° F., minus 18° C., but quality gradually deteriorates if frozen too long.

BIRTHS

FORD — Wayne and Gayle (nee Ferguson) are happy to announce the safe arrival of their first child, a daughter, Stacey Lynne, who was born September 14th, 1.00 p.m., weighing 5 lbs., 11 ozs. at Belleville General Hospital. Special thanks to Doctors Birchard and Peterkin and staff of 5th floor.

IN MEMORIAM

LAVENDER — In loving remembrance of a dear wife and mother Mrs. Gordon Lavender who passed away September 17, 1971.

Two dear bright eyes, a tender smile,
A loving heart that knew no guile,
Deep trust in God that all was right,
Her joy to make some other bright,
If sick or suffering one she knew,
Some gentle act of love she'd do,
No thought of self but of the other,
I know He said "Well done, Mother.

—Sadly missed by husband Gordon, Jodie, Lynn, Patsy, Tracey and David.

SOPHA — In loving memory of a dear wife and mother Kathleen Edith Sopha who passed away Sept. 17, 1973.

We do not need a special day,
To bring you to our mind,
For the days we do not think of you,
Are very hard to find,
If all this world were ours to give,
We'd give it, yes, and more,
To see the face of one so dear,
Come smiling through the door.

—Never forgotten by husband Jim, Doreen, Joan, Jim Jr., Ralph and families.

SUMMERS — In loving memory of our dear mother Rose who passed away Sept. 17, 1970.

The house is empty mother dear,
It's been a very lonely year,
We miss your voice, your smile, your face,
No one can fill that empty space.

—Sadly missed by Rosy and Keorge, Eunice and Bob.

SUMMERS — In loving memory of our dear grandmother and Nanny who passed away Sept. 17, 1970.

To some you may be forgotten,
To others, a part of the past,
But to us, who loved you and lost you,
Your memory will always last.

—Sadly missed by grandchildren Rick, Joanne, Tom and Karen and by great grandchildren Steven and Susan.

Your Horoscope

By BERNICE BEDE OSOL

Thursday, Sept. 18

Aries (March 21-April 19) You have a tendency today to talk to the wrong people about your confidential affairs. Button up.

Taurus (April 20-May 20) Examine your motives carefully today regarding your behavior toward a friend. You may be a little cool because you're envious of something she has.

Gemini (May 21-June 20) Try not to be vacillating where your views are concerned today. Failure to take a firm position will be annoying to your associates.

Cancer (June 21-July 22) If you're working with new appliances, tools or materials today, first study the instructions carefully.

Leo (July 23-Aug. 22) Be on guard if you find yourself in the company of one whom you know to be a bit deceitful. She may pull something sly again today.

Virgo (Aug. 23-Sept. 22) Tie a little string around your finger today if there's something important you promised to do for your mate—it could slip your mind.

Libra (Sept. 23-Oct. 23) Attend to your most important tasks as early in the day as possible. Your initiative begins to wane rapidly thereafter.

Scorpio (Oct. 24-Nov. 22) Most of the day you'll manage your resources wisely, but if you plan to go out on the town it could be a very expensive night.

Sagittarius (Nov. 23-Dec. 21) Today you're likely to leave a trail of things half finished. Several projects will be shelved for a consderable time.

Capricorn (Dec. 22 - Jan 19) Don't praise someone today unless she really deserves it. Flattery for its own sake will boomerang.

Aquarius (Jan. 20-Feb. 19) Don't buy anything today unless you have a specific purpose for it. An expensive item you may never use will look very appealing.

Pisces (Feb. 20-March 20) You'll try to behave in a manner today so as to impress others, though you'll know what you do is not to your advantage.

Opening lead — J ♦

By OSWALD and JAMES JACOBY

Frank Schuld has just published a book called "The Simple Squeeze in Bridge." Today's hand is taken from an article about the book in the American Bridge Teacher's quarterly.

Frank points out that North could have bid three notrump and there wouldn't have been any problems. But that wasn't the case. West ruffs the third one and leads a club. North settled for four hearts. The defence starts with three rounds of diamonds. West ruffs the third one and leads a club.

It is apparent that East holds both the queen of clubs and king of spades as part of his weak opening bid so both finesses are wrong. This shouldn't bother South at all. The play involved here has the fancy name of "Vienna Coup," but it should be simple common sense.

South plays a couple of rounds of trumps and then establishes East's king as the high spade by cashing the ace. Then he runs off the rest of his trumps to come down to the 10 of spades and deuce of clubs in his hand and king-jack of clubs in dummy.

East will see that it is suicide to unguard his queen of clubs and will chuck the king of spades in the hope that West has the 10. The hope is futile and the game is scored.

Ask the Jacobys

Today's question comes from New York and asks us how we stand on the subject of four- and five-card major openings.

The answer is that we try to avoid opening four-card majors, but do open them when we just can't find another bid. Thus, we open one spade with: ♠AKQ9 ♥J432 ♦Q72 ♣J4; or one heart with: ♠632 ♥KQJ9 ♦AQ74 ♣Q5.

Migrating Tissue Causes Trouble

By G. C. THOSTESON, MD

Dear Dr. Thosteson: Would you explain for me just what endometriosis is? I am confused about it. My doctor says it means that a woman menstruates outside of the vagina, thereby necessitating birth-control pills.

What causes this? What do the pills do? A simple explanation would be appreciated.—Mrs. P. H.

Simple explanations are seldom found in medicine, but I'll give it a try.

Begin by forgetting about the vagina. Consider the uterus and, more specifically, the uterine lining—the "endometrium." The "osis" ending of that word refers to a disease process—in this case to an abnormal growth of the tissue involved. How does this happen? The uterine lining undergoes changes throughout the month, beginning with ovulation. The cycle ends either with implantation of the fertilized egg (pregnancy) or with the sloughing off of tissue cells (menstruation).

Flecks of endometrial tissue can migrate from the uterus and be implanted elsewhere in the lower abdomen, which is a pretty fair description of endometriosis. It occurs in about five per cent of all women. The problem arises because the misplaced tissue behaves very much like the corresponding tissue in the uterus.

Thus, with the hormonal changes occurring at ovulation, the misplaced tissue responds appropriately, and the result is pain in its "strange surroundings." It is why a woman experiencing increasing pain during her periods is examined as a possible endometriosis patient.

Brth-control pills prevent ovulation and certain changes in the endometrium, thus relieving pain. In endometriosis, the woman continues to menstruate via the vagina, as she would normally.

I hope I've cleared up some of your confusion.

Dear Dr. Thosteson: Could you explain to me what a cornea transplant is? What is done to the eyes? How long is the recovery period?

If a person needed this operation and didn't have it done, would he lose his eyesight? Also, when a person is past 50, how often should he have an eye examination?—Mrs. V. G.

The cornea is the transparent portion of the front covering of the eyeball. It lies over the pupil. If it becomes clouded from injury or as a result of some eye disorder, the transparency is, of course, lessened, and eyesight reduced. Progressive clouding would lead to total blindness in the affected eye.

In a corneal transplant, a donated healthy cornea from a deceased person is used to replace the damaged one. It has become a rather commonly performed procedure, and the success rate for suitable patients is quite good.

However, only one blind person in every 25 is considered a suitable patient. The candidate is considered one whose blindness is due to corneal damage only and not to diseases within the eyeball. The operation is made possible through a network of eye banks set up across the country, which collect the healthy corneas.

The operation normally requires hospitalization of up to ten days, and complete rest for up to three weeks following surgery. But this can vary, as can the period of healing and restoration of visual acuity. It is often many months before the degree of success of the operation can be judged.

An eye examination should be a routine part of any general physical at any age. For a person past 50, an annual examination is advisable. This is the age when most cases of developing glaucoma, for example, can be detected—and treated.

Dear Dr. Thosteson: Is it possible for a person who is anemic to have hypertension at the same time?—Miss A. O. G.

The person with severe anemia usually has fatigue and a general depression of bodily functions. He would tend toward a low blood pressure rather than high.

But it is possible to have high blood pressure (hypertension) along with anemia, although there is no direct connection between the two. Their causes are different.

Popular Policeman Retiring at Toronto

TORONTO, Ont. (CP) — John Murray is 65 years old, looks 55 and gives the impression of being more agile than a man of 45. But then Mr. Murray has led an active life as one of Toronto's most popular policemen.

On Sept. 25, after 37 years of service, John Murray will retire as deputy chief and executive officer of the Metropolitan Toronto Police.

Born in Uphall, Scotland in 1910, he came to Toronto in 1926.

He worked in a grocery store for 1½ years and in 1929 joined the physical education department of the Central Young Men's Christian Association. Mr. Murray remained with the Y for 10 years and in February, 1939, was hired as constable-physical training instructor with the City of Toronto Police, as it was called then.

He spent almost all of his 37 years in the traffic department and is credited for introducing most of Toronto's present-day traffic control methods.

Athletics have played a major role in Mr. Murray's life.

In 1936 he coached the five Ontario athletes who were later part of Canada's national wrestling team in the Olympics at Berlin. He was a trainer for the Toronto Argonauts Football Club when the team won the Grey Cup in 1937-38. Later, when the national teams were disbanded during the war years, Murray was called upon to coach the Toronto Air Force football club called the Hurricanes.

Seven years after joining the police department, Mr. Murray was promoted to patrol sergeant in 1946, full sergeant in 1951, inspector in 1955, deputy chief, traffic, in 1960 and in 1970 took on the added responsibility of being executive officer to Metropolitan Toronto Police Chief Harold Adamson. He was Ontario's representative to the traffic council of the international chiefs of police.

As traffic inspector in 1953, Mr. Murray was instrumental in uniting Metro cabbies into one industry and regulating the industry until 1957 when police handed control of Toronto taxis to the newly created Metro Licensing Commission. He was also responsible for introducing traffic lights in Toronto and later having them connected with computers.

Mr. Murray says he is glad the department is putting more men on foot patrol during the day shift. "This gives the constable a chance to come in contact with the public at times other than emergencies or special calls."

He says it was difficult being a policeman 37 years ago.

"You only made $28 a week, for six days' work and half an hour for lunch. You were given a new winter and summer uniform once every two years, you had to buy the winter fur hat, shoes and gloves."

How did one manage to keep the uniform clean? ... "Easy," says Mr. Murray. "You took it to the cleaners on your day off."

Looking at today's policeman, Mr. Murray says: "They don't understand the hardships we faced years ago, but all in all they're of top quality, just as dedicated and probably better educated."

Predicts Weather

SAWREY, England (CP) — Residents in this Lancashire village do not bother with radio weather forecasts; instead they follow the prediction scrawled in blue ink and placed in the grocer's shop window. Bill Eggers, 70, who lives 100 miles from the village, makes his forecasts by looking through his six-foot telescope at the sky. Locals say he is 90 per cent accurate.

Stations Provide Retreats For Indian Politicians

BOMBAY (CP) — India's politicians are imitating the old British colonialists in at least one way.

When summer bakes the plains, the politicians like to escape to what the British called hill stations—cool mountain resorts 4,000 to 7,500 feet above sea level.

Hitherto, the practice was considered out of tune with the interests of the broad masses who could never hope to find the money to spend a fortnight or more at luxury resorts.

Many provincial administrations indeed officially wound up their "government houses" at Ootacamund, Mahableshwar, Pachmarhi, Darjeeling and other hill stations.

Now, there is a journey back to the beautiful, mist-covered valleys. Still, the fiction is being maintained that the seat of the governments continues to be in the hot plains.

For instance, ministers of the sprawling state of Madhya Pradesh in central Indian have just moved up to Pachmarhi to escape the sweltering heat. The official explanation is that Pachmarhi's cool air will help cabinet ministers and senior government officials to dispose of pending files speedily.

The New Delhi Hindustan Times noted that "ministerial caravans including wives, children, ayahs (servants) and the next of kin" are on the move to Pachmarhi.

The paper said that opposition politicians who criticized the summer exodus to the mountains were also going to cooler resorts like Kashmir "to study things."

Asked one angry newspaper reader in a letter: "Why should not our politicians stay in the plains and taste the summer heat along with ordinary citizens?"

But one benefit of the exodus will be the renovation of old British-built mansions in the mountain towns bearing such nostalgic names as Abbotsbury, Fairholme, Salisbury Crescent, Collingwood House and The Old Grange.

"The British sahebs bossed us from the dizzy heights of Ootacamund and Darjeeling," said one Socialist Party worker bitterly. "How are our new rulers different?"

However, there is a difference. When the British moved up to the mountains during summer, the number of permanent residents was small. Now, the large mountain communities are expecting some economic benefits.

For instance, it is estimated that at least 20,000 poor villagers in and around Pachmarhi will benefit by the presence of the administration.

Says Muthuvel Karunanidhi, chief minister of Tamil Nadu State: "If our ministers and officials spend some weeks on Ootacamund during summer, the local economy will be helped because of the flow of money and we will also have a better understanding of the hill people's problems."

Natchez Calliope New Orleans Hazard

NEW ORLEANS (AP) — When the captain of the steamboat Natchez walks out on the roof over the Texas deck and blows a clinker on his calliope you can hear it for a mile.

Groans arise from artists sketching portraits of tourists seated in the shade of sidewalk umbrella stands around old Jackson Square, heart of the French Quarter.

Music lovers in apartments clutch their ears and some have tried to incite revolt.

"Ah, we got a few soreheads in the Quarter but not many," said Capt. Clarke Hawley cheerfully. "Somebody started circulating a petition against me and the calliope, but a couple of old ladies started a counter-petition and got 10 times as many signatures."

The small controversy is the latest to evolve from the unceasing efforts here to snare the wary tourist.

Also known as a steam piano, the calliope is located on the sunbaked roof over the steamboat's top deck and consists of 32 tuned steam whistles in a double row.

A small keyboard is built into what looks like a narrow desk, near the pilothouse. The captain is the only one around who can play it.

Capt. Hawley, 39, stands while he plays, gazing fondly down upon the tourists walking over the levee to the wharf to listen, gape and hopefully buy tickets for a steamboat ride on the Mississippi River.

"I'll give 'em 'Dixie,'" he said. "That always keeps everybody happy."

Plumes of steam jet above the whistles. The whoops and shrieks rattle windows in the Quarter. Awesome echoes rebound among towering buildings in the nearby business district.

Even with an occasional sour note the roar of the callipe, an instrument now almost extinct, was nostalgic with happy vibrations of old circus tents and Huck Finn river romance.

"It really pulls them in," Hawley shouts above the music. "This is the Pied Piper of the Quarter."

He plays three times a day, about 10 minutes each time, half an hour before the handsome, 280-foot-long Natchez revs up its 26-ton stern wheel and casts off from Toulouse Street wharf for a cruise.

Quarter residents are growing callused to it.

"I'm a tolerant guy," shrugged Cy Davis, a sidewalk artist. "They need it to create the old atmosphere. But it sure gets boring, three times a day, six days a week."

Asians Worrying Over Braindrain

SINGAPORE (Reuter) — A drain of professional and skilled workers overseas is plaguing Asian countries—especially Indonesia, where the government is taking strict action to prevent it.

The Jakarta government has threatened to revoke the passports of Indonesian students studying overseas, mainly in West Germany and Holland, if they try to stay abroad.

The government has already withdrawn about 100 passports of Indonesian students studying in East European countries who refused to come home because they could earn higher salaries overseas.

In the Philippines, the departure of doctors has been causing alarm.

Of 23,000 doctors available in the Philippines last year, nearly half went abroad.

A survey by the Philippines State University and the National Science Development Board showed that the prospects abroad of higher salaries and faster professional advancement were the two main factors luring people away.

Foreign - trained Filipinos come home to find themselves beset by government regulations and bureaucracy, low standards of living and unappreciative employers, the survey suggested.

Filipino engineers, electronics experts and technicians, nurses and even shoemakers are also finding lucrative job opportunities overseas.

Iran recently sought 2,000 foreign shoemakers but the Philippine government allowed only 200 to go.

In Malaysia, the movement overseas mainly involves Chinese doctors, architects and engineers, many of whom have emigrated to Australia and Canada because they feel uncertain about their future in the multiracial state.

Under the Malaysian constitution, Malays, who form a bare majority of the almost 12 million population, enjoy a special position.

Because of a shortage of doctors at home, the Malaysian government has been forced to recruit medical men from Indonesia, Egypt, Pakistan and South Korea.

In Taiwan, the loss of skilled people is not as serious as it was 10 years ago, mainly due to controls imposed by the Taiwan government. These have virtually halted the departure of doctors and other professionals.

About 2,000 Taiwan students still go abroad each year for post-graduate studies, mostly to Japan and the United States.

Ten years ago, only one in 10 came back. Now nearly a third return to jobs.

According to an official of the Overseas Chinese Affairs Commission, the reasons are reduced job opportunities overseas, particularly in the U.S.—and the increase un the number and size of research institutes in Taiwan.

Moravian Indians Start Corn Farm

CHATHAM, Ont. (CP) — Corn is king, for the present at least, as the Moravian Indian Band Council makes its first venture into the agricultural industry.

A total investment to date of $45,000—$25,000 spent on equipment and machinery in 1974, and a further $20,000 expenditure earlier this year, launched the Moraviantown farming operation under the direction of the band council.

Running the operaiton is Lyle Peters who said that about 270 acres were under cultivation by the band in 1975.

"We actually started farming last year," he said, "but only on a very small scale. We had 80 acres of corn."

To prepare himself for his role as manager of the band's farming program, Mr. Peters enrolled in a short course at the Ridgetown College of Agricultural Technology (RCAT).

Not all of the land being farmed by the Indian band is owned by it.

The band, according to band administrator Faye Jacobs, negotiated the return of the 125-acre United Church mission farm to the Moravian Band in 1957.

"Since that time the mission farm has been leased out," she said. "This year, though, the band has taken it over to farm ourselves."

This is the only farmland now under cultivation that is owned by the Moravian band. The rest of the acreages are privately owned or are being farmed on a per-acre rental basis or on a share-cropping basis.

"The band council got the program going last spring," said Mr. Peters, "and I started working last June."

The bulk of the acreage is in commercial corn, he said, although they do have 50 acres in wheat.

The specialists at RCAT have worked closely with the band and Mr. Peters to ensure that the operation would get off on the right foot.

The bulk of the band investment in the venture to date has been for machinery and equipment and the entire operation is handled by Mr. Peters alone except at planting time when extra help is hired.

The only tiled land on the reserve is the former mission farm. The lack of tiled land is one of the biggest obstacles the band must overcome in developing its farming industry.

Miss Jacobs said the band hopes to finish tiling two 80-acre fields this year.

This year's tiling program will cost an estimated $32,000.

She said that lands are rented at a rate of $20 per acre. Those used on a share basis provide a one-third share to the owner and two-thirds to the band.

The 125-acre mission farm Miss Jacobs said has produced an average annual corn yield of 80 to 100 bushels to the acre.

The band's farming endeavors may not always lie with cash crops.

Indian Peasant Claims Communists Only Talk

BOMBAY (CP) — Squatting in the shade of a flowering mango tree and surrounded by his grandchildren, Muthu Karuppan said: "I supported Communists for 35 years. Now, I'm disillusioned. Communists only talk and talk."

Karuppan, a low-caste peasant of Thanjavur, the granary of Tamil Nadu state in south India, added: "When peasants get their own land or better wages from landlords, they lose interest in politics."

For years Thanjavur County has been a stronghold of the Indian Communist Party. But recent reports suggest that the Reds are losing ground because of the Tamil Nadu government's land-to-the-tiller policy.

Under this policy, thousands of acres of lush paddy land have gone into the hands of poor peasants. The government has also forced rich mirasdars (landlords) to pay higher wages to landless agricultural workers.

the Tamil Nadu administration is in the hands of the Dravida Munnetra Kazhagam (DMK), the party of the Tamil-speaking Dravidian people. The DMK has trounced Prime Minister Indira Gandhi's Congress Party and the Communists in two successive elections.

In the 235-member state legislature, the DMK has 175 seats, while the Congress Party has only six and the Communists seven seats.

With a population of 42 million, Tamil Nadu is one of the key states of India.

Mushroom Pickers Beware

TORONTO (CP) — Mushroom pickers in Toronto's High Park were cautioned Tuesday by a University of Toronto professor to beware of what they pluck.

Mycologist John F. Morgan-Jones said he found Canada's most deadly mushroom, amanita virosa, also known as the Destroying Angel, growing in the park. A forkful of the mushroom cap is lethal.

He said the only known treatment is an Italian experimental drug, thioctic acid, stocked by The National Institute of Health in Maryland.

He said a price-and-wage review board should be set up to enforce controls in government spending, public spending and welfare programs for one year to 18 months.

Party Leaders Make Final Appeals

TORONTO (CP) — With all major leaders talking confidently, Ontario's political parties today swung into the final day of campaigning before voting in Thursday's provincial general election.

Exuberant predictions of success were flying Tuesday as Premier William Davis and leaders of the two opposition parties in the legislature roamed many sections of the province on the hunt for votes.

Premier Davis said he is looking for a majority of the 125 seats at stake and brushed off a newspaper opinion poll indicating a Liberal lead among those voters listing their preferences.

Liberal Leader Robert Nixon said he is looking forward to election day with growing confidence and even disclosed that a party committee has been working on the "transition of power."

NDP Leader Stephen Lewis said he believes his party will get "a substantial number" of seats beyond the 20 it held when the legislature was dissolved Aug. 11.

Today, the premier was to make a whirlwind final pitch for the rural vote, always a key factor in the Conservatives' 32-year stranglehold on Ontario politics.

Steering away from the big cities, he was touring the rural heartland in such places as Fergus, Orangeville, Beeton, Alliston and Stayner with the windup at Lindsay—a pilgrimage to the home town of revered Leslie Frost, whose long run as premier earned him the designation Mr, Ontario, and western Ontario—where he hopes to make gains—and ends the day with a rally in his constituency of Toronto Scarborough West, which he won by only 170 votes in the general election of 1971.

Workers Vote to Cross Lines

KAPUSKASING, Ont. (CP) — Although most of the 120 office workers at Spruce Falls Power and Paper Co. Ltd. voted earlier this week in favor of crossing picket lines set up by striking mill workers, the company said Monday that all the office employees will be laid off by Friday.

A spokesman for Local 166 of the Office and Professional Employees International Union said the workers do not support the strike and want to avoid the "social hardships" which might occur if there were incidents on the picket lines.

About 1,500 mill workers—members of Locals 89 and 256, Canadian Paperworkers Union and Local 1149, International Brotherhood of Electrical Workers Union—walked off their jobs last Friday after a breakdown in contract negotiations.

Union representatives for the striking workers, employed by Spruce Falls and Kimberly-Clark of Canada Ltd., said they asked the companies to lay off the office workers because of concerns about possible violence.

The companies have warned that the payment of health and welfare benefits to the striking workers would stop if violence occurred.

Kapuskasing is about 90 miles north of Timmins.

Bourassa Moves Closer To a French State

MONTREAL (CP) — Almost 14 months after its passage into law, Quebec's Official Language Act nudges the province toward Premier Robert Bourassa's stated objective of creating a "French state" in English-speaking North America.

But the law making French the province's official language has become the centre of controversy entangled with emotional, cultural and social strands.

The law, known as Bill 22 when passed by the Quebec national assembly July 31, 1974, also aims to encourage integration of immigrants—who with the more numerous English-speaking Quebecers account for nearly 20 per cent of the province's six million population—into the mainstream of French-Canadian life.

For the most part, the law reflected the fear that a sharply declining birth rate would mean an end to French culture in the province.

The genesis of Bill 22 was a 1969 law formulated by the former Union Nationale government.

The 1969 law gave parents the right to choose their children's language of education. It was attacked by Quebec nationalists, who said it did nothing to bridle the growth of English culture at a time when French culture was threatened.

But passage of Bill 22 aroused much of the English-speaking minority, who saw it as evidence the Quebec government was prepared to ignore constitutional guarantees protecting the English and was setting off on a unilingual course while Prime Minister Pierre Trudeau was encouraging equal status for French in the rest of Canada.

The language act also gives local school boards wide powers to test a student's language competence to determine whether the student will be taught in English or French.

Pupils are required to have a sufficent knowledge of English to be instructed in that language. Those who speak neither French nor English can be forced to attend a French school.

As well, regulations stipulate the number of students in English schools this year cannot exceed English-language enrolment figures of last year. They also give Quebec's education minister the right to authorize the amount of English instruction.

With the opening of the school year this month, a language problem arose again in the Montreal suburb of St. Leonard, where many immigrant students who had passed language proficency tests in English were refused entry to English classes because of a lack of space.

The law's educational provisions have prompted the Quebec Association of Protestant School Boards to launch a suit which is expected to reach the Supreme Court of Canada, challenging the constitutionality of the language law.

Last month, the Quebec government proposed regulations to further entrench the use of French in the province's business life.

Schlesinger Wants More Canadian NATO Commitment in Europe

OTTAWA (CP) — United States Defence Secretary James Schlesinger expressed hope Tuesday that the Canadian forces in Europe will be improved, and made clear that he believed that they should be quipped with tanks.

At the same time he played down the threat of manned bomber attacks on North America, although he said there still is danger of "intrusions" by Soviet reconnaissance aircraft.

Speaking with care on a highly sensitive subject, the American minister indicated that Canada should raise the priority it gives its 5,000-member NATO force in Europe and give less priority to North American air defence.

He said he preferred that Canada continue its mix of air and land forces in Europe and "that the effectiveness of that capability at least be maintained and hopefully improved."

The secretary ended a one-day visit here, during which he talked with Prime Minister Trudeau, Defence Minister James Richardson and military leaders.

At a news conference the secretary was peppered with questions relating to several defence questions—the need for a new long-range patrol aircraft, talk of replacements for the Canadian interceptor aircraft and the nature of the Canadian forces in Europe and whether it should be equipped with tanks.

He said there is an erosion of the military capability of the NATO alliance and a continuing build-up of the armed forces of the Warsaw pact.

Leaders Appeal to 5 Million Voters

TORONTO (CP) — After five weeks of oratory from the candidates, the voters had the final word today as they cast ballots in Ontario's general election.

An estimated five million residents—500,000 up from the eligibles in the last election in 1971—were qualified to mark their choice among a record 456 legislature prospects from the governing Progressive Conservatives and a miscellany of opponents.

Voters in all 125 ridings—the number increased from 117 through redistribution this year—could pick from Premier William Davis's Conservatives, Liberals under Robert Nixon or New Democrats led by Stephen Lewis.

The Communist Party of Canada fielded 33 candidates under Leader William Stewart, while Ontario Social Credit Leader Sid Hamelin led a dozen. There were 36 independents running under a multiplicity of tags.

Polling hours are from 9 a.m. to 8 p.m. local time.

Leaders of the three major parties voiced final, undramatic appeals in different parts of the province Wednesday night, the premier on a confident note, Mr. Nixon warning supporters not to ease up because late polls seemed to favor the Liberals, and Mr. Lewis predicting his party will do well.

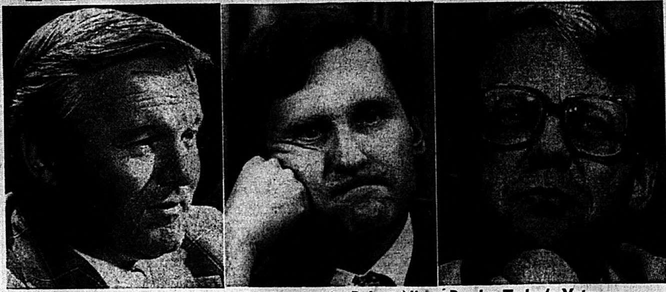
The Conservatives had 74 seats at dissolution Aug. 11, while the Liberals had 23 and the NDP 20.

In the 1971 election, Premier Davis and his Conservatives won 78 seats, Robert Nixon's Liberals took 20 and the NDP, under Stephen Lewis, had 19. The vote percentages were: Conservative 44.5, Liberal 27.75, NDP 27.15. Of the 2.5 million eligible voters, 73.12 per cent cast ballots.

Since 1971, the government has lost four straight byelections, three to the Liberals and one to the NDP, leaving standing at dissolution: Conservative 74, Liberal 23, NDP 20.

A total of 22 former MPPs—17 Conservatives, two Liberals and three New Democrats—are not seeking re-election.

The three political leaders all are scheduled to spend election day at their homes. Mr. Davis votes in his home riding of Brampton, changed from Peel North under redistribution. Mr. Nixon is to cast his ballot in Brant-Oxford-Norfolk, formerly Brant, and Mr. Lewis, who moved recently, is voting in Toronto St. David instead of his home riding of Toronto Scarborough West.



Party Leaders Bill Davis, Stephen Lewis, Robert Nixon Ponder Today's Vote

Pentagon Disobeys Destruction Order

WASHINGTON (AP) — Evidence presented to the Senate intelligence committee has raised doubts about whether the United States defence department faithfully complied with a 1970 presidential order to destroy all stockpiles of chemical and biological warfare agents.

"All they did was hide the stuff," Senator Walter Mondale, (Dem. Minn.) said Wednesday referring to about 11 grams of deadly shellfish toxin which were transferred to the Central Intelligence Agency (CIA) from the army after the Feb. 14, 1970, order.

Mondale cited a defence department inventory of toxins that showed small quantities were being kept for research purposes permitted by the order but made no mention of the toxin transferred to the CIA. "I wouldn't say that inventory's a fraud, but it's close to it," he said.

The intelligence committee's chief minority counsel, Curtis Smothers, indicated later that there is evidence of other "disbursements" of the shellfish toxin to a number of private research facilities.

Hurricane Eloise Kills 28 People

SANTO DOMINGO (AP) — Hurricane Eloise weakened slightly and lashed eastern Cuba early today, leaving in its wake at least 28 dead and extensive flooding in Puerto Rico and the Dominican Republic.

Eloise's top winds dropped to 75 miles an hour—minimum strength for a hurricane—from 80. The storm was expected to move westward over Cuba, and the National Hurricane Centre in Miami said this movement over land should prevent its picking up strength again for the time being.

The Miami centre said it still could not predict whether Eloise might hit the United States. But Red Cross and civil defence officials in Florida made preparations for emergency action and put volunteer helpers on preliminary alert as a precautionary measure.

The storm's centre was reported early today just off the extreme eastern tip of Cuba, or about 550 miles southeast of Miami. Gales extended 125 miles to the north and 50 miles to the south. The Miami centre said Eloise was moving westward at about 11 miles an hour.

Havana Radio said a "hurricane emergency" had been ordered for Oriente, Cuba's easternmost province, and a "state of alert" was being maintained in Camaguey, the next province in the path of the storm.

Heavy rains and strong winds were reported in many parts of Oriente. Cubana de Aviacion suspended all flights to the eastern province.

Guerillas Condemned To Death

MADRID (Reuter) — Five Spanish urban guerrillas, including two women said to be pregnant, were condemned to death today on charges of killing a policeman last month, defence sources said.

They said the sentences, handed down by a military tribunal, had gone before the captain-general of Madrid's military region who could either sign the death warrants or order a retrial.

If the warrants are signed, the government immediately will be informed and the execution order will be stayed for at least six hours so that head of state Gen. Francisco Franco can, if he wishes, grant clemency.

The trial was held under emergency procedures laid down by an anti-terrorist law decreed last month which rules out appeals. The defence lawyers were notified of the hearing only the day before it took place.

Israel Promises No Nuclear Warheads on U.S. Missiles

WASNINGTON (AP) — Israeli Defence Minister Shimon Peres says his country is willing to promise it would not put nuclear warheads on missiles that the United States is considering supplying.

"If you want to, we shall give such a guarantee," he said here Wednesday.

Earlier, State Secretary Henry Kissinger confirmed in Cincinnati that consideration of supplying Pershing missiles to Israel is in secret agreements of the Sinai peace accord. But he denied any promise already had been made to deliver them.

The 400-mile range missiles would put major Arab cities within striking distance of Israel.

Meanwhile, Undersecretary of State Joseph Sisco goes before the House of Representatives international relations committee today to face demands for more details on all secret agreements involved in the Sinai accord.

Chairman Thomas Morgan (Dem. Pa.) said there is no question that Congress will approve commitment of 200 U.S. technicians to monitor the Sinai peace, but that action might be delayed until next month so members can get all details on the related secret agreements.

Morgan's committee approved a bill Wednesday to lift the U.S. arms sales embargo against Turkey and dropped the proposed veto of a missile sale to Jordan.

Israeli Prime Minister Yitzhak Rabin repeated in Israel Wednesday that his country will not sign the Sinai peace accord until Congress approves commitment of the technicians to monitor warning stations.

Rabin also said Israel will not sign the final documents for the accord until Egypt permits cargo bound for Israel to move through the Suez canal.

Sisco advised the House committee last week of that agreement along with a more general promise that America will be "fully responsive" to Israel's energy, defence and economic assistance needs.

That agreement specifies that the U.S. promise is conditioned on congressional approval and America's ability to afford the aid Israel needs.

Members said Sisco also briefed them on two other secret memoranda that have not become public. But they said the committee now must go through the agreements and find out in detail specifically to what they will commit the U.S.

A proposed veto of the Hawk missile sale to Jordan was dropped by the committee after President Ford worked out a compromise with opponents in both the House and Senate.

Beirut Streets Unsafe

BEIRUT (AP) — The Lebanese government radio warned the people of Beirut to stay indoors today as Christian-Moslem warfare continued without letup.

"With pain in our hearts we report that no street in Beirut is safe. Stay home until further notice. There are armed men in all streets," Radio Beirut said.

All firemen off duty were ordered to report immediately to fight fires caused by the mortar and machine-gun duels between leftist Moslems and rightist Christians.

Clouds of black smoke drifted over the city. A hotel and a shopping centre were reported on fire downtown, and there were other fires in the suburbs.

A few taxis that ventured into the streets at daybreak disappeared.

Premier Rashid Karami's government was talking with leaders of the battling factions in an attempt to end the fighting and arrange a "national reconciliation."

Meanwhile, the government continued to resist rightist demands that the army be ordered into Beirut to put an end to the fighting. The Moslems oppose army intervention, contending that the officers corps favors the Christians.

Heaviest fighting continued in the South Beirut suburbs of Ein Rummaneh and Shiyah. A special force of police commandos moved into the two suburbs Wednesday and attacked both sides, disrupting their operations for a time. But after dark the opposing forces fought all night with heavy machine-guns, rocket grenades and mortars across the boulevard separating Christian Ein Rummaneh and Moslem Shiyah.

"This was the worst night in the last five months," a Shiyah resident said.

Police reported 15 persons killed and 30 wounded in the fighting Wednesday, raising the reported death toll to 175 since the current outbreak of Christian-Moslem communal warfare began on Sept. 3 in Tripoli, Lebanon's second largest city, 50 miles north of Beirut. More than 2,000 persons were killed in three previous outbreaks earlier this year in Beirut and one in eastern Lebanon.

Tripoli was reported quiet. An aide of Palestine guerrilla chief Yasser Arafat helped negotiate a ceasefire there Tuesday night, and the truce was being enforced by joint patrols of local militiamen and Palestinian guerrillas.

Quinte Rescue Squad Makes Debut Sept. 20

By ROBIN CHASE
Staff Reporter

The Quinte Rescue Squad will appear on television Saturday evening — just prior to Emergency, the show which portrays the actions of the squad's counterparts in Los Angeles.

Capt. Bob Pearce said Wednesday the squad will be the subject of a segment of Regional Contact, the half-hour program of eastern Ontario life over cable channel six (CJOH-TV) in Ottawa.

The program will begin at 6:30 p.m. and the segment will appear sometime during the 30 minutes. Emergency will begin at 7 p.m. on the same channel.

Capt. Pearce said program host Arthur Kent and a cameraman interviewed and filmed the squad between 9:30 and 11 a.m. Tuesday. The interview was with capt. Pearce and Capt. Bruce Gelsthorpe.

To illustrate the squad's duties at a traffic accident, a car wrecked in an accident over a year ago was secured with the doors jammed shut, said Capt. Pearce. The doors had never been opened following the accident during which the five occupants were taken out through the front windshield.

"It was just like a real accident," he said. "We really had to work."

A subject was placed in the car to be the "victim", an ambulance, police car and tow truck were present and passersby added to the authenticity by acting as spectators, Capt. Pearce said.

"They sort of built it up as the Emergency (TV) series," he commented. The entire scene lasted about 10-15 minutes and it was so authentic, some spectators were fooled into believing it was the real thing, he added.

"It was the normal series of events as to how a rescue squad works," Capt. Pearce explained.

During the interview, mentions were made about the need for new equipment and more funds.

Belleville Needs Proper Marina

By CLIFF KENYON
Staff Reporter

One thing Belleville needs is a "proper marina" to serve the 5,000 persons that visit annually by boat, the Belleville Chamber of Commerce was told Wednesday.

Bev Quincey, the chamber's representative on the harbor improvement committee said 1,000 boats registered overnight at Belleville yacht club and the committee dock.

About 400 to 500 boats did not stay overnight. There is an average of four persons in each boat, said Mr. Quincey.

He said he expected more and more boaters to be visiting Belleville in future years.

The committee to improve Belleville facilities set up a dock for overnight visitors.

For next year the committee is considering: establishing more floating docks west of Victoria Park, construction of a fishing pier and work on the north end of the harbor.

In particular referrence to a Sept. 20 Wintario advertisement, the company warns if the Progressive Conservative majority with Bob Welch (minister responsible for Wintario) is re-elected, run the ad "as is."

If Mr. Welch is not re-elected, "delete hi sname and the name of his deputy minister from ad."

Street Lights Rejected

WOOLER — Murray Council Wednesday rejected a petition to place street lights in the Roseland Acres subdivision saying there was not a sufficient majority of owners who "continually supported the proposal."

About 60 per cent of the residents, 57 out of 90 families, presented council with a petition for streetlighting but when town clerk Ken Rose contacted the property owners by mail some changed their minds and failed to respond to the township's survey.

Only 53 per cent of those contacted replied they were in favor of the idea and council decided it was not enough of a majority to go ahead with the project saying all of the residents would have to pay the charges so more of a majority was required.

The subdivision is located between the Murray Canal and Trenton, on the west end of the Bay of Quinte.

Poor Drainage Hazard Say York Homeowners

WOOLER — Council discussed the possibility of enlisting the aid of the dam-building beavers causing the Trenton Public Utilities Commission (PUC) so much trouble recently in a 10-year battle to dry up the site of the York subdivision, Wednesday night.

The beavers have been building dams on Mayhew's Creek which feeds Tremur Lake, the reservoir Trenton draws its drinking water from, faster than PUC workers can blow them up.

Council was once again petitioned by a delegation from the subdivision requesting assistance in developing adequate drainage for the 38-home site on Highway 2 and County Road 40.

"The development is placed directly on a natural drainage basin and under current rulings by the ministry of environment, the subdivision would never be approved," said Ken Rose, town clerk.

"Unfortunately, when the development was constructed 10 years ago the requirements were not the same."

Municipal consultants told the township it was a poor place for the development.

Residents of the development have been complaining about water accumulating in drainage ditches, sometimes reaching depths of two feet, which is stagnating, smelly and a breeding area for mosquitoes.

One homeowner told council a young child slipped into the deep ditches while riding on her bike and was pinned in water by the bicycle. The fast action of another youth who saw the girl fall was the only thing that prevented her from drowning, she said.

"The township has no money to spend on private drainage systems," Mr. Rose said following the meeting. "We only have provisions for road drainage, and even though this might sound hard hearted, the township is under no obligation to provide ditches to drain landscape.

In further action, three council members decided to attend the two-day Northumberland and area task force conference at the Greenwood Towers in Port Hope to discuss preferred development strategy for the district.

The council decided to stick with its present bylaw of requiring a 10-foot clearance for fire and emergency vehicles on lot sidelines. Three people had petitioned council for variances in the bylaw asking for permission to build garages less than the 10-foot distance.

Ghosts and UFOs Two Courses for Residents

PICTON — Furniture refinishing, the historical development of agriculture, UFOs and ghosts number among the topics offered for discussion this fall by the County as a Classroom program.

Sponsored by the Prince Edward Board of Education the project opened here last spring, closed down for a summer break and has now re-opened. The programs are held twice weekly on Tuesdays and Thursdays at 8 p.m. and the topics are suggested by community residents. No admission fee is charged for the sessions and no advance registration is necessary.

Project co-ordinator Sue Greetham says community education is for everyone young and old, and should cover the many diverse interests of the community.

The program is being presented as part of a continuing education in Prince Edward County, and hopefully from the topics suggested by the community many areas of interest will be explored and new interests developed.

Mrs. Greetham noted the aim of the program is to offer clinics, tours, displays, films discussions and demonstrations.

To familiarize county residents with the grogram the board of education has distributed leaflets this week outlining bi-weekly sessions from September to the end of November, 1975.

Tonight the topic will be Learning in the First Five Years, a program presented at Pinecrest School in Bloomfield and on September 23 a horse clinic will be held at Picton fairgrounds.

Later this month there will be sessions involving the early families of Prince Edward and daycare, nursery school and kindergarten.

In October, ecology and the environment will be discussed as well as historical sites and museums, school volunteers, pottery, special education in the county and police procedures.

A Hallowe'en highlight is the October 30 program, Ghosts, Witches and Other Mysteries.

A programs wil be supplemented by county resource materials including books, films and a list of clubs and associations related to the topics presented.

Men at Work

Picton motorists faced several detour signs recently as Public Utilities workmen made necessary repairs. Near the Town Hill the streets were dug up for improvement to the water works system and on Hill Street PUC workmen used a backhoe for a repair job. The repairs have drawn some complaints by Picton councillors.

Mishap Costly

MARMORA—A woman suffered minor injuries when two cars collided on Highway 7, two miles east of here Wednesday morning.

Yvonne Mahaffy, of St. Catherines, sustained cuts to her feet and hands when the car driven by her husband, Joseph, 55, was in collision with an automobile driven by Caroline Lake, RR 2 Marmora.

Mrs. Mahaffy was released after treatment at Belleville General Hospital.

Total damage to both cars was $1,600.

Provincial police said they charged Miss Lake with making an inproper left turn.

Surprise Catch Nets Profit

BRIGHTON — Weddell Cooper a commercial fisherman living at Gosport south of here received an unexpected windfall recently when he lifted his fishing gear.

He found his trap nets set in Lake Ontario between Presqu'ille Point and the Bluffs bulging with 3200 pounds of eels.

The local fish buyer paid him more than $2,200 for the catch.

The eels considered a delicacy among Europeans are being shipped to markets overseas and the United States as well as to local sources.

Cutting Up

Trenton Mayor Robert Patrick cuts the ribbon that signifies the official opening of the Town Centre shopping plaza Wednesday. Officials of group are plaza owners (from left) Walter Bowen, Dr. Murray From and F. T. McCullagh. The plaza overflowed with vehicles and people throughout the first-day sale causing traffic jams and long line-ups at the checkout.

Kindergym Opens

PICTON — Registrations for Kindergym will be made at Beason Hall before September 24.

Classes will be held for ten weeks each Thursday morning at the County Centre. Cost of the program is $10 per child for youngsters two to five years of age.

Danish Students Visit County

PICTON — Two Danish students on an around-the-world trip for the past six weeks have worked at the Athol township farm of Prince Edward County farmer Dan Nielsen.

Miss Grete Kerrn — Jespersen and Knud Nielsen, both of Copenhagen, left France, flew to San Francisco, then motored across the United States to Canada.

While in Prince Edward they are attending a number of public meetings to study community life.

Trenton Town Centre Opens Month Early

TRENTON — Thousands of cars and people created massive traffic jams throughout the day on Dundas Street East and in the parking lot as the Town Centre shopping plaza was officially opened by mayor Robert Patrick, Wednesday.

The parking lot, which accommodates 500 vehicles was packed from the time K-Mart, the largest store in the development, opened for business at 10 a.m. until the store closed at 10 p.m.

Customers lined up sometimes for as long as an hour, to pay for merchandise in the first day of the four-day store opening celebration sale, in what K-Mart officials described as an incredible display of patience on the part of local shoppers.

"We are overwhelmed by the amount of people, much more than we anticipated would attend the opening," said Mr. Prolux, Director of S.S. Kresge Co., owners of K-Mart.

The centre was opened one month ahead of schedule because favorable weather conditions allowed early completion of construction, said officials of Group R, the Toronto firm who are owners and developers of the shopping plaza which is expected to add more than 100 jobs to the Trenton work market.

Trent Valley T.V., Tamblyn Drug Mart, Loblaw's, the Seven Seas and K-Mart were the stores officially opened during the ceremony which was attended by Quinte Riding provincial candidates Hugh O'Neil and Robin Jeffrey.

Canada's Military Less of an Effective Force than a Bureaucratic Tangle

By JOHN D. HARBRON

Foreign Affairs Analyst

Thomson News Service

External Affairs Minister Alan MacEachen has said Canada does not have enough troops to increase her present peacekeeping forces working in the Middle East.

He said this in two contexts, the preparation of the military for the 1976 Olympics in a major security role, one which could consume as many as 15,000 military and civilian personnel in the defence department and the other in the knowledge that Canada could not increase her 1,000 troops in the Sinai and Golan Heights at present.

If anyone is taking notice of our military at all these days, he should question our ability to mount no more than 1,000 front-line men out of a total force of about 70,000, as well as the turning upside down of the military for Olympics police work.

In a way after all these years of political intervention in the role of the Canadian armed forces, it's hard to say who is to blame they can mount such few personnel when a purely military role is called for.

What with cutbacks, budget restraints, trying to be all things to all men in the configuration of weapons and roles, it's a wonder the military management can even raise the thousand overseas.

And after the pointless flap over the UN Conference on Crime and Prevention to be held in Toronto with PLO delegates in attendance, are we too concerned about what that body will do during the 1976 Olympics?

It is conceivable Yaser Arafat and the PLO with many other fish to fry, and seeking favorable world opinion, will not try another Munich attack on athletes at Montreal next year.

The underlying problem with the Canadian forces is the fat that has grown on the military corpus in terms of what they themselves call "the administrative tail" as they seek to find functions for themselves in an ongoing peacetime phase now 22 years on.

The military men never at a loss for creating colorful jargon in peacetime as when at war, call such exercises "wheel spinning."

And I'm afraid we have so many good military personnel, so-called "spear carriers" pilots, ships officers, army unit commanders who are pushing paper, that it becomes increasingly difficult to mount suddenly a force required basically to patrol or even to fight.

Incessant reorganization of military and civilian operations requiring more and more personnel, a chronic flow of paperwork, eats up manpower in our armed forces.

Nor should one forget the attrition rate of skilled and highly-trained personnel in the martial arts who find it much less frustrating to work for the likes of IBM, the Ontario government, Canada packers or the city of Toronto.

The problem emerged during the FLQ crisis in 1970 that we could raise only 7,000 armed and trained troops prepared to deal with domestic insurrection possibility out of a force at that time of close to 85,000 men and women.

What the military did then was first class, well within the tradition of Canadians under arms to perform a role on quick notice.

It is still an anamoly of that domestic crisis that they did it in Canada with the clear possibility if the crisis had been bigger than it was they would point weapons, possibly even have to shoot at fellow Canadians.

Nevertheless the underlying problem has merely accentuated in 1975 since 1970 of a military force caught up in bureaucracy largely of its own making because the country at large fails to see or support genuine military roles for it.

What's a Billion?

The Canadian International Development Agency is currently spending $1 billion in aid to the developing countries — the Third World as it has come to be known. It's an expenditure that has aroused controversy in this country, yet according to a CIDA official it amounts to no more than "a trickle."

Belleville Rotarians may have felt somewhat taken aback this week when they heard the official, Roger Wilson, say the old economic order had failed, that a "new system" was needed, and that the Third World, realizing they were going to achieve nothing "if they did not press harder their demands for a comprehensive re-ordering of existing international economic relations," would be looking for more from the wealthy nations.

Mr. Wilson, who holds the position of area manager of the Caribbean and Central America section of the Non-Government Organizations Division of CIDA, sounded like a latter-day Robin Hood when he declared: "We are now faced with the problem of creating a new, planned economic order which will benefit not only the small group who planned the old order in the 1930s and 40's but includes the east, the OPEC countries and the Third World."

"Bemused" might have been Rotarians' reaction, given Mr. Wilson's evident enthusiasm for the $1 billion Canadians are handing out already, and for what the Third World increasingly is seeking. In fact, the title of his manuscript was "The Third World Proposes a New Economic Order." But then, as Mr. Wilson said early in his talk, "The Third World is past debate. Their people are dying. . ."

He cited Third World "requests" which could later become "demands." Such as in the area of commodity prices, trade liberalization, monetary reform, natural resources and foreign investment, transport, transfer of resources, and technology. There had to be trade on fair terms and further aid to help Third World lands help themselves.

If Mr. Wilson was under the impression Canadians knew little of the work of CIDA, a member's query as to what the Third World was doing about birth control and looking after its own, rather than being dependent on western handouts, should have helped dispel it. His answer though was unusual. "People," he said, represented security to Asia's teeming millions . . . so many would die along the way but others would survive.

Another member's question — about aid "siphoned off" into undesirable channels — also reflected the concern of many. Mr. Wilson acknowledged it was a problem.

At a Time Of Zero Growth

The Ottawa official asked his audience to what extent they would be willing to accept the cost of the new economic order he was outlining?

"To share the fruit of your comfortable standard of living.?"

Granted, there must be a big effort to raise standards of living elsewhere. But when Mr. Wilson asked if they would be willing, in, for example, a growth year of 6 per cent, to contribute two per cent, it seemed he was in some dream world.

For hasn't this year at least been one of virtually no growth, in the midst of a recession, and leaving little extra to give away? The sort of problems in fact former Finance Minister John Turner was trying to grapple with and to which he found no answers that would satisfy his own thinking.

A Turning Point

A legendary day in modern history has passed and like "the few" who were involved, perhaps no more than those immediately involved, those who fought and survived those traumatic times, remember — let alone gave it much thought.

It was 1940 and the closing days of the Battle of Britain. Wasn't it September 15 those 35 years ago that something like 185 German aircraft were shot down and with that Hitler's fate was virtually sealed.

Yet, those days are fast fading. We live in another time and other, perhaps even more insidious threats, abound.

Earlier this year the 30th anniversary of the end of hostilities was celebrated and the French announced it would be the last formal remembrance on their part, of that occasion.

The road ahead is uncertain enough, but let's hope that as a people we don't lose sight altogether of the sacrifices of the past or of the need to keep up our guard in the future.

Borrowing from Peter to Pay Paul in Ottawa

By VINCENT EGAN

Business and Consumer Affairs Analyst

Thomson News Service

The newest issue of Government of Canada bonds removes any hope of stable borrowing costs.

The federal government has decided that it needs to pay as much as 10.24 per cent on the money it must borrow from the public on Oct. 1.

That means that trust and loan companies will have to pay higher interest to attract buyers to their guaranteed income certificates. During the first half of September most firms were paying 10 per cent on five-year certificates.

And since that's how the trust and loan companies obtain funds for mortgage financing, the result will be even higher borrowing costs for home-buyers applying for or renewing a mortgage loan.

Still another result—the ripple effect is the greatest since the hey-day of Shep Fields—will be renewed upward pressure on rents, as landlords react to their escalating mortgage burden.

Ottawa is not to blame—directly. It has to borrow to redeem $430-million of 5.5 per cent bonds that come due the first of next month. And it is borrowing another $120-million to meet its need for extra cash this year.

It has no choice but to set the prices and yields of Canada bonds at a level dictated by current market conditions.

(Indirectly, many would blame Ottawa for the economic conditions that allowed interest rates to reach record levels).

Here are details of the $550-million three-part bond issue to be delivered Oct. 1:

—Nine per cent bonds due Feb. 1, 1978, priced at $99.60 to yield 9.18 per cent. Just before the new issue was announced, two other Canada issues maturing Feb. 1, 1978, were trading on a yield basis of just under nine percent.

Purchasers of this new issue will have the option of extending the maturity date to Feb. 1, 1980. In that case, yield to maturity is 9.11 per cent.

—Nine per cent bonds due Oct. 1, 1980, priced at $99 to yield 9.25 per cent. Holders will be entitled to extend the maturity another five years, for a yield of 9.35 per cent to Oct. 1, 1985.

—Ten per cent 20-year bonds due Oct. 1, 1995, priced at $98 to yield 10.24 per cent.

That's the highest yield ever offered on such a Canada issue. But, as a finance department spokesman commented, it's a realistic yield in relation to today's market and to previous Canada bonds.

The Canadian bond market had been in the doldrums recently, with prices drifting downward.

Investors were waiting to see how Ottawa would go about its task of meeting its refunding obligations and raising $5.3-billion extra cash that—according to the June 23 budget—it will need in the current fiscal year.

While they were waiting, the big-time investors—insurance companies, pension funds and the like—went on accumulating investable funds.

Now that the uncertainty has been replaced by the reality of high yields on the new Canada bonds, it's likely that those funds will come out of cold storage and be put to work in long-term investments.

For individual Canadians who have savings to invest, the opportunities to earn a maximum yield are almost as great as they were last fall, when interest rates reached the highest level in history.

Police and Vandalism Problem

Editor,
The Intelligencer:

Many communities are menaced by the increasing incidence of senseless vandalism. Remedies range from rewards upon conviction to increased police patrolling.

Probably the best remedy; apart from education in the home and schools lies in police patrolling.

Today, the average police officer is a passing face seen from the sidewalk as a cruiser glides by. A nameless, impersonal uniformed figure that spells authority. But no personal touch — no day to day contact.

Instead of spending money on radios for each and every officer it might be to our advantage to hire extra men who can be seen walking around in the community — in the school grounds, the shopping malls, parking lots, streets and playgrounds where so much of the vandalism takes place.

Personal contact is better every time to police cruisers, sirens and flashing lights. Let us examine the possibility of having at least a couple of officers on foot every evening. They could be dropped off in different areas each night. They would add presence, personal contact and authority, and, in the long run, add much to the present police-public relationship.

Civilization on Downgrade?

Editor,
The Intelligencer:

One of the most widely read books of all times is "The Decline and Fall of the Roman Empire". It sets out five basic reasons why that civilization withered and died.

These were:

The undermining of the dignity and sanctity of the home, which is the basis for human society.

Higher and higher taxes; the spending of public money for free bread and circuses for the populace.

The mad craze for pleasure; sports becoming every year more exciting, more brutal, more immoral.

The building of great armaments when the real enemy was within. The decay of individual responsibility.

The decay of religion; faith fading into mere form, losing touch with life; losing power to guide people.

It vaguely rings a bell, does it not?

The Moment Of Truth In Ontario

By DON O'HEARN
Queen's Park Bureau
Thomson News Service

TORONTO — There is a notable absence of punditry about this election. And you can deal me in on that one.

The first piece I wrote about this campaign was that anyone would be a fool to try and predict the result. Then I said that a main reason for this was the widespread anti-Davis feeling and that you couldn't put a finger on just how powerful this was.

Now as we are at the wire there is no change. The election is practically unpredictable, and nearly everybody, including party nabobs agrees with this.

The campaign has brought out that the anti-Davis feeling is definitely there.

As people have talked about the election a significant amount of the talk has been anti-Davis.

But how strong this "anti" feeling is we just don't know. And also we don't know how it will effect Conservatives who share it when they actually are in the polling booth.

The past five weeks have also brought out that there is an unusually large undecided vote in this election, and there has been no realistic sign of just how it may wind up at the last minute.

The campaign? Has it helped anyone and if so who?

The NDP would seem to have come out of it in the best shape. Its "dignified" approach, which it managed to pretty well stick to, has stood out in contrast to that of the other parties, who have been brawling. And it has had the best issue in rent control.

But then it is the majority consensus not to view the NDP as a serious threat, assuming that by its political nature it won't draw enough support to form a government.

The Liberals, on the other hand, have not offered much to draw support. Their campaign has been largely aimed at knocking down the government.

They purposely didn't present much policy (so that it couldn't be torn apart) and so there has been little lure, except for the appeal of individual candidates, to attract votes to it.

The solid voter hasn't been given much to chew on.

The government has tried to give the impression of "strength." It may have succeeded to the extent that Bill Davis for the most part has appeared unflappable.

But then he and his party made a flood of promises, after pledging that they wouldn't be making any. A good many people may interpret this as trying to buy votes.

Personally I won't be surprised at anything that happens. Anything!

Prime Minister Puts Emphasis on the 'Quebec' as Well as 'Canadian' Identity

By RICHARD JACKSON

Ottawa - - Just in case you have been wondering - yes, there are two kinds of Canadians.

The unhyphenated Canadians.

And "Quebecer-Canadians."

You have that on the word of Prime Minister Trudeau.

It comes through clearly, beyond any possible misunderstanding, in his own text of his remarks at the recent press conference on the appointment of former Canadian Radio-Television Commission chairman Pierre Juneau as Communications Minister, replacing Gerard Pelletier who left cabinet to become ambassador to France.

Mr. Pelletier for weeks has been fighting a bitter battle with Quebec over control of cablevision.

That's an instrument of communication, like radio, TV, and even the mails, requiring national regulation.

In nine provinces there is little argument over the responsibility.

But in Quebec, provincial jurisdiction is being claimed and pursued to such points of absurdity as the use of clandestine transmitters.

So here was Pierre Juneau, a tough, no-nonsense administrator moving in to command the federal forces.

It was a clear signal, wasn't it, the Prime Minster was asked, to Quebec Premier Bourassa that the feds were hanging tough, that the province could expect no federal surrender or even compromise on cablevision?

Not at all, replied the Prime Minister. No "particular message" could be read in the Juneau appointment "by Mr. Bourassa or anyone else."

Mr. Juneau, added the Prime Minister, as a public servant 'has proved his federal loyalties" . . but . . I think it is very important to point out that he is a Quebecer with very ancient and deep roots and that he has, from his student days, been very active in all kinds of Quebec movements and that he is a Quebecer as much as a Canadian."

So there it is: "Quebecer-Canadians."

In other provinces, people, including the Prime Minister, speak of the residents as Canadians . . . not Nova Scotia-Canadians, New Brunswick-Canadians, Ontario-Canadians, or British Columbia-Canadians.

But, as you will recall, Quebec is "different."

The Juneau appointment confirms continuing Quebec control of the cabinet — 12 of 29 portfolios including the Prime Minster's — and so, necessarily, of the government.

That, and the mounting federal pressure for more and more bilingualism — except in Quebec where unilingualism is provincial policy — is sharpening the edge of resentment in the government caucus.

The Prime Minister was asked about it ... would there be "hard feelings in his own caucus" that he had "gone outside to bring somebody into the cabinet," another Quebecer, with so many ambitious Liberal backbenchers in the Commons no longer so patiently waiting for promotion?

Well, no, not really, except.

The "except" came reluctantly from the Prime Minster when, claiming that "some of the backbenchers" had told him "it would be good for me to go outside" for cabinet recruits, he conceded "not all of them shared that opinion."

So look for not merely "hard feelings" when the Liberal caucus convenes next month, but perhaps for openly displayed hostility and even revolt.

The University of Saskatchewan at Saskatoon has the Chief turning the first sod of the $2 million "Right Honorable John George Diefenbaker Centre" on his 80th birthday, September 18.

Dief had to hustle, presiding here last night cutting the cake at midnight at a big birthday bash with 800 party guests, and then flew out overnight to Saskatoon to carve the sod.

Plans are to pack the papers, memorabilia and even furniture used in the Prime Minister's office when Dief occupied it, into the Centre, the theme of which is "The Northern Vision."

Some $100,000 already has been subscribed, privately, to the Centre to build up "The Northern Vision" as the hallmark of the Diefenbaker era in much the same way that Camelot was re-created in Washington as the spirit of the Kennedy era.

OTTAWA (CP) — The women's liberation movement has produced an increase in the number of women criminals, Inger Hansen, special correctional investigator for the solicitor-general's department, said Tuesday. She said an increase in crimes by women resulted directly from women being exposed to more opportunities to work outside the home, and added that women were becoming more independent in perpetrating crime.

Davis Ends Campaign on Optimistic Note

BRAMPTON, Ont. (CP) — Premier William Davis wound up the 37-day Ontario general election campaign Wednesday night by predicting a Progressive Conservative majority in today's voting.

Ne was at home in Brampton today, awaiting the verdict of Ontario's voters in what many observers were predictiting could be the closest provincial election since the Conservatives began their uninterrupted reign of power more than 32 years ago.

The premier travelled about 15,000 miles and visited more than 100 ridings in his quest for a return to the office he took over in 19'1.

Mr. Davis' choice to complete his campaign was Lindsay, home of the late Leslie Frost, premier of Ontario for 10 years before turning over the mantle of leadership to John Robarts.

Mr. Davis is the fifth premier in the 32-year Conservative reign which began with George Drew, continued with Thomas L. Kennedy, Mr. Frost, Mr. Robarts and then Mr. Davis.

Wednesday, Mr. Davis was in central and eastern Ontario ridings calling for a strong Conservative majority to ensure strength and stability in government.

After a low-key start to the campaign, Mr. Davis finished it Wednesday on the attack.

He criticized Opposition Leader Robert Nixon for waging what he called a negative and distorted campaign; said socialism under the New Democratic Party would bring more government and more taxes to Ontario and said that in the remote possibility that Mr. Nixon was elected, Ontario would have higher taxes by Christmas.

He said that Ontario voters, "having heard the argument and debate—having looked at the alternatives—will give us a majority and a mandate to carry on for the next five years."

Lewis Expects NDP Gain

TORONTO (CP) — Stephen Lewis ended a hard-fought campaign Wednesday night with high hopes that the New Democratic Party will do well in today's Ontario election.

"Entering the last 24 hours of this campaign . . . the momentum is ours," he said in his final speech to about 400 cheering supporters in Beaches-Woodbine riding.

"The lines of the campaign have taken hold and it all depends on tomorrow. . . . Pull out every single vote in sight," he urged.

He said the NDP, by avoiding personalities and concentrating on issues, has satisfied a yearning for candor and "straight talk" among voters.

Voters were taking the party seriously and it stood to win many ridings in which it ran second in 1971.

"I've loved it," he said of the five-week campaign. "I've really enjoyed it. Everything about it has made me feel good."

He refused during the day, as he made a last-minute sweep through key southwestern Ontario ridings, to forecast the election outcome.

But he appeared in high spirits and so did staff members travelling on his bus. All seemed optimistic that the NDP would pick up late support.

An opinion poll Tuesday showed the NDP gaining even though it remained third behind the front-running Liberals and the second-place Progressive Conservatives. But 41 per cent of voters were undecided or unwilling to say which party they would support.

Mr. Lewis, campaigning with an ear-throat infection he caught this week, said he expects NDP gains but he kept his exact assessment private.

Court Order Stops Sterilization Operation

LONDON (AP) — A judge ordered doctors Wednesday not to sterilize an 11-year-old girl they say is mentally backward, declaring that it would deprive her of the basic right of a woman to reproduce.

Judge Rose Heilbron, 61, who is married to a physician, said some doctors felt the operation was necessary because the girl was mentally backward while her "physical development had advanced at an exceptional rate."

The girl's mother, a 51-year-old widow and cleaning woman with two other children, had consented to the operation on medical advice. But an educational psychologist at a special school attended by the girl brought legal proceedings to stop it.

The girl never has been named and Judge Heilbron ordered that no hint be given of her identity.

The judge said the operation was "neither medically indicated nor necessary" and would deprive the girl "of a basic human right—that of a woman to reproduce."

Doctors said the girl suffers from a rare condition called Soto's syndrome, which results in large bone growth, behavioral problems and often some degree of mental retardation.

Native Weekly Changes Style

(CP) — The editor of Canada's first and only weekly newspaper for native people says his publication is changing the style of the native press because "it is not a crying towel."

"We include positive information that is helpful to native people," says George LaFleur, editor of The Native People, which claims the second-highest circulation of any weekly in Alberta.

Published by the Alberta Native Communications Society (ANCS), the paper contains 12 to 16 pages of national, provincial and district news, including everything from tribal sports events to reserve projects and native princess contests.

"Prior to The Native People, the only news circulated about the Indian community had to be earth-shaking," Mr. LaFleur said in an interview."And it was usually on the negative side."

Last year the paper, which has 9,000 subscribers, sent its four reporters on more than 70 field trips throughout Alberta to search for news and investigative material.

Although much of its news is locally-oriented, the paper has undertaken several articles on alcoholism, native housing, and working conditions for Indian and Metis people.

The response so far "hasn't been that great, but people are starting to know that we are here," said Mr. LaFleur, who had 10 years experience as an administrative clerk in the Canadian air force before drifting into journalism.

"About one-third of our readership is from outside the province, and that's where most of the reaction comes from.'

He said The Native People has readers from as far away as France, Poland, Czechoslovakia, Germany and Australia.

The paper, which sells for 25 cents a copy or $10 a year, is produced by a staff of 10, including four reporters, three production assistants, an illustrator and Cree syllabics writer, and a circulation manager.

"We do everything here but the printing," the editor said, noting the technical aspects of production were difficult at first for the staff, which had little experience in the newspaper business.

"None of our people has been professionally trained for newspaper work. All the training they have received has been on the job."

The Native People, one of about 15 native publications in Canada, had its origin in a Cree radio program broadcast over a local FM station in 1966.

When ANCS was formed in 1968 to facilitate native communications, it maintained the broadcast and started a monthly newsletter in 1969. In 1972 it became a weekly.

Mr. LaFleur said the paper, which generates one-fifth of its $230,000 annual budget from advertising, has committed itself to becoming 50-per-cent self-sufficient within five years. It now is funded by the federal and provincial governments.

He also said the paper is "the opposite" of many native publications in the country, although "more are adopting our format."

Mr. LaFleur said the paper, with its positive approach, has "never knocked anyone really hard" although it has looked at different subjects critically.

"It is true we could become more radical, but I don't think that's a way of solving problems."

Future plans include expansion; greater coverage of the North, eventual self-sufficiency, technical upgrading and an increased readership, Mr. LaFleur said.

Computer Partners Policeman

NEW HAVEN, Conn. (AP) — Police officers in this Connecticut city are going on patrol with a computer for a partner and officials say the experimental program has cut crime in target neighborhoods by 24 per cent.

The computer digests details about crime in a specific area and, teaming up with a tactical specialist, prints alist of patrol instructions for the officer to follow.

The officer then goes to the neighborhood—usually in the evening or night—to foot-patrol at locations specified by the computer, make checks. He also cruises the streets for visibility before departing.

The patrol is part of an attempt to re-emphasize the preventive role of the foot patrolmen of previous decades.

Chief Biagio DiLieto said purse snatchings near the railroad station were cut 74 per cent by feeding the computer details about time, location and pattern of crimes. Crime in other target areas has dropped 24 per cent, DiLieto said, while city-wide crime is up 24 per cent.

Inspector Dino Montanari of the patrol division said some of the patrolling officers were upset because they were not making arrests.

"But the program has come through with flying colors with the men," he added. "They take great pride in their area."

The four-year New Haven program, which is in its second year, is co-ordinated by officials and consultants acting on computer information about where and when certain crimes are committed. A dispatcher sends officers on specific patrols.

Neglected Adults Get Care

ST. JOHN'S, Nfld. (CP) — Newfoundland is the only province in Canada with legislation enabling the former social services department to deal specifically with neglected adults, says Roy Tiller, a department director who administers the program.

"Not many cases" have come to his attention so far, but this is probably because the Neglected Adults Welfare Act is relatively new.

According to the act, proclaimed two years ago, any adult person may be declared neglected if he or she is judged incapable of caring for his or her home or person, or is neglected by others.

The provincial public service was restructured two years ago and it included the merger of meet rehabilitation and recreational needs in one ministry.

The new department of recreation and rehabilitation included the former social services branch and was thus made responsible for the care of neglected, dependent and socially-deprived residents including handicapped children.

Prior to the restructuring, the department "did not have the facilities for placing elderly people in homes," Mr. Tiller said, so care of these individuals was worked out through inter-departmental co-operation.

The new department and its legislation now protects adults from abuse and once a man or woman has been declared neglected by the courts, he or she is then under the jurisdiction of the department.

Monetary Fund Lacks Cohesion

WASHINGTON (CP) — In the summer of 1944, finance ministers from 44 countries gathered at a retreat in the hills of New Hampshire to construct a new international trade and finance system from the ravages of war and depression.

A drafting committee under the chairmanship of Louis Rasminsky, later to become governor of the Bank of Canada, managed to put together a workable agreement that succeeded beyond even their best expectations.

Recently in Washington, finance ministers from 127 countries gathered to rebuild that structure after the worst recession since the 1930s.

A major policy committee, under the chairmanship of John Turner, who was Canadian finance minister prior to his resignation last week, edged towards success.

The occasion was the annual meeting of the International Monetary Fund (IMF), set up at the Bretton Woods, N.H., conference to oversee world financial arrangements, and the World Bank, established at the same time by a different drafting committee to act as a lending institution to poorer countries.

The 20-country committee, known as the IMF's Interim Policy Group, managed to reach accord on two major issues but there was no breakthrough comparable to Bretton Woods.

If anything, the problems facing the interim committee seem in many ways almost as complicated as those in 1944.

But unlike the New Hampshire conference, the IMF meeting lacked the cohesion that grew out of the great cooperation in the biggest joint war effort in history.

The detailed accomplishments at Bretton Woods would fill volumes. But basically the accord set fixed values for all currencies. The dollar and pound sterling became the main currencies for use in trade transactions and for holding as official reserves by central banks, along with gold.

Also, all major currencies were theoretically convertible among the banks for gold at an official price of about $35 an ounce. In other words, if the Bank of Canada wanted to reduce some of its sterling holdings, it could ask the Bank of England for the gold equivalent of the unwanted pounds.

The IMF was set up with contributions from its member countries, based on their wealth and relative economic strength. It was to lend money to countries when they were in short-term balance-of-payments deficits and to oversee any changes in exchange rates when a currency became undervalued or overvalued. But such changes were to be made extremely infrequently and only in small amounts.

These arrangements had importance far beyond the financial realm. In a nutshell, they provided assurance that countries which were suffering trade deficits would not resort to the kind of competitive devaluations which made the Depression of the 1930s a disaster for nearly everyone. Gold convertibility was also intended to place a restraint on the creation of new money and spending.

That meant, as well, that companies could make export and import decisions far into the future with the almost-certain knowledge that the currencies they were being paid in would not lose their value suddenly and cause vast profit losses.

In any event, the new financial system, along with subsequent reductions in trade barriers, led to the greatest economic expansion and the largest creation of wealth during the following two decades that the world has ever seen.

But by the late 1960s it became clear that the dollar was grossly overvalued. U.S. spending abroad, partly to finance the Vietnam War, had been massive and the supply of dollars far exceeded demand. The U.s. trade balance showed a large deficit. France and some other countries then began demanding that the dollars they held be converted into gold but the store of the metal in Fort Knox could not begin to meet the potential demand.

Speculation mounted against the dollar as big multinational firms began selling it in huge amounts and the U.S., rather than continue spending its reserves to prop up the currency, finally severed the link with gold in August, 1971. This left the dollar floating against other currencies and it immediately moved downward making American exports cheaper and imports more expensive.

Other countries quickly fol- created violent fluctuations lowed suit and within a year most major currencies had joined the float. Then came the recession. Speculation against various currencies and volatile market conditions, disrupting trade flows that were already decreasing. Floating, however, probably eased the problems since the speculation against weaker currencies would have caused havoc under a fixed system.

Now, however, the IMF and the Interim Committee are trying to put together a new system that might eventually produce something resembling both a floating and a fixed rate system. Currencies would be able to move to some degree in response to the market but within strict limits on how wide the rate fluctuations can be so that trade would not be affected significantly.

Budgies Reared In Garage

WALLACEBURG, Ont. (CP) — — Louis Devolder has about 250 budgies in his garage. He is under contract with the Hartz Mountain Pet Supplies Co. Ltd. of St. Thomas, Ont., to raise budgies for commercial sale.

His is one of the many commercial aviaries in the area. Some of these breeders have as many as 1,000 pairs of birds for breeding purposes.

Mr. Devolder became interested in budgies when he met a farmer who was raising them. After saving money for a couple of years, he bought his first stock and cages and was in business.

He bought cages from a breeder in Dresden, Ont., who was going out of business. He would only agree to sell to Mr. Devolder if he bought all of them. So while Mr. Devolder started out with 50 pairs of budgies, he had enough cages for 240.

Once the eggs are laid, it takes about 18 days for the first one to hatch. The others then hatch at two-day intervals.

When the young birds have reached an average of nine weeks, Mr. Devolder takes them to Hartz Mountain where he sells them for $3.25 each.

The contracted breeders are independent of the parent company. But the firm supplies their feed at a 10-per-cent reduction and offers to help with technical problems involved in raising the budgies.

Mr. Devolder said he has been lucky and hasn't had many problems with his budgies although trouble may arise at any time.

ALL IN THE FAMILY

By ISABEL HUGGAN

Who'd Want to Be 'Somebody Junior'?

A recent conversation with a friend who's about to become a father went something like this:

"Got any names picked out for the baby?"

"Not yet, but there's one thing for sure. If it's a boy, it's not going to be called after me," he said.

"There's nothing wrong with your name. Why not?"

"That's just it. It's my name. It's a lot of foolishness naming a kid the same as his old man so he goes through life as Somebody Junior," he replied. "What a pain to always be reminded that you're a second-hand version.

"I've seen families where you'll have a grandfather called Ed, a son called Ed Junior, and a grandson called Eddie. It's crazy, just makes things confusing.

"It's hard enough to establish your identity without going through life with a name that connects you to somebody else's personality. My kid is going to have his own name."

Usually it's the first son who is saddled with daddy's name. What does it feel like to be the next one in line, who doesn't get called after his father? Maybe then it seems like more of an honor, and you feel a little left out, a little envious of the chosen one.

The whole idea of establishing a family line through sons named after fathers is a primitive and clannish practice that has as its basic idea the notion that the first son is better than the second. He inherits not only the father's name, but, traditionally, anyway, a greater share of the family estate and responsibilities, and social esteem.

And there's a certain snobby appeal in calling your boy William 111 instead of just plain Bill.

An interesting thought: Do you know any girls who are named after their mothers and called Junior? Why are senior and junior divisions only applied to the male side of the family?

Naming a child after oneself is a curiously self-interested thing to do, as if the intention in having a child were to create a carbon copy. But human beings don't multiply by simple cell division, and there's no child who's a duplicate of his father.

Even stranger, and perhaps more potentially troublesome, is the custom of naming your child "in honor of" somebody else. Calling the baby after an old auntie or uncle or family friend in order to pay tribute or to get left the gold watch, seems a little unfair to the speechless baby, who is left with a lifetime of duties to fulfil on this account.

How many of us have had to be nice to relatives that our brothers and sisters are allowed to ignore, simply because we share the same name? How does it feel to grow up and discover you don't even like or admire the person you were named after?

How many of us, after all, are happy sharing a name with somebody else, no matter how much we admire or like that person? One of the reasons for nicknames — Bud, Skip, Toots and the like — is to try to give the child an identity apart from the handed-down name. Why not just call him a new name to start with?

Next Week: More about the magic of names.

QUINTE WI

A bus trip to Campbellford was a special event for the September meeting of the Quinte Women's Institute. The members conducted their business after a picnic lunch in Campbellford Park and decided to send a contribution to the Save The Sight Fund.

A tour of the chocolate factory followed, arranged by Canadian Industries convener Lena Burkitt. The women viewed the candy-making process for both plain bars and chocolate covered almonds, the name of which is "The World's Finest Chocolate". After the tour they returned to Belleville by way of Madoc.

Artist First, Wife Last, Zarina Packs Up Again

NEW YORK (AP) — Zarina is packing again. She stuffs papers into a striped, woven bag.

"My filing cabinet," says the Indian artist wryly. In her new Honda, Zarina will put this and a portfolio of prints and her print-making tools. And a few saris.

Then she'll head once more into strange country.

Zarina will be leaving behind a posh Manhattan apartment with many rooms, two houseboys and a view of the East River.

In Los Angeles, she'll live in one room on a modest street.

Nearby is India Ink Gallery, first to show Zarina's work in the United States. She has friends there.

The Manhattan pad is home for Zarina's husband, a career diplomat.

Zarina has no home, she says. She's a career artist.

She has been an artist almost as long as she has been a wife. Her woodprints and silk screen prints have hung in India, Greece, Norway, Japan, Poland, West Germany. Her art has won Zarina awards and brought her some money.

Zarina is a small, dark woman who likes French movies, often wears blue jeans and sometimes practises yoga. She can converse in five languages and cook in several.

Her problems are not exotic. Women and artists who aren't Indian will recognize many of them.

As a little girl in Aligarh, India, Zarina was determined "to be my own person, and to be an artist."

But the stern-visaged Moslem professor, her father, made her study mathematics instead. Then Zarina's marriage was arranged—to a boy she'd known most of her life.

"I thought marriage would be like one long date," mused Zarina, 17 years later. "I didn't realize it would mean always doing what the other person wanted, thinking what he thought, seeing people he wanted to see."

Zarina's Indian husband was "posted" to Bangkok. There, in 1958, she made her first print, from a laboriously carved linoleum block, under the dining-room table.

Zarina's husband was sent next to Paris. There, in 1964, at the atelier of S. W. Hayter, printmakers' printmaker, she began learning—and unlearning.

And her husband's indulgences had turned to disapproval.

One day Zarina told her husband: "I'm leaving."

The darkly handsome diplomat was reasonable. "But how can you?" he said. "We're having a dinner party tonight!"

Zarina flew off to London wearing a Courreges coat with no money in the pockets. She was hungry. She was cold. But she told herself: "No man will ever again interfere with my life and tell me what to do!"

It was in New Delhi, in 1968, Zarina said, that "my life as an artist really began."

She rented a studio. This was not something a proper Indian wife does.

Zarina held Sunday soirees "Everybody came," she said. "Even my husband. Bringing his friends."

Zarina tried tapestry design. People and institutions bought her large tapestries. She tried sculpture. A pipe company put Zarina's waving forest of flexible metal in the middle of its exposition pavilion.

And Zarina never stopped making prints.

Some in a New Delhi gallery caught the eye of Joan P. Miller of Los Angeles. She was in India on a buying trip for her gallery. She demanded to meet the artist.

India Ink Gallery held Zarina shows in 1973 and 1974, her first in the U. S. It will hold another in October. This summer, galleries in New York City and San Francisco showed Zarina's newest work.

She calls it "white-on-white." Remote, ironic, it shows symbols of some women's lives. A baby bottle. A spool of thread.

Women Find Better Jobs in North

OTTAWA (CP) — Women are more likely to find equality of employment in the north than elsewhere in Canada, says Katie Cooke, chairman of the federal advisory council on status of women.

The traditional shortage of labor in the Yukon and the Northwest Territories has forced companies to abandon job stereotypes still prevalent in the south, Mrs. Cooke told reporters Wednesday following a month-long tour of the northern territories.

Mrs. Cooke said the social attitude toward working women was more advanced because the high cost of northern living often requires two family incomes. About 50 per cent of the women in the north hold paying jobs, compared with 38 per cent nationally.

The employers, mostly resources companies, want women workers to be serious. "I take it they had a few women who went up there just to prove they could do it—that doesn't go down well."

Mrs. Cooke found there are many couples working for the same company. Increasingly, the companies are willing to provide suitable accommodation for a husband and wife because the cost is comparable to housing two men in a bunkhouse and the policy contributes to a stable workforce.

The Yukon recently changed its mining regulations to allow women to work in underground mines. Women are allowed underground in mines in Manitoba and Newfoundland, and with government permission in British Columbia, but are still barred in the N.W.T. and other provinces.

Mrs. Cooke found the equality of the sexes extended to social encounters, which she said are more direct in the north.

"If a single woman walks into a bar in the north, there's no snickering—which is more than you can say about some bars in Toronto."

However, Mrs. Cooke said there is a shortage of day care facilities in the north, where it is a particular problem because of the high proportion of working women. More federal funds for social amenities such as day care is needed "if we are serious that people should live there."

Mrs. Cooke said she also received complaints about the continued refusal of the federal northern health services to hire married nurses because of a long-standing regulation requiring nurses to live in single-person accommodation at the nursing stations.

She said this apparently contradicts federal civil service policy prohibiting discrimination on the basis of marital status.

Betty Ford Gaining Confidence In Difficult 'First Lady' Role

WASHINGTON (AP) — Betty Ford says she has found excitement and self-confidence in her first year in the White House, even though it was marked by illness and occasional loneliness.

She is ready to campaign for her husband's election in 1976 by travelling with him as much as possible. And she looks forward to continuing to do things "that interest me and that I've been involved in."

The First Lady, says those things include continuing to push for passage of the Equal Rights Amendment and expressing interest in the performing arts and in handicapped and retarded people.

From being "scared to death" at the prospect of moving into the White House when her husband suddenly became president in August, 1974, Mrs. Ford has come to grips with life in the 132-room, 18-acre executive mansion.

"I had no idea when we came a year ago how many responsibilities there would be and decisions to be made as First Lady. I found that it was practically a job."

From entertaining a dozen heads of state to answering an average of 2,000 letters a week, Mrs. Ford has been coping with that job.

"Gradually, I've gained more confidence in my ability to handle situations."

And, as a political wife for more than a quarter-century whose husband has worked long hours and been absent on frequent political campaigns, she has found:

"The White House has given me more time to spend with my husband."

The Fords have established a relaxed family life in the White House, with pet cat Shan, and a new golden retriever dog, Liberty.

They enjoy dancing and official social life, often lingering at White House parties, dancing cheek to cheek.

This year the president and his wife have passed some family milestones, too. Daughter Susan turned 18 and graduated from high school and son Jack, 23, completed his four years as a forestry major at Utah State University.

The four Ford children, who are comfortable in blue jeans and like the outdoor life, have indicated they really preferred their more private lives, when the family lived in a modest home in suburban Alexandria, Va., without Secret Service agents.

But they all frankly enjoy some of the special privileges that go with White House life, including riding on presidential planes and impressing their friends with White House invitations.

Ann Landers

It's No Laughing Matter!

Dear Ann Landers: I am a 14-year-old girl with a problem I need to do something about but I don't know where to begin.

Whenever I laugh really hard I wet my pants. This doesn't happen EVERY time I laugh, of course. Only when something hilarious happens do I get out of control.

Do you think maybe something is wrong with my kidneys? Or is it strictly emotional. What can I do about it Do you know of any medication or treatment that might help? I have had some very embarrassing moments and I don't want to go through life afraid to laugh—Slightly Freaky

Dar S. F.: The problem you describe has nothing to do with the kidneys. You should see a gynecologist or a urologist. It's possible that a minor surgical procedure can fix you up so you'll be able to laugh as hard as you want and not worry.

Dear Ann Landers: While looking over a pile of back papers I ran across a letter printed on April 13. I hope it's not too late to comment. It was from a professed atheist who listed among her more illustrious fellows Clarence Darrow, Albert Einstein, Thomas Paine and Thomas Jefferson.

You correctly pointed out that neither Einstein nor Jefferson were atheists. I'd like to comment on Clarence Darrow. He was an agnostic, not an atheist. During the Leopold-Loeb trial when Darrow was asked if he believed in God, he replied, "After half a century of doubting and speculating I haven't come to any definite decision."

Your atheist correspondent, however, could have correctly cited Sinclair Lewis. Then there was H. L. Mencken, whose writings were filled with hate. She could have also added Lenin and Stalin, two of the world's most vicious purveyors of terror and oppression.—San Gabriel Valley

Dear Gabe: Thank you for the goodie on Darrow. As for H. L. Mencken, his writings were loaded with sarcasm (which may be a watered-down form of hate) but few writers could match him for trenchant humor and barbed wit.

Dear Ann Landers: This is an emergency. A man I met recently and have become very fond of is tormented by sleeplessness and arthritic pain. He also has a nervous tic. At the moment he is involved in a nasty divorce which is not helping matters any.

He claims he gets mysterious phone calls night and day. We can't be seen in public together because he insists he is being followed by detectives. He speaks in a whisper when we are alone because he's afraid the room is bugged—even my own apartment. He refuses to eat anything unless I taste it first.

I think this dear man needs to see a psychiatrist even though he insists he's perfectly sane. He says I'm "naive" and insists I'm the one who needs help.

What can I do?—Worried in Vancouver

Dear Worried: You can stop seeing him—and the sooner the better. First, he's married. Second, he has many classic symptoms of mental illness. Third, his refusal to seek help and his projection of his illness on to you bode ill for the future.

Dear Ann Landers: My mother asked me to write to you because she is too embarrassed. Also, she only went to the sixth grade and is ashamed of her English and spelling.

Mom has arthritis and high blood pressure. She is also in the change. She has a good doctor and feels pretty good.

The problem is that Mom seems to be growing a lot of hair on her arms and legs. Her age is 52. What does this sound like to you? I realize you aren't a doctor, but maybe you can check with some of your experts and give Mom some help.—A Daughter Who Cares

Dear Daughter: The first thing your mother should do is have a thorough examination to make sure she has no tumors that are producing male hormones. These tumors not only can cause hairiness, but they might be malignant.

I don't want to scare anybody, but it's much better to look into a problem and learn you are OK than ignore it and be sorry later that it wasn't discovered in the early stages.

A New Name For An Old Business

Talking with Mr. Briende of Trenton Optical this week, I came up with some very interesting news. He is really hoping that the renovations will be completed by next week and that their sign will be back in place. However, when their sign does go back up, you may think you have come to the wrong store, because it won't say Trenton Optical anymore. Trenton Optical, 54 Bridge St. E. of Belleville are changing their name to Quinte Optical. This change is taking place because of frequent confusion over finding a Trenton Optical in the city of Belleville. However, you'll get the same friendly, professional service at Quinte Optical that you received from Trenton Optical because it's run by the same friendly people.

Christmas Already?

It isn't too early to start thinking about Christmas? What a dreadful thing to say when we're still enjoying summery weather and few leaves have started to change. However, if you are in charge of organizing your office Christmas party, or club Christmas social, now is the time to book a room for your function at the Four Seasons Hotel. The Four Seasons have five function rooms from which you may choose. They will accommodate from ten to 200 people. Some of the larger rooms are available for dancing. There is a full selection of new menus that offer interesting choices for your meal. All rooms are nicely decorated for the Christmas season. For parties of 30 or more, there is no rental charge for the room. Inquire about bookings now.

Time To Think About Your Furnace

If something goes wrong with your furnace, it will cost you $11.00 an hour for someone to come and fix it. Should the trouble develop at night or on the weekend, it will cost $15.00 an hour for a repair man. And don't forget the cost of parts over and above the labor charge. Can you really afford not to own a Parts Replacement Plan from Moira-Schuster Fuels? This plan covers all labor costs and the replacement of all parts of the oil burner and related controls. Last but not least it covers a once-a-year cleaning of your furnace and a clean furnace is an economical furnace. Probably the best buy you'll make this week at $39.60 for a Parts Replacement Plan from Moira-Schuster, 17 S. Pinnacle St. You'll appreciate it this winter.

Cover Your Windows With Color

If you're looking for window coverings that are the very latest in room decorating, Decor Studios is an interesting store to visit. Have draperies custom made from a wide selection of the newest materials or choose custom made blinds from many colors and designs. But here is something really new. Decor Studios in the Belleville Plaza have blinds made of wood interwoven with natural and synthetic yarns. The yarns are specially created to complement the wood. They are in many different widths and textures and the color range is unbelievable. The blinds come in all sizes and can also be used for door coverings and room dividers. Stop in and see them today.

Any Day Is A Good Day For Lunch

You can find any excuse to enjoy a delightful luncheon with friends. If it's a gorgeous day, it would be a good day to enjoy the beautiful drive to Picton where you'll enjoy a delicious luncheon selection at the Inn on the Bay Tavern. Should the day be grey, raining and depressing, lift your spirits by meeting your friends and get together with them for a happy, chatty luncheon. Where better of course than the Inn on the Bay. Even on the dreariest days its warm and cozy atmosphere cheers you up. And if you can find room after you've eaten your first course, try some of their scrumptious Black Forest cake. You'll want to go back often, no matter what the weather.

Final Weekend For Fall Sale

This is the final weekend of Wray's Home Furnishers Show and Sale. If you haven't managed to stop in and see their great furniture buys, you'd better make a note to go before closing time Sat., Sept. 20 or you'll be too late to enjoy worthwhile savings on quality furnishings. Wray's have reduced the price of some discontinued lines of furniture even further so that they'll be out of their store by the time the sale is over. You'll find bedroom and dining room suites by such well known names as Deilcraft, Gibbard and Victoriaville all at great savings for you. Visit Wray's at 306 Front St. Don't miss the last few days of their fantastic sale.

Vader's Cars Are Good Buys

Vader's Car Sales like to pride themselves in always having an excellent selection of new cars on their lot. However, this is one time of year when they can't make that claim. They are really low on 1975 models and the '76 models won't be in for a few weeks yet. Now would be the time to buy that new economy car you've been wanting. Since their stock is low, you might have to take second choice in color and options, but all this is taken into consideration and you'll be given a really good deal. If you're in the market for a good used car, you'll find many late model economy cars on their lot. Check for deals at 21 College St. W. The boss is on holidays, so you just might make a deal that will delight you.

Boar Snagged

TRAVEMUNDE, West Germany (AP) — Eight fishermen had a trophy and a tale to tell when they returned from a Baltic Sea vacation. They caught and killed a 176-pound wild boar they said they found swimming four miles offshore near Fehmarn Island. To back up their story, they had the carcass and photos.

Russian Workers Think Americans Are Starving

MOSCOW (Reuter) — Ordinary Russians believe that workers in the United States are starving on the streets. They are convinced that Richard Nixon was unfairly drummed out of the presidency and they cannot accept that nearly all Americans can afford to run cars.

They are unsure whether there is censorship, but do not doubt that anyone who joins a political demonstration is hauled in for interrogation by the police. They firmly believe that unemployment is so serious that only the lucky few have jobs.

This, in rough terms, is the picture of America seen through Russian eyes to emerge from an exhibition of U.S. household technology held recently in Moscow after stays in Tashkent, in Central Asia, and the Caucasian port of Baku.

The exhibition, entitled Technology in the American Home, opened for a month in each city, giving thousands of Soviet citizens their first chance to interrogate real, live Americans.

"The show must have been seen by nearly a million people," said one of the 20 young American guides, many students of Russian, who have been accompanying the exhibition, helping to set it up and explaining it all to curious visitors.

"We have been inundated with questions about American life, most falling into a definite pattern," the guide said.

"They've given us a pretty shrewd idea what ordinary Soviet people believe about our country and the West."

Carolyn Buck, a 23-year-old international affairs graduate from New York, said the one question most consistently asked is on unemployment.

She said disbelief was universal when Russians heard that those without jobs were paid unemployment benefits and did not have to starve.

Miss Buck's responsibility among the 14 "rooms" with various furnishings and fittings that made up the exhibition was a section on appliances, ranging from washing machines to waffle-makers and coffee-percolators.

"It's usually impossible to persuade people that low-level American workers can actually afford this kind of thing—as that's one of the main questions I'm asked," she said.

At a neighboring stand an earnest-looking student was having the same problem, trying to convince a elderly worker, with a monthly wage of probably 140 roubles ($180 at the official rate) that he, at 25 and on a meagre grant, could run a car, which here would cost $7,000.

Another frequent question all the guides agreed they had to face uncomfortably often was why the American press wanted Nixon out of the presidency.

From the media coverage given to the Watergate affair last year, the guides said they had found Russians believing to a man that he had done little wrong and was manoeuvred into disgrace by a reactionary press hostile to his detente policies.

At one stand, on the last day the show was open in Moscow, one set of questions ran roughly: "Why do you have unemployment, are there any illiterate people in your country and tell us what happens when demonstrators are taken in by the police?"

The interest in the exhibition, the most comprehensive so far in a series of exchanges going back to the early 1960s, is massive—despite its being all but ignored by the government-controlled media here.

The guides said Soviet officials employed as crowd controllers would sometimes take off their red armbands and listen in on questions being asked—and visitors showing too much interest—were sometimes taken aside for a talk as they left.

"You could tell that many of the visitors were holding back the risky questions they'd really like to have asked," Miss Buck said.

Tigua Indians Vote to Buy New York City Back for $24

EL PASO, Tex. (AP) — Smoke signals on the horizon here spell good news for financially strapped New York.

The message says the Tigua Indians will pay $24 and some beads for Manhattan, after which residents should get off the island and take the buildings with them.

A spokesman for the Indians said the tribal council voted and decided they'd buy New York for the same price the Mohicans got for it.

"They figure if New York is in such financial straits people up there would be happy to sell out and leave."

BC Won't Ship Killer Whale Because of Ecological Reasons

NIAGARA FALLS, Ont. (CP) — An official of Marineland and Game Farm said Wednesday the female killer whale in captivity at Pedder Bay, B.C., has not arrived and he has no idea when it will.

Transport minister Bob Strachan said Tuesday he would not allow British Columbia ferries to ship the whale from Vancouver Island to the mainland because he believes the shipment "is wrong in principle." The 15-foot whale has been kept captive since Aug. 16 at Pedder Bay, about 20 miles west of Victoria.

"As everyone knows, whales are an endangered species and I do not want our B.C. ferries to be a party to this scheme," he said.

B.C. ferries was asked Tuesday to arrange priority boarding for a truck carrying the whale but Mr. Strachan gave instructions the truck was not to be boarded.

Fewer Secondary School Students Study French Outside of Quebec

OTTAWA (CP) — The number of elementary students studying French as a second language outside Quebec has increased in the past five years but the number of secondary students studying French has dropped.

Statistics Canada reports that a total of 1.46 million elementary and secondary students studied French in the nine English provinces in the 1974-75 school year.

Wet Welcome at Loyalist

Last week saw the annual orientation day which welcomed about 200 new daytime students to Loyalist College. They participated in various events including an obstacle course in the woods behind the college. The final obstacle was a water pit over which the students had to cross on a rope, designed as an impossible task to give the newcomers a wet initiation, as illustrated by this girl taking her splash. Hospital to Study Red Cross Costs

The Canadian Red Cross Society has been instructed to present an "itemized" bill for its homemaker service before Belleville General Hospital will consider an increase in funding.

Red Cross, Hastings County and hospital officials met in Belleville Wednesday to discuss the homemaker program and the claim that Red Cross is having to pick up annual deficits which totalled $30,000 for last year alone.

Hospital assistant executive director Ray Krock said Wednesday, Red Cross has been asked to provide the hospital with "an itemized break down of costs."

This document will be gone over "thoroughly" by hospital administration, he said.

Ontario Commissioner for Red Cross Barry Brooks said Tuesday his organization receives $24 for each homemaker case while it costs Red Cross $28. The imbalance resulted in last year's deficit, he said.

Ontario Red Cross Commissioner Barry Brooks, Tuesday, said the $28 is a composite of wages, travel costs and administration costs attached to the homemaker program.

Commenting on the figures provided by Mr. Brooks, Mr. Krock said, "it has been the (hospital) board's attitude to consider submissions — and after thorough review and the board is satisfied — increases have been accepted."

Under identical conditions, the board of governors one year ago increased the rate from $18 to $24.

Mr. Krock said Wednesday's meeting was brief and just a "preliminary discussion with no conclusions drawn."

He said a date was not mentioned when the Red Cross should have a report available to the hospital but expects a written submission for rate review within the next month.

Hay One of Five Canadians To Study Chinese Harbors

By COLIN BRUCE
Staff Reporter

Stephens-Adamson vice-president John Hay has been selected by the federal government as one of five businessmen to represent Canada on a trade mission to the Peoples Republic of China Oct. 2.

Mr. Hay, vice-president of contracts at the Belleville plant, said today the mission is mainly concerned with harbor technology and equipment.

He said the mission is not aimed as a commercial venture for any of the five businessmen drawn from across Canada. "We're participating in an information exchange," said Mr. Hay.

It is expected a Chinese delegation will come to Canada following the Oct. 2 visit.

The tour, developed by the Canadian government, will focus on the major Chinese ports. "Once we have finished our tour, members of the Canadian delegation will give papers on their observations and recommendations," said Mr. Hay.

Mr. Hay will report specifically on the loading and unloading of bulk materials. Other members of the mission will concentrate on port planning and container handling.

The mission will be led by D. J. Janigan of the federal government, the general director, office of export programs and services.

The delegation is expected to leave China Oct. 22, according to a government communique.

"It is not intended as a commercial venture but as an opportunity to show Chinese industrialists what Canadian industry can provide," said Mr. Hay.

The mission into China marks the first of its kind for the local firm. "It is a very exciting venture," said Mr. Hay. "It is a high compliment that a Belleville firm has been chosen to represent Canadian industry."

Stephens-Adamson is a division of Allis-Chalmers Canada Ltd.

Youth Robbed

A 19-year-old Belleville youth was robbed at knifepoint early today by two identified males near Belleville Collegiate Institute.

City Police Chief Douglas Crosbie said today Rick Carr of 284 William St. was walking across the BCI grounds from Church to John Streets at about 12.25 a.m. when the two men approached him and asked to borrow money.

Chief Crosbie said when Carr assumed they were joking, one man pulled out a pocketknife and robbed him of $22 in cash and some change plus a silver pen flashlight.

HUDAC Official Stresses Benefits Of a Home Warranty Program

A warranty program of some sort is an absolute necessity for Canadian house builders, said Bill McCance, representing the Housing and Urban Development Association of Canada (HUDAC).

Mr. McCance made the comment Wednesday during a speech to the Quinte Home Builders Association — a HUDAC afifiliated member.

"While the federal government has had no success in providing a national warranty program, I feel the provincial organizations should set up some warranty program of their own," he said.

Local home builders have been aware for some time that a provincial warranty is necessary and as a first step prepared a warranty for all local members. The Quinte group will hold a special executive meeting within the next two weeks to poll the opinions of local builders before attending an Oct. 2 meeting in Toronto where the warranty question will be put to a vote.

Mr. McCance, HUDAC director of research, spent the majority of his address pointing to the needs of research in the building industry.

He said HUDAC is continually finding new ways of doing the same job more effectively and economically through its research programs.

Mr. McCance urged local builders to forward particular problems to HUDAC offices where staff will work on a solution.

He pointed specifically to the work HUDAC has done in foundation and basement research. "We have found three methods which will help the builder provide the most satisfactory basement . . . and battle the problem of leaks."

Commenting on HUDAC in general, Mr. McCance said the association does not have the reputation of being a lobby group that reacts to legislation but rather is taken into the government's confidence for "assistance and advice" before legislation is passed.

9-year-old Killed

An inquest will be conducted into the death of a nine-year-old Thurlow Township girl who was hit by a truck Wednesday ½ mile east of Highway 37 in the township's third concession about five miles north of Belleville.

Ontario Provincial Police at Belleville said today Marian Annette Equire had disembarked from a school bus, went to the family mailbox and while crossing the road, was struck by a truck driven by Ronald Gilfillen of RR 6, Belleville.

Belleville Coroner Dr. John Stock said today an inquest will be held but no date has been set. He said an autopsy was performed early today.

Constable Mike Publow is investigating the 4:05 p.m. accident. The girl was pronounced dead on arrival at Belleville General Hospital.

Public Input Sought Into Waterway Plans

Belleville Chamber of Commerce may submit a brief Oct. 9 at Four Seasons Hotel here to the Canadian Ontario Rideau Trent System (CORTS) at a one-day meeting.

Board of directors were asked to submit a brief Wednesday by Freeman Burrows, a member of the advisory committee considering development of the river-canal system.

Mr. Freeman said the purpose of public meetings, like the one to be held in Belleville, is to generate ideas from the public and interested groups.

He said the committee hopes the Belleville chamber, the yacht club and power squadron will submit written briefs at the public meeting.

"When a suggestion comes from the CORTS commmittee it goes right to the minister concerned," said Mr. Freeman.

The ten-member committee is made up of federal and provincial representatives.

"We're interested in anything that would improve the corridor."

Quinte Gets CNIB Rep To Help Area Blind

Louise McGilly has a busy year planned. She's going to visit approximately 200 blind people in the Belleville area.

As the first full-time Canadian National Institute for the Blind (CNIB) representative for Hastings and Prince Edward counties she said it will take that long to get to know the people.

"It will mean much better service," said Mrs. McGilly who will be setting up an office in her home at RR 1 Foxboro.

"The Belleville area is deserving of more concentrated service," said district representative Ernie Philpott.

Blind persons in the Belleville district, said Mr. Philpott, will no longer have to go through the Kingston district office for help.

Mrs. McGilly moved to Foxboro last year. She is a rehabilitation teaching specialist and worked in the CNIB divisional office in Toronto for seven years.

"She is well qualified to work with young people such as teenagers who have many emotional problems," said Mr. Philpott.

Mrs. McGilly said she became interested in helping the blind because she had a blind aunt: "There's such a fantastic need."

"Where I lack confidence now is with sighted people."

With sighted people, Mrs. McGilly everything is superficial whereas blind persons are "going far further to get a picture".

"They can give our society so much but we don't seem to realize it."

Aiding the Blind

Louise McGilly is Hastings and Prince Edward County's first full-time CNIB representative. Mrs. McGilly, of Foxboro, will have an office in her home and will be busy for the next year getting to know the approximately 200 blind persons in the area.

Stephens - Adamson Gets $5.8 Million Job

Belleville's Stephens-Adamson company has been awarded a $5.8 million contract for the design and manufacture of an iron ore pellet reclaimer and stacker for a Quebec business consortium.

Principals in the consortium are Sidbec-Dosco Ltd. and Quebec Cartier Mining Ltd. The equipment will be located at Port Cartier, 500 miles north east of Montreal.

The local firm was the only Canadian company to enter international bidding on the contract. Negotiations are continuing for the Belleville plant to secure installation and conveyor systems contracts, said John Hay, Stephens-Adamson vice-president of contracts.

Mr. Hay said the agreement marks one of the largest, single contacts secured by Stephens-Adamson.

Delivery of the system must begin by August of 1976, he said.

All design and contract management work will be handled in Belleville.

Once iron ore is mined, it is pelletized for handling. The equipment now under design will stock-pile the pellets and reclaim pellets from stockpiles to dock-side ship loading systems.

Alarm Box

Belleville firefighters responded to the following calls for assistance during a 24-hour period which ended at 8 a.m. today.

Wednesday, Sept. 17, 1 p.m. — oil spill cleanup in front of 237 Coleman St.

Wednesday, Sept. 17, 9:39 p.m. — standby while overheated oil burner cooled at 3-162 James St.

Wednesday, Sept. 17, 11:23 p.m. — smoke ejection after oil burner and pipes overheated at 191 Station St., minimal damage.

Kit-Wise

Glanmore House curator Marten Lewis bends over museum prepared kits containing kitchen, farm, carpentry and lighting artifacts and explains their use to Hastings-Prince Edward Counties Separate School Board superintendant Delbert O'Sullivan Wednesday. The separate and public school boards will use the kits in history classrooms this year.

Museum Prepares Kits For Use in Classrooms

Glenmore House curator Marten Lewis Wednesday turned over four kits containing primarily pioneer kitchen, carpentry and farming implements for use in Hastings and Prince Edward County classrooms.

The kits, researched and assembled by a student working under a $6,500 Student Community Services grant, are geared to use in local history courses.

Mrs. Lewis said Wednesday about 50 items from the museum's collection have been included in the kits. Part of the city-owned 300-piece lighting fixture collection has been included in one of the four kits.

All artifacts are duplicates of items the museum now owns.

He said it was the first time the museum has prepared educational kits for schools, and is in line with a policy of bringing the museum to the people.

Hastings County Board of Education history co-ordinator Lloyd Jones said Wednesday there is no limitation to their use.

Local history students in Grades 5 and 9 as well as Grade 13 home economics students will use the kits, all packed in suitcases.

Having the "raw stuff" of history before them, students will be given the opportunity for greater insight into the life led by pioneers, Mr. Jones said.

"It does something more to bring a little reality into history."

From an artifact — a broadaxe in the farming implements kits — students will be able to see "the application of simple principles in all areas and the effect of the environment on their lives."

The Hasting County board is already using various kits in its history programs, but none now, said Mr. Jones, contains artifacts. Schools now work with an "Indian file" and "Ten Years in a Box" — a kit containing a multi-media depiction of life in the 1930s.

Garbage: Collection Confuse Many

Habit dies hard — even when it comes to getting rid of garbage.

A scattering of Bellevillians were caught with their garbage bags in the right place at the wrong times this week.

The reason: The city's new garbage collection schedule, which became operative Monday.

The change was first announced Sept. 8 by Mayor Ben Corke at the regular session of city council. Since then it has been advertised by both the city and its garbage contractor — Quinte Sanitation Services.

But the publicity went unnoticed by some householders. They continued to leave garbage outside their homes on the days designated for years.

When it was still there next day they were puzzled. Some started making inquiries. At city hall "quite a few" were reported to have phoned asking when their garbage would be collected.

The new schedule has reduced the number of collections from five and one-half days to four.

The city has been divided into two areas for pickup.

They are: Tuesday and Fridays — East Belleville, south of the Canadian National line. Mondays and Thursday — West Belleville and Hillcrest.

One reason for the change was difficulty in getting personnel who would work Saturdays, says John Graham, president of Quinte Sanitation, whose company also holds disposal contracts in Trenton and Sidney Township.

The reduction in days devoted to Belleville pickups also was made possible by the addition of new equipment to the company's fleet.

Three new trucks now in operation can pack up to 14 tons of garbage each — compared to six or eight tons for older vehicles, says Mr. Graham who has been city garbage contractor for 11 years.

The extra capacity means less return trips to and from the Aiken's Sideroad land disposal site near Bayside. It also helps reduce the number of work hours for personnel.

"What it means is we're covering an area faster, doing more houses an hour," he says.

That's a Lot of Garbage

Garbage is dumped at Bayside landfill site by one of three new trucks now being used in Belleville pickups. The big vehicles — with capacity of 14 tons nearly doubling older trucks in service — have made it possible to reduce number of collections. Some Bellevillians however, have yet to become accustomed to change in pickup dates.

BOB GIBSON

Gibson Retires

ST. LOUIS (AP) — Bob Gibson of St. Louis Cardinals announced his retirement from baseball Wednesday night.

The 39-year-old Gibson, who has 251 career triumphs, was to retire when the season ended but now says he will retire at the end of the Cardinals' current home stand tonight, when they play Montreal Expos.

In his final National League season, the right-hander has a 3-10 record and 5.03 earned run average. Before this season, he had a 248-164 lifetime record and established a 2.85 lifetime ERA while pitching for St. Louis since 1959. He has struck out more than 3,000 batters and posted five 20-game-winning seasons for the Cardinals.

Gibson pitched a no-hitter August 14, 1971 and established several World Series records during his career. In 1968, he led the National League with an earned-run average of 1.12—the lowest in the history of baseball.

Red Hot Pirates Won't Quit

Phillies Looking for Miracle

By THE ASSOCIATED PRESS

It was a concession of sorts from Danny Ozark.

"It would take a miracle now," said the manager of baseball's Philadelphia Phillies.

He was talking about the pennant race in the National League East—or rather, the lack of one.

Pittsburgh Pirates all but sewed up that division title Thursday night with a 9-1 victory over the Phillies behind the hot hitting of Rennie Stennett.

"We've got to win 11, and they've got to lose seven just for us to get a tie," said Ozark, dropped seven games behind the East leaders.

"They've got a hot hand going. I can see us winning 11, but them losing seven . . . well, I don't know."

The Pirates reduced their "magic" number to five for clinching the division title. Any combination of Pirate victories or Philadelphia defeats adding up to five will bring the eastern championship to Pittsburgh.

"We came into Philadelphia and did what we had to do," said Stennett, who broke a modern major league record with his hitting exploits.

Stennett collected three hits to give him 10 for two games, breaking the old record of nine held by many. The second baseman had seven hits in Tuesday's 22-0 rout of Chicago Cubs.

In Wednesday's other National League games, the Cubs defeated New York Mets 5-2, Montreal Expos turned back St. Louis Cardinals 6-3, Cincinnati Reds routed Houston Astros 10-1, Los Angeles Dodgers beat San Diego Padres 7-1 and San Francisco Giants downed Atlanta Braves 4-1.

In breaking the record for most hits in two consecutive games, Stennett beat out infield singles his first two times up and singled to right for his 10th hit in the seventh.

The modern record of nine hits in two consecutive games was held by a number of players, the last being Don Baylor of Baltimore Orioles in the 1973 American League season. The last National Leaguer to do it was Stan Musial of St. Louis Cardinals in 1948.

The Pirates ripped Philadelphia starter Tom Underwood, 14-12, for four runs on five singles in the third inning to take a 4-1 lead. It was more than enough for Bruce Kison, 11-11.

Ray Burris stopped New York on six hits and Don Kessinger contributed three singles and three runs batted in as Chicago beat the Mets.

Joe Morgan drove in three runs and Fred Norman extended his mastery at Riverfront Stadium as Cincinnati tied a National League record for home victories by beating Houston.

The win was Cincinnati's 61st at home against 17 defeats, tying San Francisco's 1962 record. Norman improved his impressive career record at Riverfront to 24-6.

Ron Cey drove in four runs and Andy Messersmith posted his 18th victory with relief help from Charlie Hough in Los Angeles' victory over San Diego.

Von Joshua's bases-loaded triple broke an eighth-inning tie and gave San Francisco its victory over Atlanta.

Now, Baltimore Enemy Is Time

By THE ASSOCIATED PRESS

Time, the newest member of the Boston Red Sox lineup, keeps moving up in the batting order.

It turned a 1-1 split in the important Boston-Baltimore series into the Red Sox' gain and the Orioles' loss. And it seems now to have overtaken the Red Sox as the Orioles' real opponent.

"We sent them out of here the way they came in but now they have less time to try to make up," said Boston manager Darrell Johnson after the Orioles beat the Red Sox 5-2 in the regular season finale between the two American League East contenders.

Baltimore's victory pulled the Orioles to within 4½ games of the Red Sox, the same position they were in before they landed in Boston. The Red Sox have 10 games left, the Orioles 11.

Boston's "magic" number remained at seven. Any combination of Boston victories and Baltimore losses totaling seven will give the Red Sox the division title.

"It's gonna be hard," said Baltimore's Mike Torrez, who gained his 19th victory with eight-inning relief help. "We know we have to win every game."

In Wednesday's other American League games, New York Yankees edged Milwaukee

Baltimore manager Earl Weaver has topped the American League East in five of the last six years.

"They still have to win seven of 10 as things now stand," Weaver said. "If they do that, there isn't a darn thing we can do.

"However, if they play .500 ball in their last 10 games, then we have a good chance of going to the playoffs."

The Royals lost to the Twins on Dave Goltz' seven-hitter and are eight games behind Oakland in the West with 11 games left.

Wilbur Wood slowed Oakland's drive towards another divisional title. Wood, who gave up three hits, including Claudell Washington's ninth-inning single, gave way to reliever Dave Hamilton.

Sal Bando then walked and was erased in a double play before Gene Tenace hit his 27th homer of the year for the final margin.

The A's magic number for winning their fifth successive West title remained at five.

The Yankees scored four runs for Sparky Lyle in the 11th, two on Thurman Munson's single, and the reliever hung on to win despite three Brewer runs in the home half of the inning.

Detroit righthander Joe Coleman scattered seven hits to record his first shutout of the Brewers 6-5 in 11 innings. Minnesota Twins nipped Kansas City Royals 2-1, Chicago White Sox trimmed Oakland A's 3-2, California Angels downed Texas Rangers 3-2, and Detroit Tigers blanked Cleveland Indians 4-0.

Golden Hazy Winner

DETROIT (AP) — The yacht Golden Dazy came from behind on the last leg of a race on Lake St Clair to nip the Canadian challenger Marauder by 16 seconds and win the Canada's Cup racing series 4-2 Wednesday

The victory enabled Detroit's Bayview Yacht Club to retain the cup which had been contested in a series of five races against the challenger from the Royal Canadian Yacht Club of Toronto

Golden Dazy won three earlier races over the 19-mile Lake St Clair course, while Marauder's two points came in a victory in a 150-mile duel on Lake Huron

GARY CARTER

Rookie Wrecks Cards

ST. LOUIS (AP)—If Montreal Expos' Gary Carter fails to earn rookie honors in baseball's National League, he won't miss by much.

And St. Louis Cardinals, victims again of Carter's bat, are prepared to vote for him following their 6-3 loss Wednesday night.

"Gary's not only a fine ball player, he's a fine young man," commented Expos manager Gene Mauch.

"I'd say he and (Larry) Parrish will get about equal consideration," added Mauch in assessing the importance of Carter, who drove in four runs against the Cardinals.

Carter, who began the season with a three-run homer at St. Louis' expense, rallied Montreal from a 2-0 deficit Wednesday.

Parrish, the club's third baseman, rattled a double off Lynn McGlothen, 15-12, before Carter's 16th home run produced a 2-2 tie.

An inning later, after two singles and two walks snapped the deadlock, McGlothen was driven from the mound by a Carter single that scored two runs and broke open the game.

"I enjoy playing here, I don't know why," said Carter, who increased his RBI production for the year to 63.

"It just seems like the lighting is good. This is where I started my major league career, and it was another thrill tonight."

Carter's bat, which inflicted its damage in the first three innings, formed all the support needed by another Expos rookie, left-hander Dan Warthen, 8-6.

Ray Jauch Speechless After Rout in Ottawa

OTTAWA (CP) — "I have nothing to say," growled Edmonton coach Ray Jauch Wednesday night after watching Ottawa Rough Riders pull off a surprise 38-25 Canadian Football League victory over his Eskimos

But a reporter who caught the unhappy coach at half time when, the Riders sported a 34-9 edge, was told by Jauch "It's a real nightmare"

In the Ottawa dressing room coach George Brancato was saying "It's the greatest team effort I've ever seen, especially in the first half"

Despite the loss, Edmonton remained in first place in the Western Conference, two points up on Saskatchewan Roughriders Ottawa pulled into a first-place tie with Montreal Alouettes in the Eastern Conference

Although they carried a 25-point edge into the second half, the Riders needed some heroics to maintain their victory margin

One such effort came from punter Dick Adams in the third quarter when the Eskimos closed the gap to 34-17 and had Ottawa hemmed deep in its own end on third down Adams, about to kick, saw open territory on the right side of the field and went 36 yards

"That turned the game around," said Brancato

Asked whether he was thinking fake, Adams said "Are you kidding"

Rhome Nixon, whose job could be at stake if Margene Adkins shows well in a five-day trial, caught a 64-yard pass from Jim Foley for a touchdown and had his best night of the season with a total of seven catches for 144 yards

"Nothing like a bit of competition," grinned Brancato after the game.

Tony Gabriel, who was a doubtful starter for the game because of a leg injury, caught a four-yard pass from quarterback Tom Clements for a touchdown and ended the evening with three catches for 30 yards

Moodie Jackson ran 37 yards on a reverse that caught Eskimo defenders napping for a touchdown and Foley ran two yards for the other Rider touchdown. Gerry Organ converted all four touchdowns and added three field goals and a single.

Quarterback Tom Wilkinson threw a touchdown pass to George McGowan and reliever Bruce Lemmerman threw to Tom Konihowski for another. Roy Bell ran five yards for the third Eskimo touchdown.

Tyrone Walls caught two two-point converts while Dave Cutler added a convert and a single.

The Riders, badly in need of defensive linemen with injuries that kept end Wayne Smith out of the game and have tackle Rudy Sims on the limp, got a happy surprise when tackle Mark Raines was cut by the Alouettes and became available for the Edmonton game.

All of the breaks seemed to go Ottawa's way. They got the game's only two interceptions and forced Edmonton to fumble twice.

And an electrifying 94-yard runback by Al Marcelin set up the first Ottawa score.

Clements, who according to Brancato will become one of the best in the CFL, completed 13 of 20 passes for 125 yards. He was warmly praised by Brancato with his play-calling late in the game that kept the ball in Ottawa possession.

Fullback Art Green was an Ottawa standout with 25 carries for 149 yards.

Edmonton was held to 83 yards rushing, 45 of them by Bell on 10 carries.

The Riders had a total offence of 422 yards to Edmonton's 343. Ottawa passed for 189 yards and added 256 on the ground.

TED GREEN

Green Pots Two For Jets

STOCKHOLM, Sweden (CP) — Winnipeg Jets of the World Hockey Association scored six consecutive goals Wednesday en route to a 6-2 triumph over Sweden's national team.

The Jets fell behind 2-0 in the first period but then scored once in the final minute of the opening period, twice in the second and three times in the final 20 minutes.

Defenceman Ted Green, playing this season without a helmet for the first time since he suffered a head injury five years ago, scored two goals and assisted on another. Bobby Hull with his fourth goal in four games, Norm Beaudin, Perry Miller and Mike Ford scored the other Winnipeg goals.

The win was Winnipeg's second against one loss and one tie in their nine-game exhibition tour of Finland, Sweden and Czechoslovakia. They play in Stockholm again Friday against Sweden's DIF AIK Sodertalia.

Roland Erickson opened the scoring for Sweden before more than 10,000 spectators on a first-period power-play and Matts Ulberg made it 2-0 late in the first period. But Green scored on a Hull rebound with three seconds left in the period to make it 2-1.

Hull tied the score at 2:41 of the second period on a play with Green and Anders Hedberg, and Green then combined with Hull again [illegible] give Winnipeg the lead at 16:44.

Winnipeg contr[illegible] the final 20 minutes, particularly after Beaudin made it 4-2 at 8:33 by outskating two Swedish defencemen to pick up a loose puck and backhand it into the goal. Winnipeg outshot Sweden 32-22.

TOM PULLEN

Rider Castoff In Camp

TORONTO CP) — Toronto Argonauts, with the worst record in the Canadian Football League, are not quite ready to push the panic button but are no longer satisfied to stand pat either.

National Football League cuts are trickling into town for five-day trials with the Argonauts, who share last place in the East with Hamilton Tiger-Cats although, with a 2-7 record, they have lost one game more.

Dickie Morton, a running back released by Pittsburgh Steelers, and Joe Sullivan, an offensive tackle from Buffalo Bills, began trials Tuesday along with Tom Pullen, a Canadian tight end who retired after losing his job with Ottawa Rough Riders to Tony Gabriel.

Pullen is expected to be activated for next Sunday's game here against Calgary Stampeders as a replacement for Peter Muller, out for the season after undergoing knee surgery.

Cornerback John Williams, a former Ticat cut by the Argos two weeks ago, also is on a five-day trial as a possible replacement for L. J. Clayton, who was given a rough time by quarterback Peter Liske in last Saturday's 32-10 loss to British Columbia Lions in Vancouver.

Clayton, who came to camp as a wide receiver, may get a chance at that position as a replacement for Canadian rookie Al Charuk, who got the job when Chuck Herd was injured in the season opener. And Jim Stillwagon, injured in the pre-season, may start at defensive end against the Stampeders.

The appointment of J. I. Albrecht as a recruiting assistant to managing director John Barrow assured that the Argos would begin looking at NFL castoffs.

Before the end of the week the Argos are expected to start looking at Jim Wolf, a defensive end from Pittsburgh, and a quarterback.

But the club has made it clear head coach Russ Jackson has the final say. He said early in the season that he doesn't want to make changes unless convinced they are necessary.

One More Time For Gordie Howe

HOUSTON (AP) — Houston Aeros of the World Hockey Association held a presidential news conference Wednesday to let Gordie Howe announce that he's tossing his hat onto the ice to play another full season.

"Thank you, Mister President" salutations went up all around the league, starting with Ben Hatskin, WHA chairman of the board, who attended the news conference and admitted he helped convince Howe to come out of retirement.

"We felt at our last board meeting that it would be good for the WHA and for this city to have Gordie play a full season and not just one game," Hatskin said, noting the crowd appeal Howe has in WHA cities.

Howe, 47, will be playing his 28th campaign after announcing at the close of last season that he would retire after the Aeros' first game in their new playing arena. When new owners took control of the Aeros, one of their first decisions was to make Howe president.

Howe said he had the backing of his family in reaching his decision.

"Little Murray (Howe's young son) said I was nuts if I didn't play," Howe said. "My daughter said 'I'm against it but you have my permission to play.' My wife told me I'd have to make the decision so why not go ahead and make it."

"A lot of people say why not quit while you're on top. But it's pretty hard to say what is top. To me, being on top is doing what you like and I like what I'm doing. Very few people get that chance."

Howe said he made the decision to play only after hours of thought prior to the news conference. Aeros officials must have had some idea of Howe's intentions, however.

During the news conference, Howe was presented with an Aeros' jersey with the word "President" above his famous No. 9 where the name normally is affixed.

Aeros coach-general manager Bill Dineen may have to put his powers of diplomacy to work this season but he says he's glad Gordie is returning for a selfish reason

"It's the greatest job security a coach could have," Dineen said "The main thing is he wants to play and that overrides everything else

Gough Nicked

TORONTO (CP) — A 90-second penlty assessed against race driver Nigel Gough for a starting infraction has knocked the Newmarket, Ont. driver out of top place in the Formula 100 Bulova championship auto racing series that concludes this weekend at Mosport

An appeal board of the Ontario region of the Canadian Automobile Sport Clubs took the action this week as a result of the infraction in the last series race in August

The penalty seconds dropped Gough to 11th place from third in that race and to second place in the seven-race series with 56 points The new points leader is David White of Brampton, Ont., with 65 points.

Junior Chargers Blank Napanee

Centurions Twist Tigers' Tail

TRENTON — It took a few months but when it came, revenge was sweet for coach Barry Pyear and his Centre Hastings Secondary School Centurions.

Beaten by Trenton High School Tigers in the Bay of Quinte High School final last year, Centurions drew the Tigers as their first opponent in this season's senior schedule.

The teams met here, Wednesday and Centurions, taking full advantage of the Tigers' inability to defend against the pass, took a well-earned 13-0 victory.

In a junior match in Napanee, Centennial Chargers put together a solid defensive stand to blank the home squad 20-0.

Operating in their own end of the field for most of the opening quarter when Tigers repeatedly piled up plays coming through the middle and enjoyed a wide edge in punting, thanks to Dave Lewis, the Madoc squad wasn't long discovering a glaring THS weakness as the game progressed.

In the second quarter, CHSS quarterback Scott Simpson took to the air. And it paid off.

Simpson hit Joe Brooks for a long gainer to set up a single off B. J. Singh's boot into the THS end zone.

And with the minute flag up, it was Simpson to Brooks again, this time for a major score. Trenton defender Lewis appeared to have Brooks covered but ran afoul of the goalpost when he went up to knock the ball down.

It was 7-0 at the half.

Centurions closed out the scoring in the game in the third quarter. This time, a Simpson pass to halfback Randy Trumbull clicked for the major after the ball was tipped by a Tiger defender.

Tigers, betrayed by a leaky pass defence, had trouble generating much steam on the attack. Several times promising drives were stalled by fumbles and pass interceptions. And a blocked punt hurt.

Centurions, with only 24 men available for duty, had come to play. They earned their win with a solid two-way performance.

Terry Thompson was the Chargers' big scorer in their victory galloping around the end and through the middle for a pair of touchdowns and a two-point conversion.

Centennial's other back, John Royer, counted the winners third TD.

Olympics' Record Perfect

Last Ditch Effort By Hellenic Stalled

TRENTON — Dealt a 3-2 loss by Bay of Quinte Soccer Association Quinte Division pennant winner Belleville Olympics, Hellenic saw its hopes of a Bay Division title go down the drain at Centennial Park here, Wednesday.

With a win, Hellenic would have moved into a points tie with Quinte Italo-Canadians atop the Bay Division and taken the title on goal average.

But first place goes to Italo-Canadians with seven wins good for point total of 20. Hellenic posted seven wins while losing five and tying four, finishing with 18 points.

Olympics, while realizing Hellenic had a shot at first place, had other things on their minds. The win gave the John O'neill-coached club a perfect record on the season and set longtime BQSA members attempting to recall if the fect had ever been accomplished prior to this season.

The Belleville team scored 76 goals and allowed only 14 while rolling to its 16 victories.

Wednesday's game was only two minutes old when Kevin Kirby headed in a cross from Bob Watson to put Olympics in front.

Continuing to press, the Belleville side hit the goal post twice but it was Hellenic which produced the second scoring play of the match. Ted Adams fired the equalizer.

Olympics regained the lead late in the first half when Watson set Charlie Nesterovski up and the ball caromed off the goalkeeper and into the net.

O'neill's goal from the penalty spot upped Olympics' lead to 3-1 in the second half. The free shot was awarded after Kirby was brought down by a Hellenic defender, in the penalty area.

Hellenic wasn't finished yet. With time running out and darkness hampering both sides, Bill Lucas connected from a corner kick. But that was it.

Morton Delivers

Sue Morton has to be Belleville Yardmen's good luck charm. After earning wins in the first two games of the Belleville and District Ladies Softball League final, she came to the rubber with her club behind 4-1 Wednesday night. When it was all over Morton had thrown four innings of three-hit ball and her teammates had scored five runs to give her a 6-5 victory.

Shirley Gulliver pitched the first three innings for the Yardmen before Morton came on in relief. Sandra Fleming was the loser. She gave up seven hits including a home run and a two-run single to Sheila Smith.

Madoc had scored four times in the second inning and it appeared they were on their way to their first win in the series. The Yardmen however, added three runs in the fourth to the one they had scored in the first and evened things back up.

The Purinaettes retaliated with a single run in the fifth, but the BYBF squad counted one in the sixth (Smith's homer) and took advantage of a pair of errors in the seventh to score again and win the contest.

Judy Pultz had a triple and Gulliver added a single and a double to the winners' attack. Brenda Haye, Roseanne Chapman and Penny Graham each singled twice for the Purinaettes.

The Yardmen can wrap the series and the league championship up tonight in Madoc. Game time is 8 p.m.

First Real Test

Oshawa Falls To Bobcats 6-4

OSHAWA — The Belleville Bobcats of the Metro Junior B Hockey League, opened their exhibition schedule on a good note here Wednesday, by downing the Oshawa juniors, 6-4.

Both clubs understandably were feeling the effects of the layoff, although the quality of hockey improved greatly as the game progressed. For most of the players on both teams this was the first opportunity they had to play together as a unit.

Belleville also ran into a bit of trouble in the penalty department as they collected a total of 54 minutes, handed out by the referee, Don Davis. Davis called an extremely close game throughout the contest keeping both clubs off balance for the better part of the game. Oshawa received a total of 29 minutes for infractions.

"I was impressed with their (Cats) play tonight, especially since it's the first time a lot of these guys have played in the Junior B league,' said Bobcat coach Meehan Bonnar.

"I was pleased with the performance of Tony Meagher and that whole line of juveniles," added Bonnar.

Meagher centred a line with Bruce Leedham on the left wing and Robb Chase on the other side. The line was able to connect for two of the six goals Belleville scored.

Meagher, the younger brother of former Cat stars Terry and Rick proved to be very adept at taking the faceoff and rarely missed one. Another very bright spot for the Cats was the play of Paul Tilley. Tilley, who played last season with the Peterborough Junior B club, proved to be a very strong skater and could add some very effective forechecking to the Belleville cause this season.

Bonnar agreed. "Tilley is a good aggressive forechecker and will be greatly appreciated by the Belleville fans if he decides to sign."

Both Bonnar and Cats' General Manager Jim (Snipe) Matthews were hopeful that Tilley and his teammate of last season, Pete Dettman, would sign last night.

Tilley saw very little action in the first period as he managed to pick up a total of 14 minutes in penalties all in one shot. The rangy forward was the first Bobcat of the season to be stung by the league's newest rule.

The rule states that any player who receives a 10-minute misconduct penalty will automatically be tagged with a match, two minute minor. The new ruling as was seen in Wednesday's game will cause some confusion for the first little while.

Matthews felt that the Cats could have scored "at least another four or five goals," but missed opportunities by the Belleville squad kept the game within reach of the home team.

"Belleville has a lot of players that can put the puck in the net this season," noted one knowledgeable spectator at the game, Mike Watt. Watt has been forced to miss Cat practices because of an infection in his arm. He should know in a few days if an operation will be necessary.

After a chippy first period of play Belleville held a 3-1 lead on goals by Andy Ricketts, who played his usual consistant game for Belleville, Eric Powell, who also looked extremely sharp and Chase. The lone marksman to beat Belleville goalie Bob Moore in the first period, was Jeff Hoefs.

Moore and Jeff Merrill split the goaltending chores for the evening and each netminder played a strong game, reinforcing earlier statements that the goaltending would be solid this season.

The teams traded goals in the middle frame. Defenceman Rick Langstaff had a productive night for the Cats, as he picked up a goal and an assist for the evening. Hoefs scored his second goal of the evening for the Oshawa team in the second period.

In the final period of play each team scored twice. Belleville received tallies from Leedham and Grant Goegans, who banked a shot off the boards into the empty net. Pat McArthur and Lorne Prentice were the goal scorers for the losers.

Belleville fans will get an opportunity to see the Cats in action Friday night when Whitby Bruins will be in town for a 9 p.m. game at Memorial Arena. Cats will be dressing several more players for this game, including Joey Edwards and three over-age juveniles from Napanee.

Belleville Bobcats' Tony Meagher is escorted by Oshawa defenceman Ralph Murphy in close call on goalie Bill Morrison's doorstep. Bobcats opened series of pre-season games with 6-4 win Wednesday in Oshawa. Whitby Bruins are in Memorial Arena for a 9 p.m. Friday date with the Cats. Sunday, the Belleville entry in the Metro Junior B Hockey League is in Kingston for an exhibition match with the Voyageurs, as coach Meehan Bonnar continues to take a look at his charges under game conditions.

Gilliam Signs Contract

BLOOMINGTON, Minn. (AP) — John Gilliam, the wide receiver who has averaged close to 20 yards a catch through eight National Football League seasons, signed a one year contract Wednesday with Minnesota Vikings. Gilliam played out his option with the Vikings last season and jumped to the World Football League, but the Chicago Winds entry folded and the 30-year-old Gilliam was out of work. The NFL modified its rules Tuesday to permit Gilliam to return to the NFL. Terms of the contract were not disclosed.

26 Teams in 2 Divisions

The Bay of Quinte High School Soccer League swings into action today with a Western Division twin bill scheduled. Albert College is at Prince Edward Collegiate Institute for a senior match while in Belleville, it's junior action with Bayside Secondary School at Centennial Secondary School.

The Eastern Division gets the ball rolling Friday when Nicholson Catholic College is at Quinte Secondary School while Napanee and District Secondary School will be the visitor at Centre Hastings Secondary School.

Single games are called for 3 p.m. kickoffs. Doubleheaders get started at 2.30 p.m.

Interest in soccer at the high school level is growing with 26 teams entered this season.

Making up the 12-team junior grouping are Moira, Napanee, Nicholson, Quinte, Centre Hastings and Belleville Collegiate Institute in the East, and Brighton, Trenton, Bayside, Centennial, Picton and Sir James Whiteny the West entries.

All 12 schools from the junior list are represented in the senior division in which a second team from Moira, and Albert College will also operate.

Last year's junior champions, Quinte, under coach Tony Roerhig will be facing some stiff competition with Nicholson and BCI in the running in the East. The West group will probably produce a wide open race for top honors.

Moira, defending Central Ontario Secondary Schools Association champion, coached by Bill Jacobs, is expected to have a clear run at the senior title in the East with Quinte and Nicholson fighting it out for the other playoff spot.

BCI, Bay of Quinte champion in 1970-72-73, has lost most of its experienced players and is rebuilding this season. But the team is not being counted out of the running.

In the West, Bay of Quinte champion East Northumberland Secondary School (Brighton) should find tough opposition, especially from Trenton and Centennial Secondary School.

TORONTO (CP)—The highlight of Canada's cultural contribution to the United States Bicentennial celebrations in Washington next month will be the Canadian Opera Company's production of a major home-grown opera, Riel.

With words and music by Mavor Moore and Harry Somers, conducted by Victor Feldbrill with the Toronto Symphony Orchestra, and directed by Leon Major of Toronto Arts Productions at the St. Lawrence Centre, Riel proved to be a hit when it was first produced for the Canadian Centennial in 1967. It was so successful it was repeated the following year.

Riel, adapted from John Coulter's rhetoric play, Louis Riel, tells the story of the leader of the Red River Rebellion, his trial for treason, and his hanging in 1885, Bernard Turgeon sings the role of the Metis leader in English and French.

Riel opens Sept. 27 in the Toronto fall season of the Canadian Opera Company and goes to Ottawa for one performance before its gala in Washington Oct. 23-an event which president Ford and Prime Minister Trudeau are expected to attend.

LOS ANGELES (AP) — The Broadway producing team of Cy Feuer and Ernest Martin have been named managing directors of the Los Angeles and San Francisco Civic Light Opera, one of the most successful theatrical operations in the United States.

Feuer and Martin, who produced Where's Charlie, Guys and Dolls, Can-Can and How to Succeed in Business Without Really Trying, will take over from Edwin Lester, who founded the Civic Light Opera in 1938. Lester started by presenting four operettas for a week apiece; now there are four or five large-scale musicals playing half a year in Los Angeles and San Francisco.

Feuer and Martin, who also produced the Oscar-winning film of Cabaret, will move their operations from New York to Los Angeles.

LOS ANGELES (AP) — Producers Ike Jones and Sidney Beckerman have announced they have acquired film rights to the story of Joan Little, recently acquitted of murder charges in the death of a North Carolina jailer.

The producers, who recently filmed River Niger with Cicley Tyson said they expect Miss Tyson to portray Joan Little.

LOS ANGELES (AP) — Having broken all box-office records in the United States, Jaws is now ready to attack Europe.

The shark terror film will be shown at the festival in San Sebastian, Spain, on Sept. 22, prior to its European release.

LOS ANGELES (AP) — NBC will signal the 25th year of Bob Hope on television with a two-hour show Oct. 24 featuring highlights from the comedian's specials.

Hope made his debut as a TV star on Easter Sunday 1950.

The two-hour special will be a reprise of Hope turns with Bing Crosby, Maurice Chevalier, Lucille Ball, Jimmy Durante, Barbra Streisand, Jack Benny and other stars.

PARIS (AFP) — The first Paris international film festival will be held from Nov. 17 to 24. A hundred French and foreign movies, half of them never shown to the public before, are to be screened in Chaillot Palace and a dozen Paris cinemas.

The festival will be open to the general public, rather than restricted to film critics, actors, distributors and producers.

The Paris event "will be neither a competition nor just one more festival, but a display of current cinema creation", one of the organizers commented.

Festival Manager Pierre Henri Deleau said the Paris showings, planned for each fall, will not compete with the Cannes film festival in Southern France, but complement it by screening films produced "too late or too early for Cannes".

TORONTO (CP) — In his 20th year as a television news and public affairs broadcaster, Michael Maclear thinks it now is becoming increasingly important to present public affairs in a challenging and audience-building way.

"Above all," he said in a recent interview, "what I'm trying to do is to get to the popular appeal of public affairs.

"Audiences are becoming increasingly fractured by the choice offered on television through cable transmissions. Public affairs and the country itself would suffer badly if people are not kept interested in public affairs.

"So we have to package public affairs programs attractievly, without compromising on the content."

These were his thoughts at the start of a new season of television documentaries, titled simply Maclear, on the CTV Television Network.

The first of the new season's programs will appear on most CTV stations Thursday, Sept. 25. It will be, as most Maclear programs are, provocative. The subject is sex education and the sexual IQ of the country.

Maclear, who won the 1974 award of the Association of Canadian Television and Radio Artists (ACTRA) for best news broadcaster, explores the incidence of crime related to sex, and the apparent failure of sex education to head off sex crime catastrophes.

Friday, Sept. 19

ARIES (March 21-April 19) An annoying situation is developing. It will cause you to smolder inwardly. Keep it cool. You can't do anything about it for a few days.

TAURUS (April 20-May 20) You tend to be most liberal with your purse among friends today. The big spender role will net you neither respect nor dividends.

GEMINI (May 21-June 20) It's far better to complete one project before you move on to another today. Skipping around will make it tough for you and accomplish very little.

CANCER (June 21-July 22) Not everyone will dance to your tune today. Trying to force your views on others will only increase their resistance.

(LEO (July 23-Aug. 22) You could turn people off today by insisting upon that extra nickel or dime that really won't mean much. Give alittle,gainalot. much. Give a little, gain a lot.

VIRGO (Aug. 23-Sept. 22) Steer clear of aggressive, dominating associates today. They'll try your patients to the point where you'll lash out at them—and later be sorry.

LIBRA (Sept. 23-Oct. 23) Anyone who tries to alter your routine will be in for tough sledding today. You'll not take kindly to change or criticism.

SCORPIO (Oct. 24-Nov. 22) Don't try to mastermind social activities. People are engaged in lighter diversions to have fun. You are just a bit too much the organizer today.

SAGITTARIUS (Nov. 23-Dec. 21) Keep an open mind. Yield a bit to a family member on how to handle a ticklish situation. His ideas have merit, too.

CAPRICORN (Dec. 22-Jan. 19) Your inherent tenacity is stifled today. You're too easily angered if what you're attempting doesn't succeed on the first try.

AQUARIUS (Jan. 20-Feb. 19) If it's your poker night, keep the stakes at penny ante level. You're likely to stay in the pot with hands you should have thrown away.

PISCES (Feb. 20-March 20) Frustration is the order of the day for you. You'll do well to keep a low profile, take adversity in stride and rev up for tomorrow.

Opening lead — K♣

By Oswald and James Jacoby

"Well," said North, "my overbid paid off."

"Deleted, deleted," said West. "If I had opened a trump it wouldn't have. In addition your partner had to really play the hand well."

South had given the hand a fine play. He took dummy's ace of clubs, led the jack of diamonds and let East hold the trick with the queen.

East shifted to a trump. South won in dummy, ruffed a club, cashed the case of diamonds, ruffed a diamond, ruffed another club and played two more rounds of trumps.

South was down to one trump, one diamond and two spades. The simple play to make the hand would be to lead a spade toward dummy. But after considerable star gazing, South came to the conclusion that West held the last club and East the last diamond. In that case it didn't matter who held the ace of spades. South just led his last diamond. East had to win and lead a spade up to dummy's king.

Ask the Jacobys

This question from Vermont: "What is the so-called 'Free double'?"

In rubber bridge when you double an opponent's game bid and he makes the contract you haven't given him his game. He had already bid it. On the other hand, such doubles aren't anything like free. He gets his trick score doubled and gets 50 for his contract. If he redoubles and scores an overtrick your free double will really have been expensive. So don't make them unless you really expect to set the delcarer.

(Do you have a question for the Jacobys? Write "Ask the Jacobys" care of this newspaper. The most interesting questions will be used in this column and writers will receive copies of JACOBY MODERN.)

Port Activity Drops

MONTREAL (CP) — The Port of Montreal has experienced one of the worst summers ever, said Arnold Masters, president of Maritime Employers Association. He said the slump was caused by the economic recession and a loss of confidence in the port among shippers following a strike by longshoremen earlier this year.

Thyroid Medicine Use Is Explained

By G. C. THOSTESON, MD

Dear Dr. Thosteson:: My doctor says I have an extremely underactive thyroid gland and has me on thyroid medication. I also have a friend going to the same doctor and he prescribes the same pills for her, but she has an overactive thyroid.

Can you explain the same medication being used for underactive and overactive thyroid? Also, she had surgery on her thyroid.—Mrs. S. A. D.

I'm glad you mentioned the fact, in passing, that your friend had thyroid surgery. Without that bit of information, I would have been as puzzled as you are.

You're thyroid medication is a supplement to provide the necessary hormones your thyroid is not producing. Without it you would probably be sluggish, tend toward obesity. The thyroid gland governs other glandular activity and generally regulates body metabolism.

In your friend's case, the opposite was true. Her thyroid was overactive. A surgeon removed a part of it, in that way reducing the amount of hormones secreted. After such surgery an underproduction of thyroid hormone can occur. For her, thyroid supplement helps stabilize matters.

Dear Dr. Thosteson: There are some medical doctors who classify vaginitis as a venereal disease. This is a very embarrassing situation because there are many of us women (divorcees, for example) who have no contact with men sexually, yet who have vaginitis.—Mrs. K. P.

There are some forms of vaginitis that are venereal diseases. Gonorrhea is one. There are many others that are not. Vaginitis is defined as any inflammation of the vaginal tract. Vaginitis due to trichomonas is more prevalent in sexually active women.

I know of no doctor who would call every form of vaginitis a ""venereal disease." I certainly wouldn't. By the same logic one could say that because all cats have four legs, any animal that has four legs is a cat.

Dear Dr. Thosteson: A long time ago, I read in your column something regarding craving for ice cubes being related to anemia. I was craving ice cubes and, in fact, did have anemia.

My doctor had not heard of this, and I don't think he believes me. Did I read correctly?—V. B.

You did. The craving for ice or for any unusual items—starch, etc. — is called "pica", and it is often associated with an anemia or a deficiency in the diet. The deficiency is often of a mineral type.

Treatment of the anemia and correction of the faulty dietary practices usually takes care of the problem.

Dear Dr. Thosteson: Can you tell me what effect beer would have on diverticulosis?—R. P.

Liquid is important in diverticulosis. An occasional beer should have no ill effect. However, diverticulosis patients should avoid laxatives when possible. If you are one in whom beer produces flatulence and loose bowel movements, then it should be avoided.

Forgive me if I seem overly suspicious, but I rather suspect that your doctor has ruled out beer for you, and for just such reasons as I mention. So don't take my comments as any free pass to beer drinking.

Bomb Shelters Form Network

PEKING (Reuter) — Under the busy streets of Peking, trucks drive along subterranean highways—part of a vast network of nuclear bomb shelters and tunnels.

For the first time the existence of underground motor roads, long rumored to lie beneath the capital, has been officially confirmed.

The people's anti-air raid commissioner, Kao Shih-fen, said the driveable routes are trunk tunnels into which local systems connect.

Pressing a red button behind the counter of a tailor's shop, Kao slid back an electrically - operated trapdoor leading to his section of Peking's underworld.

The heavy steel-and-concrete hatch, a perfectly camouflaged part of the floor, revealed a well-lit brick staircase leading down to a labyrinth of tunnels, workshops and storerooms.

Keo heads the tunnel sector under one of Peking's main shopping streets, Da Sha Lan. He led the way past thick airtight doors along cool passageways, taller than a man and wide enough to cycle through.

Here and there, small groups of workers dug side tunnels and in one large chamber girls filled baskets with earth under a domed brick roof.

Each of Da Sha Lan's 45 shops had its own hidden entrance to the underground system and in air raid drills 10,000 people had been cleared from the bustling street in five to six minutes, the commissioner said.

Each of the 1,800 shop clerks in the avenue between the ages of 18 and 45 had had militia training. They would shepherd below ground any strangers or foreigners who did not understand what to do when air raid sirens began to wail.

Deeper in the tunnels—10 degrees cooler than temprature overhead—condensation dripped from overhead piping and the hum of electric motors grew louder. Nearby, an electric pump sucked in air from the surface and, the commissioner said, could wash it free of radioactive fallout or chemical contamination.

Sipping green tea in a hall 23 feet below a children's clothes shop, Kao said the main danger to Peking is from "the social imperialists"—the Russians.

Asked if he thought Moscow would use nuclear weapons in a future conflict, he quoted a Chinese proverb:: "When the dog is driven to the end of the alley it jumps over the wall."

In the event of war the tunnels would quickly disperse the population to the suburbs. But militia units would remain underground to combat any subsequent invasion.

The system was for "active defence—to keep people alive so they can fight."

The Peking shelter system, though not complete, was already equipped for long-term survival, the commissioner said.

Apart from generators and air filtration, it boasts self-contained deep wells for water, food stores, communications systems and workshops to manufacture ammunition.

Turner Rejects PC Leadership Rumor

OTTAWA (CP) — While John Turner's former cabinet colleagues attended a "look-ahead" session in Gatineau Park Wednesday, the former finance minister was discounting suggestions he will seek the leadership of the Progressive Conservative party.

And while the 46-year-old former minister was telling reporters "I am still looking" at future jobs, it was learned elsewhere he plans to rejoin his old Montreal law firm. It was also learned that a group of his admirers are planning to vote for a review of the Liberal party leadership at a November convention here, in hopes of planting the seeds for a future draft-Turner movement.

Meanwhile, Mr. Turner who resigned from the cabinet Sept. 10, to return to private life, played down any suggestions he would await a call from the Progressive Conservatives.

"Highly remote," he said. "I don't think the Tory party can get near the unanimity of a draft."

Ne has not considered such a move, he said. Mr. Turner was at the Ottawa airport to talk to Ontario Liberal Leader Robert Nixon.

Sources close to the former minister said that Mr. Turner will almost certainly cast a long shadow over the November policy convention of the Liberal party here. The minister, say the sources, has been swamped with messages urging him to stay involved with the Liberal party.

One of the 2,700 delegates to attend the convention says there already is a move afoot to organize some tangible support for Mr. Turner. Under the party's constitution, a resolution calling for a leadership convention must come before delegates every two years—and the issue is settled by secret ballot.

Traditionally in the Liberal party, all ranks close behind the leader of the day. While there is little chance of passing a motion of non-confidence in Mr. Trudeau, those working on behalf of Mr. Turner say any dissatisfaction expressed in the current leadership will be regarded as a positive reflection on Mr. Turner.

1,300 Attend Diefenbaker Party

OTTAWA (CP) — Well, they threw that big birthday bash for John Diefenbaker Wednesday night, and any 80-year-old who could gleefully endure that heat is obviously a threat for 90.

"Did you ever see the likes?" he kept asking as he inched his way through some 1,300 people who jammed Parliament Hill's West Block. "I've never seen anything like it."

The party, organized by the Canadian Council of Christians and Jews, attracted a host of guests, from Prime Minister Trudeau to a cleaning lady from Parliament Hill.

Mr. Diefenbaker was in his element, looking out over the crowd and proclaiming that "I've never seen so many people gathered in this place before" and warning his opponents that "while there is snow on the roof it doesn't mean the fire has gone out in the furnace."

It must have been close to 35 degrees C. in the room and at least one person collapsed.

A segment of the RCMP band played "Hail to the Chief," Canadian-born Gisele Mackenzie had flown in from Hollywood to sing, announcer Joel Aldred was saying, "Hi, Chief," and hundreds were staring in awe at a four-foot-high birthday cake.

Paul Godfrey, chairman of Metropolitan Toronto, referred to the Prince Albert MP as "one of the true wise men that we have . . . . I consider John Diefenbaker as one of my political heroes."

Chief Justice Bora Laskin of the Supreme Court of Canada referred to him as "an unseen presence in the Court since 1960 on every occasion the Canadian Bill of Rights has been referred to."

"It's impossible to pay adequate tribute," said Commons Speaker James Jerome, who cut short a Russian visit to be there. "And he's just beginning."

Mr. Diefenbaker beamed at that.

Mr. Trudeau said that the respect shown Mr. Diefenbaker's ability, wit and stature is a constant reminder of the qualities politicians can have. And for this, all politicians should be grateful.

A telegram was read from "Prince Philip and I," extending congratulations from the Queen. And Ottawa Mayor Lorry Greenberg complimented the Conservative MP as one of the greatest Canadians in the history of our country."

Scotch Distiller Claims Canada Discriminates

TORONTO (CP) — Colonel H. F. O. (Bill Bewsher, director-general of the Scotch Whisky Association of Edinburgh, said Wednesday that Canadian governments discriminate against scotch.

"Liquor control authorities in certain provinces have imposed higher mark-ups on scotch than domestic whiskies," he said in an interview.

The Liquor Control Board of Ontario mark-up on scotch is 102.5 per cent compared with 82.9 per cent for Canadian whisky resulting in an average of 60 cents a bottle price difference between the two, he said.

Col. Bewsher, of Fife, Scotland, said one of his reasons for visiting Canada is to talk to the provincial and federal governments about the problems facing the scotch whisky industry.

"We're also concerned about Canada's metrication and bilingual labelling laws and what effects they will have on the industry."

Col. Bewsher said that as leader of the Scotch Whisky Association one of his jobs is to inform its 160 member firms of changes in legislation affecting scotch sales throughout the world. Eighty-five per cent of all Scotch produced is exported to more than 180 countries.

Media Portrays Women As Idiotic: Lalonde

OTTAWA (CP) — Women are portrayed by the media "as somewhere between idiotic and infantile," Nealth Minister Marc Lalonde said Wednesday.

Mr. Lalonde, minister responsible for federal programs affecting the status of women, said in a speech to the Canadian Women's Club that "the onus is on the writers and producers of media content to institute a policy of equality.

"Imagine the attractive, brown-haired, blue-eyed and masculine father of two appointed president of a unviersity, or the sprightly and pert grandfather gaining fame for his painting.

"It is incongruous to describe men in these terms—just as it is incongruous to trivialize the accomplishments of women by placing emphasis on their appearance before their accomplishments," he told the luncheon audience.

For children, the media can have just as much impact as real life "and as a father myself, I sometimes wonder whether the media may not have more influence."

Mr. Lalonde said that school guidance counsellors "have trouble combatting the air of unreality that the majority of girls have when they talk about their future—an unreality which is fostered as much by the media portrayals of women as by the educational system.

Tories Win Minority NDP Now Opposition

TORONTO (CP) — Premier William Davis suffered a stinging setback at the hands of the but his Progressive Conservatives clung to power with a minority standing in the legislature.

After losing ground in all parts of the province to the New Democratic and Liberal parties, the premier expressed the hope that he can work effectievly with NDP Leader Stephen Lewis, whose party edged out the Liberals to become the official Opposition.

The standing:

	1975	1971
PC	51	78
NDP	38	19
Lib	36	20
Total	125	117

Eight seats were added to the house by redistribution for the current campaign.

Mr. Davis made no reference to the possibility of co-operation with Liberal Leader Robert Nixon, who had engaged in acriminious exchanges with the premier throughout the campaign after declaring that the integrity of the government was an election issue.

The NDP leader had launched a broad attack on the government on a variety of issues but refused to be drawn into the personal controversy between Mr. Davis and Mr. Nixon, which he dismissed as a "Punch and Judy show."

Mr. Lewis said his party will work constructively in the new legislature in an effort to present itself as a "serious alternative" to the Conservatives in the next election.

Mr. Nixon said a minority government can work in Ontario, but the Liberals will not join with another party to keep such a government alive.

Three cabinet ministers lost their seats as Conservative strength was reduced to its lowest ebb since George Drew captured 38 seats in 1943 to form another minority government. The party has remained in office since.

There were other parallels with the 1943 result.

The Liberal government ousted by Mr. Drew was headed by Harry Nixon, father of the present leader, whose party also fell to third place behind the Co-operative Commonwealth Federation, predecessors of the NDP.

But while Mr. Lewis appeared to have ousted Mr. Nixon as opposition leader, barring any changes resulting from recounts, the 36 Liberal seats were the largest number they have held since they were toppled from power 32 years ago.

And the NDP's 38 give the legislature its largest third-party representation since the United Farmers of Ontario elected 44 members to form the government in 1919.

The two opposition parties chipped away at Conservative strongholds across the province. Attorney-General John Clement was defeated by Liberal Vince Kerrio in Niagara Falls, and another Liberal, Bob McKessock, captured Grey from Eric Winkler, chairman of the management board.

Another prominent victim was Dick Beckett, a minister without portfolio, who lost to New Democrat Mac Makarchuk in Brantford.

All three seats in the former Conservative stronghold of London were captured by Liberals, who extended their penetration of western Ontario by ousting Conservatives in Wentworth North and Halton-Burlington and capturing the new seat of Kitchener-Wilmot.

The NDP replaced the Conservatives as the dominant party in Metropolitan Toronto, ousting three Conservatives and a Liberal and winning three of the four new seats allotted to the area by redistribution.

The New Democrats also made impressive inroads in eastern Ontario, winning Durham East, Durham North, Durham West, Oshawa and Peterborough from the Conservatives and taking Carleton East from a Liberal Paul Taylor who won it in a byelection in November, 1974.

In the north, a traditional NDP power base, the party added to its strength by winning Conservative seats in Algoma, Fort William and Timiskaming.

A Vote for Guess Who?

Premier William Davis and his wife, Kathleen, were hopeful of another term for the Ontario Conservative government as they voted at Brampton school Thursday. Later, the votes showed the premier was returned to office — but at the head of a minority government.

Police Continue Search for Killer

NIAGARA FALLS, Ont. (CP) — Niagara regional police continued to search today for a gunman who killed one person and wounded two others Thursday at the Royal York Hotel in Toronto.

Insp. Jim Moody of regional police said the suspect arrived in Niagara Falls at about 4 p.m. in a Toronto taxi after eluding a room-by-room search of the hotel.

Insp. Moody said the man, believed to be armed with a revolver, did not threaten the taxi driver.

Killed in the shooting was Lyanage P. DeSilva, 22, of Mississauga, Ont., assistant credit manager of the hotel. Police said he was shot through the head.

Roger Saunders of CP Rail police was reported in stable condition in hospital early today, following emergency surgery for a gunshot wound to the abdomen. Constable Gary Silliker, 24, of Metropolitan Toronto police, was also in stable condition with a shoulder wound.

Insp. Moody said police notified border officials Thursday and searched hotels, motels and rooming houses, "anywhere where he might hole up." All patrol cars were alerted.

A police official said three or four Toronto policemen were sent to Niagara Falls late Thursday to assist in the search for the man, described as being about 5-foot-2 and weighing about 130 pounds. He has red hair.

Meanwhile a search continued in Toronto for a 1972 Ford Torino with Kentucky licence plates registered in the name of Roy Allan Embry of Louisville, Ky. Police said they believe the suspect used the vehicle to get away from the hotel.

A police official said the incident occurred shortly after noon when Mr. DeSilva and the two policemen made a routine check on a man who had been registered in the hotel since Sept. 15. The man owed $377.

A hotel employee said Mr. DeSilva had gone to the man's eighth-floor room alone. He was refused entry and returned with the policemen.

Police said they believe Mr. DeSilva was shot in the room, although his body was found in a hall around the corner.

Within 30 minutes, about 200 policemen with tear gas, bullet-proof vests and a tracking dog had sealed off all exits from the 1,600-room hotel, but the suspect had vanished.

Hotel guests—including about 400 people attending an afternoon session of a conference of the Grand Chapter of the Ontario-Order of the Eastern Star—were evacuated. They were allowed to return to their rooms when the search ended, but were warned to lock their doors.

FBI Apprehends Hearst

SAN FRANCISCO (AP) — Fugitive newspaper heiress Patricia Hearst, her long, violent journey into the underground at an end, was reunited today with the parents she had renounced as pigs.

"She was happy. . . . She really wants to come home," said newspaper publisher Randolph Hearst after he and his wife visited their daughter at a county jail in Redwood City where she is being held on several charges, including bank robbery.

"We told her we loved her and (we) hugged her and kissed her," Catherine Hearst told reporters at the jail. "We just said we loved each other."

One of the most celebrated fugitive hunts in United States history came to a swift conclusion Thursday with the capture of Miss Hearst and three fellow radicals. It had been 19 months since she had seen the parents she spurned for their wealth.

Asked if he would put up the money to free his 21-year-old daughter, who is held on more than $1 million bail, Hearst said: "I think so."

Terrence Hallinan, lawyer for Miss Hearst, who was kidnapped by members of the terrorist Symbionese Liberation Army (SLA) on Feb. 4, 1974, said he would seek reduction of the bail at a hearing today.

Meanwhile, an FBI official said the sudden and dramatic capture of the heiress-turned-terrorist came by accident when police went to a San Francisco house seeking someone else. Miss Hearst and her comrades were arrested without resistance, officers said.

City police officer Tim Casey quoted Miss Hearst as saying: "Don't shoot, I'll go with you," when he and another officer entered her hideout in a house in a middle-class residential section of the city.

Casey said that after he placed the girl under arrest, "I asked her if she was glad it was over, and she just didn't say a word."

At the San Mateo County Jail, 35 miles south of here, where Miss Hearst and two of her companions, William and Emily Harris, were taken following arraignment, another prisoner said the newspaper heiress answered a question as to how she was caught by saying: "I wish to hell I knew.

"We were just sitting there and two policemen just came through the door," Evelyn Broussard quoted Miss Hearst as saying. Mrs. Broussard, 23, who was being released on bail on a parole violation charge, said she talked with Miss Hearst while the latter was being booked.

Earlier, Miss Hearst, who faces both state and federal charges, smiled broadly and waved at reporters as she left the San Francisco federal courthouse.

The Harrises were arrested about an hour before Miss Hearst and Berkeley artist Wendy Yoshimura, who was turned over to Alameda County, Calif., authorities to face a charge of possession of explosives.

Transit System Closed Down

MONTREAL (CP) — The city's public transportation system ground to a halt Thursday, the second closure in a month, following a walkout by 2,250 maintenance workers, cashiers and clerical staff.

Transit authorities closed subways at 3 p.m. EDT when the workers began the strike. Buses were withdrawn from service four hours later.

Strike action was taken following the city's failure to meet contract demands of the transit workers.

Lawrence Hanigan, chairman of the Montreal Urban Community Transit Commission (MUCTC), said the decision to curtail bus services came after he received reports of "sabotage and intimidation" by workers.

An MUCTC spokesman said maintenance workers tampered with brakes, slashed tires and broke windows on several buses. However, union spokesmen said they knew nothing of the incidents.

Mr. Hanigan said picket lines at bus depots prevented about two-thirds of the 1,800 buses normally run during rush-hour traffic from completing their routes.

Jacques Beaudoin, president of a common front of three union locals representing the workers, said negotiations with the commission had been a "total failure, all the way down the line."

Mr. Beaudoin said the MUCTC had "not even deigned to make a new salary offer" after Premier Robert Bourassa appointed Roger Pilote as special mediator last Friday in an effort to get the deadlocked contract talks rolling again.

Transit employees gave union leaders a mandate to strike Sept. 9, nine days after the city's public transportation resumed following a 12-day strike by bus drivers and subway operators.

Hugh O'Neil Breaks Conservative Stronghold in Quinte Area

Hugh O'Neil and the Quinte Liberals performed what most thought the impossible in Thursday night's provincial election by stealing an area politically controlled by Tories for the past 38 years.

Liberals polled well in every area of the riding and surprised most observers by taking Belleville by 400 votes over Progressive Conservative candidate and former Belleville mayor Robin Jeffrey.

Mr. O'Neil polled 12,448 votes, defeating Mrs. Jeffrey by an unofficial margin of 710. Carson McLauchlan, New Democratic Party candidate, polled 4,744 votes.

Mrs. Jeffrey conceded the election shortly after 9:30 p.m. Thursday.

Quinte riding returning office staff reported 69 per cent of the riding's 42,000 eligible voters cast ballots.

Quinte Win for Hugh and Donna

Rollins Happy Victor

His political pennant of Tory victory flies over his new constituency of Hastings-Peterborough.

But Clarke Rollins' campaign banner is more frayed from the fight this time than in any election the veteran politician has won.

A determined onslaught by Liberal Dave Hobson breached what's considered a bastion of Conservative loyalty at various points around the sprawling riding.

Even though close to 75 per cent of the constituency's almost 31,000 voters went to the polls they failed to give Mr. Rollins a sweeping majority. He won by 2,015 votes over his Liberal challenger.

The results: Clarke Rollins (PC) 10,679; Dave Hobson (Lib) 8,664; Bob Thompson (NDP) 2,961; Nancy Arnold (Socred) 328.

Precise comparisons with past elections are not psosible, because the new riding saw 10 townships from Peterborough County added to Hastings constituency.

But it was, admitted Mr. Rollins, "the toughest campaign" he has fought — partly because of the size of the constituency — since first sent to the legislature five elections ago in 1959.

James Taylor, Conservative Prince Edward-Lennox incumbent will be back to Queen's park before his seat gets cold despite strong Liberal and NDP gains in the riding.

Mr. Taylor won by a slim margin of only about 800 votes compared with 6,591 votes won gin in 1971 when he was first sent to Queen's Park.

Liberal candidate Keith MacDonald attracted 9,055 votes comvared with 6,591 votes won by 1971 Liberal candidate Barry Young.

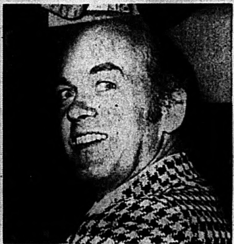
NDP candidate Jan Nicol got 3,250 votes, up from 2,350 for the 1971 candidate.

The popular vote was split about 45, 40 and 15 per cent respectively.

In 1971 Mr. Taylor won by more than 1,000 votes than the Liberal and NDP candidates combined.

Voter turnout was about 75 per cent. Despite constant rain, about 22,000 of an eligible 29,451 voters visited the polls.

High spirits in Mr. MacDonald's committee rooms fell quickly when supporters realized the thin margin by which they lost the race. Although disappointed about Miss Nicol's defeat spirits among NDP party supporters heightened as provincial victories were announced.



Taylor Repeats in 'County'

Winner Rowe, Grandson Travis

COBOURG — A provincial-wide rejection of Premier William Davis' Progressive Conservative government failed to affect the showing of Russell Rowe, Speaker of the House and the incumbent candidate for Northumberland riding Thursday.

Mr. Rowe's victory was impressive, even though his share of the popular vote and his plurality decreased in winning 13 of the 15 towns and townships in his riding, losing only Murray and Hope Townships by a total of only 141 votes.

The riding was restructured for this election with the major change being the addition of Hope and Port Hope constituency.

Liberal candidate Isobel Kirkpatrick, gathered 33 per cent of the vote and was just barely defeated in her home town of Port Hope, with NDP standard-bearer John Taylor receiving almost one third of the votes in the township.

The election results were not a surprise to Mr. Rowe or his staff who said pre-election surveys indicated they would lose some of the plurality and the Liberals would gain ground in the riding.

GET PERMANENT PROTECTION WITH AN ANNUAL CHANGE.

Many people think a modern coolant can stay in the cooling system permanently—or at least two or three years.
It's true that a coolant will give you anti-freeze protection year after year, as long as it isn't diluted, and your cooling system doesn't leak.
But it won't protect against corrosion that long.
Exhaust gases can escape through a leaky cylinder-head gasket into the cooling system. When that happens, the gases turn to acids, which weaken rust inhibitors and hasten corrosion of metal parts.
For this reason, you should never leave your coolant in the cooling system too long—even when it's PRESTONE II.
How often should you change?
Recommendations in car owners' manuals may vary.
We say once a year.
Some of you may think we say that just to sell more coolant. Others may think we're being perfectionists.
But we've been working with coolants and engine cooling systems since 1927. And our experience says that the way to avoid corrosion and the expensive damage it can cause is to invest in two gallons of PRESTONE II every year.

UNION CARBIDE

PIICTON—Progressive Conservative MPP for Prince Edward-Lennox James Taylor defeated Liberal candidate Keith MacDonald by a narrow margin Thursday night after what he described as "the dirtiest campaign" of his political career.

The 47-year-old lawyer who was first elected to Queen's Park in 1971 ~~polled a~~ total of 9995 votes in his riding while Hallowell reeve Keith MacDonald received 9,055 votes.

In 1971, Mr. Taylor was elected with a plurality of 3,404 votes over Liberal candidate Barry Young.

"I never for a moment lost confidence," asserted Mr. Taylor following a tense two hour wait for final results in his committee rooms here.

"I could see the type of campaign in Prince Edward County.

"It was not dealing with issues but playing on emotional appeal to a great extent," he added.

Mr. Taylor stressed that "good government issues" did not surface during the campaign waged by Liberal opponent Keith MacDonald.

After his re-election Thursday night Mr. Taylor discussed the close race with the Liberal candidate and observed it reflects the provincial scene.

He commented that fewer votes here in terms of an over-all majority is in keeping with the provincial picture.

"We couldn't expect as large a majority as in 1971 because of the over-all picture," remarked the winning candidate.

"The type of campaign in Ontario reduced the majority in the Prince Edward-Lennox riding," he said.

Mr. Taylor termed the campaign one of personalities. He observed that he did many door-to-door canvasses in rural areas and in areas of Picton.

"I think the personal approach paid dividends," he said.

In discussion of the close race with Hallowell reeve Keith MacDonald, the Progressive Conservative candidate stated that he had expected a tight race in Prince Edward.

"And it happened," he added.

"I had a very good feeling from Napanee and the surrounding area.

"We won every poll in Napanee this time," said the victorious candidate.

In 1971 the Tories lost one poll in Napanee.

Mr. Taylor said he considered Amherstview as possibly the key to the riding and concentrated his campaign in that area.

The Conservative candidate arrived in his Picton committee rooms soon after the polls closed and, accompanied by his family, remained there until victory was clear.

As soon as results of all polls were in he left for Napanee to visit his committee room there.

Family Plays Key Role in Helping Taylor Retain Prince Edward Riding

PICTON — Unlike the majority of provincial candidates who sign over their energies to the expertise of a campaign manager — Prince Edward-Lennox Tory incumbent James Taylor was master of his own fate in Thursday's provincial election.

Mr. Taylor, first successful in the riding in 1971, suffered substantial losses over his provious outing. He was beaten in Prince Edward County but retained his seat in the legislature through concentrated support in Lennox County.

"He's in high spirits," said Dwight Reynolds, Mr. Taylor's financial agent. "He didn't have a manager but pretty well ran the race himself."

Prior to voting day, the 47-year-old lawyer explained his decision to run his own campaign saying, "It's a family affair. My wife is very involved in my campaign and helps with sorting details."

Following established lines, Mr. Taylor concentrated his efforts on door-to-door campaigns and the personal approach with the voters throughout the campaign trail.

One of the key strengths of Mr. Taylor's self-styled campaign was his "family affair" approach to the Sept. 18 race.

While Mr. Taylor's wife, Mary, handled home phones and relayed messages to Queen's Park, his sons Jim, 16, and Tim, 14, both attending Prince Edward Collegiate and his daughters Cindy and Kim attending Queen's University worked on phones in party committee rooms.

Support Dwindles

James Taylor, Prince Edward-Lennox incumbent kept his seat Thursday by a slim margin over Liberal candidate Keith MacDonald.

Mr. Taylor attracted about 45 per cent of the popular vote with total of 9995.

Although Mr. Taylor kept his seat the totals showed major Conservative losses in the riding.

Mr. Taylor was first elected in 1971 beating Liberal candidate Barry Young by more than 3,404 votes.

The vote difference this year was less than 800.

Rainy Weather Hurt, But Turnout Higher

Despite gloomy skies and continuous rain showers, more voters turned out to cast their ballot than the last provincial election.

The last provincial election showed approximately 68 per cent of the eligible voters exercised their voting rights while 69 per cent braved stormy weather for the 30th provincial election Thursday.

Gerry Joyce, returning officer for Quinte, said the dismal weather kept the vote down.

He said the advanced polls were heavy and this is indicated polls would be busy election day if not for the weather.

The weather bureau, Canadian Forces Base, Trenton reported one third of an inch of rain fell and visibility deteriorated from 1¾ miles to three quarters of a mile by 7 a.m. Thursday morning. Temperatures Thursday ranged from a high 15 to a low 10 degrees C.

MacDonald Credits Youth

Liberals Make Gains, But Not Enough

PICTON — Liberal candidate and reeve of Hallowell Township Keith MacDonald says the Progressive Conservatives in Prince Edward-Lennox riding this year did not find the election a pushover."

The 48-year-old farmer who was narrowly defeated Thursday by James Taylor, Conservative incumbent, emphasized his campaign was highly successful although it did not win him a seat at Queen's Park.

The Liberal candidate polled a total of 9,055 votes in comparison with the 6,591 votes polled by Napanee lawyer Barry Young who was the Liberal standard-bearer in 1971.

Mr. MacDonald said he anticipated a close race and is confident his party has made significant gains in the Prince Edward-Lennox riding.

He emphasized that Liberal youth played a major role in his campaign and refused to attribute Liberal gains here to his candidacy.

Mr. MacDonald, in his nomination speech, stated that he felt the time had come for him to stand up and be counted.

He stressed that Prince Edward - Lennox had long been a Tory riding but added that he was onvinced of a fighting chance to bring an end to the Conservative reign.

"I am still a fond believer that we need a change," he observed Thursday.

The Liberal candidate asserted that a clean campaign had been run and added that he has great respect for James Taylor, the Conservative incumbent.

When asked if he would run for election again the defeated candidate stated it was "not a fair question" and declined comment.

e He emphasized there has been a revival of the Liberal party in the riding this year, largely due to the enthusiasm of young Liberals.

"They are responsible for the results, not me," he stressed.

Mr. MacDonald waited until almost all polls had been heard from before conceding the election to opponent James Taylor.

He said that a recount would be requested only if his workers felt it necessary.

Throughout his campaign Mr. MacDonald emphasized that he was "no fancy speaker." He said that one of his main objectives, if elected, would be to cut through red tape at Queen's Park.

The Liberal standard-bearer arrived at his Picton committee rooms about 1½ hours after the polls had closed and remained until it was clear that the riding once again had been won by the Tories.

He left his committee rooms late in the evening to visit Conservative headquarters and to concede the election but when he arrived James Taylor had left for committee rooms in Napanee.

Mood Changes as Polls Indicate Taylor Victory

PICTON — It was about-face in the Picton committee rooms of Liberal and Conservative candidates in Prince Edward-Lennox riding on Thursday night.

Less than 15 minutes after the polls closed the Liberal headquarters of Keith MacDonald began to fill with key party workers and supporters.

In the Progressive Conservative committee rooms of incumbent James Taylor the pace was slower.

There wasno immediate gathering of suporters, no television and no radio.

By 9 p.m. the Liberal committee rooms offered standing room only and as poll after poll in Prince Edward was captured by candidate Keith MacDonald cheers went up in the hall.

At the Tory headquarters the crowd remained small. James Taylor and his family arrived almost as soon as the polls 'ad closed and began a close watch of results.

There were audible groans and "oh, No's" as a number of polls in Prince Edward were won by Keith MacDonald.

By 9.20 there was a definite change in the atmosphere of both committee rooms.

The Liberals had become quieter until the arrival of Keith MacDonald and his wife Margaret who joined supporters in watching results as they were posted on a giant bulletin board.

At Tory headquarters self-confidence was growing as the scales slowly but surely began to top. The rooms had filled with party supporters.

By 9.25 James Taylor was discussing the clse race he had won against Liberal opponent Keith MacDonald and supporters began to wonder when Mr. MacDonald would arrive to concede the election.

Wight Says MacDonald Key to Liberal Revival

PICTON — Roy Wight, campaign manager for Keith MacDonald, Liberal candidate for Prince Edward-Lennox says the Liberal party owes its gains here to its choice of standard-bearer.

He commented that Mr. MacDonald, a farmer who understands the farmer's problems, campaigned intensively in the rural areas of the riding.

"We campaigned the hardest in the Napanee and Amherstview areas," said Mr. Wight.

Mr Wight noted that in previous provincial election campaigns Amherstview has been largely overlooked.

When asked what might have been done to improve the 1975 campaign Mr. Wight said election day was too "low-key".

Voters needed to be "dug out" more intensely.

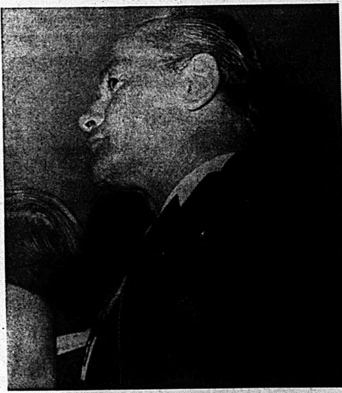
The Liberal party polled a total of 9,055 votes this year in comparison with 6,591 votes in 1971.

Margin Less Than 800 Votes

Although Keith MacDonald, Liberal candidate in Prince Edward-Lennox did not earn himself a seat in Queen's Park vote totals show strong Liberal gains.

Mr. MacDonald was beaten by incumbent James Taylor by less than 800 votes. Mr. MacDonald got about 40 per cent of the popular vote or 9,055 votes. Mr. Taylor got about 45 per cent of the popular vote with 9,810 votes.

Mr. Taylor was first voted into office in 1971 with a 3,404 vote margin over that year's Liberal candidate Barry Young.



Close, But Not Enough

Keith MacDonald, Liberal candidate for Prince Edward-Lennox, looks on as incumbent James Taylor edges ahead to beat him to Queen's Park with a margin of less than 800 votes. The Liberal, who described himself as a "plain-talker" had promised to cut red tape at Queen's Park.

Spirits Higher

Spirits rose in Jan Nicol's party committee rooms as NDP victories across the province were tallied. Miss Nicol took 14.8 per cent of the popular vote in Prince Edward-Lennox. She said she is ready to run again in the next election.

Election 'Nerve-racking'

Foundation Laid for Next Bid Says NDP

By CLIFF KENYON

Not getting 15 per cent of the popular vote in Prince Edward-Lennox is one of the biggest disappointments for NDP candidate Jan Nicol but she says she's prepared to run again.

"To get 4,000 votes would be good," said Miss Nicol about 8.15 p.m. Thursday as results began to be totalled.

By the end of the evening she had attracted 3,250 votes for a popular vote of 14.8 per cent, only .2 per cent short of earning supporters a refund on the candidate's deposit.

"I'v been a strong candidate."

"If there hadn't been a strong Liberal candidate there is no question I would have gotten more votes," said Miss Nicol.

The ani-Davis voters worked against her, she added.

Supporters however said they were pleased with the gain compared with the 1971 vote. In that year candidate Bryan Beazer got about 2,500 votes.

"They were very happy with the vote last time" Miss Nicol said.

The election, said Miss Nicol, was "nerve-racking".

It's the first time she has ventured into politics and the first time she has known all the NDP candidates.

She thought about the election but concentrated on the campaign.

"It's a personal achievement regardless of the vote."

She said she ran the type of campaign she had planned. All polls were visited for the first time by an NDP candidate in the riding.

"The Election Expenses Act helped us a lot,' said Miss Nicol. She expects the riding to have a surplus of $300 to $400.

She said they had the money they needed but would have needed much more to go into radio or television advertising.

During the campaign she said she had many persons tell her that the NDP were splitting the vote and they should join the Liberals: "We're so politically different from the Liberals."

"I've had a lot of Liberals, on basic policies, say they'd rather work for me than MacDonald"

She said early in the evening if the Liberals formed the opposition in a minority government she would expect an election.

An NDP minority government opposition, she said, would learn from the federal example and be sure not to call an election too early.

She said she was pleased to see James Taylor win: "Taylor at least has a set of policies consistent with party philosophy."

"Keith MacDonald doesn't understand party policies."

Miss Nicol, a former writer with Ontario Hydro in Toronto, said she is in Prince Edward County to stay.

"If I go back to Toronto it will only be to earn enough money to run again."

Nicol Wins Five Polls

Although NDP supporters in Prince Edward-Lennox showed great gains with candidate Jan Nicol there were disappointments.

Miss Nicol attracted only 14.8 per cent of the popular, being .2 per cent shy of getting a refund on her candidates deposit.

Supporters were pleased to win at least five polls in the 124 poll riding The 1971 candidate Bryan Beazer did not win any polls.

Voter support also increased. Miss Nicol took 3,250 votes compared with Mr. Beazer's 1971 effort netting him 2,350 votes.

Provincial Gains Brighten Outlook of NDP Workers

PICTON — NDP party supporters here were jubilant Thursday despite the fact their candidate, Ja nNickol, failed to attract 15 per cent of votes in Prince Edward-Lennox.

"Although we're sorry about our loss we're jubilant about what's happened in Ontario," said Janet Lunn.

Miss Nicol received 3,250 of votes, 14.8 per cent of the vote, just .2 per cent shy of the 15 per cent necessary to get a refund on the deposit.

"I.'m quite convinced some of our vote was an anti-Davis vote and people thought the Liberals had the best chance of destroying them," said Harvey Gottfried, president of the local NDP riding association.

"I'm a little disappointed but I think Jan Nicol was the best candidate," said Mr. Gottfried, who ran in the riding as NDP candidate in the last federal election.

"The association will be meeting within two weeks to prepare for the next election, either federal or provincial," said Lynne Gottfried.

She said Miss Nicol had attracted 4.5 per cent more votes than Brian Beazer, NDP candidate in the riding in the previous provincial election. He got 2,350 votes.

"We're going to start going in the next election, especially now there's a minority government," said Mr. Gottfried.

Low spirits among supporters soared as the party was acclaimed official opposition.

No Campaign Manager Hurt, Jan Nicol Admits

Jan Nicol, Prince Edward-Lennox NDP candidate, and her own campaign manager, is ready to run again.

"Once you're bitten you can't get out," said Miss Nicol referring to her introduction to politics.

Next time, she said, she'll have a campaign manager as she said she spent too much time co-ordinating volunteer efforts and not enough time with the voters.

"This campaign I've spent getting my name known. Next time I'll stress policy."

"It's the people that work for you that count."

The riding association, she said, has about 100 members: "I could go out now and set up a riding association of 300 to 400 members."

Political Appointees Are Sidelining Ottawa's Diplomatic Corps Personnel

By JOHN D. HARBRON

We often pride ourselves that our diplomatic service has been free of the American practice of handing out plum ambassadorships, as well as some "not so plum," to politicians, friends of the government, intimates of the serving president.

Well if we have, we shouldn't. The key ambassadorships for expectant senior officials of the department of external affairs are London, Paris, Washington, Tokyo and to a lesser degree places like Bonn, Athens, Madrid, noticeably all in developed countries. But in several instances these men are not getting the key jobs.

At present we are witnessing political appointments in both London and Paris, the gregarious, likable and political pro Paul Martin as high commissioner to Britain, the suspicious and where English-Canadians are concerned, clearly unfriendly Gerard Pelletier as ambassador to France.

Pelletier will succeed an earlier political appointment in Leo Cadieux who got the job as has Pelletier after a term of office in a Liberal cabinet as minister of national defence.

He will be able to liaise with Jean Louis Gagnon, his long-term pal in Quebec journalism and left wing politics, who was a disaster as head of Information Canada and is our ambassador to UNESCO (United Nations Economic and Social Council).

And reported waiting in the wings, while he builds up his own export business, is the efficient and also very likable Jean Luc Pepin who may be the next Canadian ambassador to Japan, a post of [illegible] growing importance to us.

The most important post of all, Canadian ambassador in Washington has been largely free of this kind of on-going patronage, also practised by Conservatives when they are briefly in power.

Indeed Canadian ambassadors in that important city including incumbent Marcel Cadieux, a career diplomat, have been without exception first-rate operators, in part because they were external affairs men with the confidence of the prime minister.

A recent example of diplomat expertise at its best in Washington was Ed Ritchie who retired last year as undersecretary of state for external affairs following a severe illness. The late Lester B. Pearson also held the post, but years ago, long before his political career had begun in the Liberal party.

Mr. Diefenbaker as prime minister played the ambassadorial patronoge game even more widely than Messrs Pearson or Trudeau have done. In fact he approved a host of order-in-council appointments which brought outsiders, some of them mediocre performers as ambassadors, into that high post.

And they served in missions not as spectacular as the key ones listed above, though the late George Drew was Mr. Diefenbaker's choice for high commissioner in London.

Those were in the years when the pro-British Diefenbaker and Drew were trying to restore the vigor of the Canada-British trade and cultural connection.

Another fine appointment from those years was Arthur Irwin, today publisher of the Victoria Daily Times, who held posts in Australia as high commissioner and Brazil and Mexico as our ambassador.

On balance such appointments in the past haven't been bad ones. But they did and still must raise hell with the expectations of our professional diplomatic corps for the ultimate promotion.

Votes Voice Protest At Davis Spending

One of the most difficult political questions to answer following any election is whether the voters cast their ballots in favor of or in opposition to the incumbent government.

Certainly that thought must be foremost in the minds of Quinte Progressive Conservatives today as they ponder the defeat of Robin Jeffrey — a tested municipal politician and a potentially-talented provincial one — by Liberal Hugh O'Neil.

Mrs. Jeffrey's nomination, earned largely on the basis of eight years as a member of Belleville city council — three of them as mayor — appeared to make her a candidate the proverbial head and shoulders above Mr. O'Neil, whose only previous public office before the next sitting of the Ontario legislature has been a term on the Trenton Parks Board.

The upcoming legislative session may be a short one.

It is highly unlikely that a minority Conservative government at Queen's Park will be able to achieve anything facing an opposition the likes of which they have not known for 32 years.

An election within six months is a distinct possibility, one which might not have been so likely had the Liberals or New Democrats been as successful as they had hoped in persuading the people of Ontario that a Davis government was not in the best interests of this province.

Between now and that inevitable next election date, Mr. Davis obviously is going to have to demonstrate to his constituents that his party has not indeed become complacent about governing this province. And he is going [illegible] to do a lot of persuading in a fiscal vein.

For, although the major part of the anti-Tory campaign appeared to stress the mere fact of government longevity, one platform that did seem to appeal to the voters was the Liberal claim that Ontario "just couldn't afford another Davis government".

Whether the provincial deficit is $4 billion or $4 trillion, debt is a fact of life Ontario residents apparently will not abide.

And whether they won by narrow margins — as did Hastings-Peterborough and Prince Edward-Lennox Conservative incumbents — or lost, as did Robin Jeffrey, the Davis team has got the electorate's message: put your financial house in order or we'll put you out of the house.

Crosswalks Are Vital

At long last, city council is going to seriously consider installation of official crosswalks.

Ald. George Zegouras made a motion to that effect at a meeting of council's traffic committee, which agreed the item should be studied for inclusion in the 1976 budget.

It is to be hoped that the city's luck with its existing "voluntary" crosswalks holds up and that no unwitting pedestrian is mowed down until city fathers spring for the necessary $2,000 overhead signs that make the crossings mandatory stops for motorists.

Belleville has been fortunate with the existing crosswalks, located at such busy traffic junctures as Pinnacle and Market, Pinnacle and Campbell, and Front and Campbell Streets.

Fortunate, we say, because nobody has been killed at any of those locations. Anyone trusting that oncoming motorists will stop to let them cross the street is literally taking his life into his hands.

The existing "crosswalks" are no more than so many lines of paint on the street, and it is open to debate whether or not anyone putting their faith in them could not be charged with jay-walking.

Get with it council! If no greater an urban centre than Tweed can afford properly indicated legal crosswalks on its main street, so can Belleville.

Ulster's Future Still Uncertain

Montreal Gazette

Few voters turned out last May Day for what had been called Northern Ireland's last chance for peace in its sectarian war — the election of a constitutional convention. Apathy and a Catholic boycott were blamed for the abstention.

That chance was washed out recently when a meeting of the United Ulster Unionist Coalition voted overwhelmingly against any sharing of administrative power with the province's Catholic minority. The apathy of the many had given scope to the intransigence of the few.

The wrecking crew led by the Rev. Ian Paisley acted just before the convention was to resume deliberations amid reports of successful interparty negotiations during the summer break. The British and the Catholics have insisted on power sharing, but the coalition caucus controls 45 of the convention's 78 seats. By a vote of 37 to one, it moved for the convention's adjournment.

The lone opposing vote, curiously, came from William Craig, a man with a hard-line reputation who now emerges as a moderate with no following. It is a familiar predicament for Ulster politicians.

The last chance, of course, was no such thing. There have been too many of them over the last 300 years. There will be others. The conviction that something done later is better than anything done now is almost as much a part of the Northern Ireland's problem as is religion.

So the British will have to stay on, no matter how much they want to get out. Dublin, on the other hand, has just promised to keep its troops out no matter how much they may someday be wanted in. And the nasty little war, which in its current manifestation has already lasted longer than either the First or Second World Wars goes on, for better or for worse, until death do its participants part. They are married to it, and divorce, so far, has been unthinkable.

This was particularly true at City Hall where during the height of the rainfall the water rose in the basement to a depth of nearly ten inches before employees of the public works department got pumps operating to keep the rise in check.

Money-stock Growth Rate Aligned with Production Is Key to Stabilization

By VINCENT EGAN

Business and Consumer Affairs Analyst

Thomson News Service

Remember, a year or two ago, when our political leaders invariably excused our dismal inflation record by pointing to other countries with even worse records?

That could well become the party line again. A mid-year compilation of inflation trends in 25 industrialized countries shows that money depreciated at a median annual rate of 11.9 per cent in first-half 1975, vs. 11.1 per cent in 1974 and 7.3 per cent in 1973.

The Canadian dollar this year is depreciating a little less than the median—an even 10 per cent on an annual basis, according to First National City Bank of New York which assembled the figures on world purchasing power.

The Citibank approach is not to measure inflation directly, but rather the rate of decline in purchasing power.

Thus, a 15 per cent rise in the consumer price index from 100 to 115 would mean that money had depreciated by a little more than 13 per cent (100 divided by 115).

Its estimates of purchasing power are subject to substantial error, Citibank concedes. Reasons might include incomplete coverage, unduly heavy weight given to certain government-controlled prices, or failure to reflect changes in tastes, quality and consumption patterns.

The bank's definition of "industrialized" is also open to question. The median depreciation of 11.9 per cent would be lower if Yugoslavia (19.9 per cent), Turkey (20.8 per cent) and Iceland (33.6 per cent) were not classified as industrialized countries.

No country managed to escape significant inflation in the first six months of this year.

West Germany's mark depreciated at an annual rate of 5.7 per cent, and Switzerland's franc at 7.5 per cent.

Those were the best anti-inflation records of any industrialized country. (Switzerland managed to achieve a fractional reduction in its consumer price index in July).

That shows that even the strongest economies are vulnerable to the contagion of inflation. In the case of West Germany and Switzerland, domestic inflation is helped along by trade surpluses and rising export prices.

Two other prosperous nations also experienced a sharp depreciation of money—Venezuela (11.1 per cent) and Iran (15.3 per cent).

Both countries belong to the international oil cartel, the Organization of Petroleum Exporting Countries, and their relatively undeveloped economies have been swamped by the inflow of foreign funds to pay for the oil they sell at 100 to 200 times its cost.

Despite the rapid shrinkage in the purchasing power of currencies, however, Citibank sees some signs that the worldwide wave of inflation may have crested.

"In the final analysis, what happens to prices depends on the growth of the money stock—currency in circulation plus checking-account deposits," it says.

"When a central bank slows the rate of the money-stock growth, inflation tends to slow down within one to three years.

"The reason is that rapid monetary growth createes a demand for goods and services that outstrips available supplies."

(Canada's money supply was growing at an annual rate of more than 25 per cent late last year. Its growth has been much less rapid in 1975).

Higher unemployment is one early result of monetary deceleration, Citibank says.

Ultimately, however, the weakening of total demand slows down the rise of prices.

"Prices can be stabilized," It concludes, "if the combined money-stock growth rate is brought into better alignment with the potential for producing real goods and services."

St. Mark's Anniversary

Editor,
The Intelligencer:

Like most other United Church congregations, we at St. Mark's, Cannifton, had special 50th anniversary celebrations on June 8. When we discovered that the St. Mark's report, prepared for the special edition of the 50th anniversary paper had been omitted, we thought you might accommodate us at a later date. We were told it would likely be published within a couple of weeks. To our knowledge, it has not as yet been printed.

Soon afterward on July 5 on the church page of The Intelligencer, there appeared an article entitled "United Church Members Look Back 50 Years."

This concerned the views and reflections of two Edmonton United Church members and even included the picture of one. This made interesting reading but we find it hard to justify the space given to this article at the exclusion of the one we submitted.

Are the anecdotes of two strangers more important to Belleville and district readers than the news of a local congregation whose special celebrations on June 8 we felt warranted at least a little press coverage?

Mining Hazard?

Editor,
The Intelligencer:

During the "Why not Call" program, Clarke Rollins on September 12, a caller asked MPP Clarke Rollins what the present legislation is doing concerning silicosis and associated lung diseases, for the miners in the mining industry.

Mr. Rollins answered with an analogy, of hiring a person to drive a truck and you had no way of knowing whether that person could be involved in an accident even just a few blocks from start. The analogy does not appear to be a valid one. Fatal and crippling diseases pertaining to industry are not now considered to be accidents.

Whelan Would Like to See Plumptre Go — but Will She?

By RICHARD JACKSON

Ottawa — Let it be clearly stated—within her terms of reference, Beryl Plumptre has done her job well. We can go one step farther—even when she has stepped beyond her terms of reference (except perhaps in the case of the B.C supermarket strike) she has usually been on solid ground

One of the many decisions facing the federal cabinet this fall will be whether to extend the mandate of the Food Prices Review Board for another year or to let it die quietly.

The Trudeau government never wanted a food prices review board in the first place. It was a sop to a strong opposition in Parliament that demanded something be done about the rising price of food.

Cabinet, tiptoeing on the thin ice of a minority government, was in no position to talk tough. Beryl got them off the hook.

She was proof that those Liberals were as concerned about the hard-pressed consumer as was any other party.

It was a waste of taxpayers' money, of course, but not an extravagant waste. Despite Mrs. Plumptre's $40,000 annual stipend, the board runs a tight ship. When it comes to waste, it can't compare to such things as refitting aircraft carriers and then selling them to China for scrap; or paying $46,000,000 for $10,000,000 buildings.

One of those pushing for an end to the prices review board's mandate will be Agriculture Minister Eugene Whelan, minister's mandate antipathy for Mrs. Plumptre on a personal basis is understandable—they come from opposite sides of the tracks.

But to fight with Mrs. Plumptre in public is political foolishness. It is an indication of Mr. Whelan's tunnel vision on agricultural matters and his failure to understand the mass media. In his campaign for a better return to the farmer, he could have had Mrs. Plumptre as his biggest ally. Apparently neither Mr. Whelan nor his advisers looked beyond the newspaper headlines and read the board's reports.

Mrs. Plumptre left no doubt that the farmer was not the culprit in rising food prices and freely advocated a fair return to the farmer for his capital and labor inputs. How much stronger Mr. Whelan's case would have been if he could have pointed to the nation's chief consumer advocate for corroboration of his stand. In an urban-oriented society, the public pays more attention to a spokeman for the consumers than to a spokesman for the farmers. Mr. Whelan let himself be blinded by a few critical comments about his beloved marketing boards.

Mr. Whelan notwithstanding, Mrs. Plumptre should go. The Food Prices Review Board has added little to the total knowledge of price movements in Canada. The information has all been there, gathered accurately and faithfully by Statistics Canada, by private consumers' groups, by consumer affairs reporters and by the Combines Investigation Branch and other agencies of government.

But the press and the public always like a fight. Better a confrontation between Beryl Plumptre and George Weston than to take up the cause themselves.

The frozen chicken flurry was a good case in point. Statistics Canada and the poultry division of Agriculture Canada had been reporting stocks of frozen chicken at about 30 million pounds month after month. Suddenly the figure appears in a Food Prices Review Board report and it becomes hot news.

Is it really worth nearly $2 million a year to have Beryl Plumptre repeating facts and figures that are already there?

Most taxpayers would automatically say "no." But will the cabinet say "no?"

"Dad's A Winner!"

Thomas, four-year-old son of Clarke Rollins and wife Bev, has a few words of his own to say after father was declared winner of Hastings-Peterborgouh riding Thursday night at Marmora Conservative campaign headquarters. It was the fifth successive provincial election victory for the veteran politician.

Hastings Losers Happy With Performances

MARMORA — There were three losers but no laments after provincial election votes were counted in Hastings-Peterborough Thursday night.

There was even an amiable end here to the fray between both major combatants.

Liberal Dave Hobson strolled across this village's main street to congratulate Clarke Rollins, winning incumbent Conservative MPP who had defeated him by 2,015 votes. He stayed to chat, while some of his workers took back fried chicken being distributed at the Tory celebration to their own committee rooms.

But Mr. Hobson, buoyed by the fact he had increased the Liberal vote in the riding, also looked to the time when he could join combat once again, a reaction he had in common with:

— Bob Thompson, 25-year-old Deseronto United Church pastor who won 2,961 votes for the New Democratic Party. It was the first time the NDP had a resident candidate and a rounded organization in the area and the election had given it its baptism of fire. Once, the NDP was dismissed as political factor in eastern Ontario, but "not anymore . . . We'll be back."

— Nancy Arnold, 27-year-old Social Credit cnadidate from Wasaga Beach — the first of her party to run in the area — who admitted she didn't expect election. But the campaign had permited Social Credit to advance its presence in the area and Ontario. It has been nearly 40 years since the Liberals had been in power and they "keep coming back for more. In 40 years Social Credit will have made more gains. "I'm certainly not discouraged by tonight's count" in Hasting-Peterborough."

All three losing candidates also pondered the possibilities of another election.

"The Conservatives have been running their own ballgame," said Mr. Hobson. "They're not doing that now — with their losses across the province and they'll have difficulty running in a brand new arena. I think they may have to call an election in frustration."

As for himself: "I'm always ready to run again," said the 39-year-old Bancroft high school teacher. "I like politics . . . and there's nobody can fight harder than I can, I think."

Mr. Hobson said he fought to win "knowing that the opposition would be very heavy.

"— But I have to feel happy with the incredible success we did attain — success in the areas that know Clarke so well."

Mrs. Arnold, who spent election night monitoring results for the nine other Socreds campaigning around the province, expected the net results of the election will be . . . another election.

She predicted another campaign in 18-20 months "because I don't feel the Conservatives have strong enough mandate to hold out for four years."

Mr.Thompson, who awaited election results at his Deseronto committee rooms, wouldn't project a positive date for the next election.

"But it's going to be extremely interesting. What kind of a marriage would be between (Liberal leader) Robert Nixon and (Premier) Davis."

As for himself and another election: "I'm open to that."

"We ran our campaign for less than $1,000 and I'm quite proud of what we did."

Drenching Rain No Damper To Hastings Electorate

Drenching rain didn't prevent almost 75 per cent of the electorate from trekking to the polls in Hastings-Peterborough Thursday.

But their fancy took some unexpected turns when the votes were counted.

Notably, there were the gains — some of them outright wins — by Liberal Dave Hobson at polls in what historically is regarded as Tory county.

Mr. Hobson showed strength in a number of northern townships in Hastings County — the home territory of Conservative MPP Clarke Rollins and traditionally strong Tory territory.

Overall the 10 townships and two villages of Peterborough County redistributed into the old riding of Hastings showed Conservative dominance.

Mr. Rollins ketp most of the new communities in his party's fold. The villages of Havelock and Norwood showed particular Conservative strength.

Mr. Hobson won two of the new townships — Asphodel and his home area of Chandos.

In the scattered areas of Hastings Libeal Loyalty — like Hungerford and Tyendinaga townships — the decisions either way were close.

In Thurlow Township, strongly Conservative, the Libeals slimmed the Conservative vote.

Strong Conservative communities like Stirling, Deseronto and Rawdon and Huntingdon townships, gave Mr. Rollins a solid edge at the polls.

Mr. Rollins won five out of the six advance polls. Surprisingly, the one loss was in Madoc, against considered safely Conservative.

But the surprises came in North Hastings.

McClure - Wicklow - Banger townships went Liberal. So did Mayo, Faraday and Limerick — neighboring townships of Mr. Rollins' home community of Dungannon.

If voters in both the Hastings and Peterborough sectors of the new riding had voted as they did in 1971, one party organizer estimated the results would have been: Conservatives 11,466; Liberals, 5,339; New Democrahic Party, 3,112.

The final tally Thursday night showed: Conservatives, 10,679; Liberals 8,664; NDP 2,961; Social Credit 328.

So That's the Result!

Dave Hobson, Liberal candidate in Hasting-Peterborough shrugs as he hears results during committee-room vigil after polls closed. He lost out — finishing second, but increased Liberal vote in area.

Rollins Starts Next Campaign This Morning

By HARRY MULHALL

MARMORA — For Clarke Rollins the next provincial election begins today.

It's a favorite response of the veteran Hastings County politician that he begins thinking of the next campaign immediately after election day.

He repeated ~~it Thursday~~ night in an interview — on the heels of winning Hasting-Peterborough for his Progressive Conservative party.

Victory is nothing new to the 63-year-old winner of various municipal and five successive procincial elections.

But his latest campaign had an extra injection of challenge.

"This has been a very tough election," he told party supporters as they gathered in a rented movie house here for yet another Rollins victory celebration.

What made it tough?

First, he explained later, there was the size of the new riding — the largest in southern Ontario — reaching from Deseronto to northwest of Peterborough.

And, he admitted, his chief opponent — 39-year-old Liberal Dave Hobson — had staged a "hard-working campaign and organization."

So much so, Mr. Hobson made inroads into polls historically loyal to Toryism in north Hastings — Mr. Rollins' home territory.

With a new riding — 10 townships from Peterborough County were added to Hastings constituency — comparisons are difficult. But in 1971 in Hastings Mr. Rollins had won by more than 4,500 votes over his then Liberal antagonist. Thursday night's final count gave him 2,015 votes more than Mr. Hobson.

But, Mr. Rollins said, he was not taken by surprise when polls changed traditional vote patterns.

But the election result across the province he found "disappointing."

Nonetheless, a minority government shouldn't make it "any more difficult to get things done.

"But it would be my hope that our party would pay a little more attention to our private MPPs," he added.

He wouldn't make any prediction on the next provincial election. But any political party that would precipitate one should think first "of the people" because of the cost involved.

As for his future political intentions if another campaign is called: "I wouldn't want to make any comment at this point. One election at a time is enough for me.

"But I'll start preparing for the next one tomorrow."

Silence Indicates Defeat

Thursday night offered little to cheer or even smile about for Quinte Progressive Conservatives — left to sit and ponder in disbelief the defeat of Robin Jeffrey.

From the beginning tallies showed Liberal victories in city polls, committee room workers sensed the eventual outcome.

For the most part, only three adding machines broke the uneasy silence — tallying the downfall of what most considered a sure win.

Party supporters packed the vacated McCoy drug store watching Quinte PC president Gerry Brennan relay figures to wall displays — quietly hoping for a turnabout.

A weak cheer came when Mr. Brennan announced a foul up in tally counts which cut the Liberal lead from 1,000 to 300. It was the last cheer of the night.

"Who would have believed . . . how could this happen," said one woman.

Not until Mrs. Jeffrey arrived at the committee rooms did the melancholy lift.

With the election outcome all but sealed, Mrs. Jeffrey cheered her workers on. One after another, the workers embraced Mrs. Jeffrey trying in vain to replace their disappointment with enthusiasm.

"I love you all," Mrs. Jeffrey said.

Students Accurate

The only Quinte area provincial election candidate who didn't make a visit to Centennial High School — Liberal Hugh O'Neil — was voted the winner by 92 votes from a possible 248 at a mock election held Thursday during the noon hour at the school.

NDP candidate Carson McLauchlan and Progressive Conservative candidate Robin Jeffrey visited the school last week to discuss issues with the students.

Mr. McLauchlan collected 65 votes — roughly 26 per cent of the voting population while Mrs Jeffrey gained 86 votes.

All students from grade nine to 13 voted.

Hastings-Peterobrough county students attending Centennial also went to the 'polls' for their candidates. Conservative candidate Clarke Rollins won with 58 votes from 138 students voting with Liberal candidate Dave Hobson collected 47 and NDP candidate RobertThompson with 33. There was no vote for Independent Socred candidate Nancy Arnold.

The mock vote, sponsored by the Student Council, was organized to show students the mechanism of elections and to stimulate interest.

NDP Gain Called 'Con Job'

COBOURG — The impressive gains by the New Democratic Party (NDP) was a massive con job and did not show the electorate the full intentions of the party's policies, said opposition campaign managers for the Progressive Conservatives and the Liberals in Northumberland during Thursday's provincial election.

"The socialistic intention was not mentioned in the platform, and the new image that (Stephen) Lewis (NDP provincial leader) projected was a smooth con job on the voters," said Jame Gordon, manager of the campaign that returned Russell Rowe, the PC candidate to office.

He said it was a shame the province would have to bear the consequences of a minority government and whatever the NDP was able to force through the house.

Dr. Ian Wilson, manager for Isobel Kirkpatrick's unsuccessful attempt to unseat Mr. Rowe echoed the PC party worker and stated many of the people are not aware, nor is any attempt made to acquaint them with, the full intentions of an NDP government.

He said many of his friends who have immigrated from England have commented to him they recognize the NDP stance as similar to the existing English government and are afraid it will bring the same rampant inflation and poor medical services currently thriving in Great Britain.

Plurality Reduced In Northumberland

CAMPBELLFORD — About 75 per cent of the more than 41,000 eligible voters cast their ballots in Thursday's provincial election which returned incumbent Progressive Conservative-Russell Rowe to Queen's Park.

Mr. Rowe, Speaker of the House, had his plurality reduced from the 1971 figure of 5,650 to 2,998 All in which 75 per cent of the eligible electorate also voted.

The PC standard bearer received 13,186 votes or 47 per cent of the total, Isobel Kirkpatrick, the Liberal candidate, 10,194 which was 33 per cent of the vote and John Taylor, 6,191 or 20 per cent of the vote.

Mr. Rowe won 13 of the 15 towns and townships in the Northumberland riding, which was less than the total sweep he made in the 1971 election, losing only Murray and Hope Townships this time.

The PC total decreased from 55 per cent to 47 per cent of the popular vote with five per cent of the difference going to the Liberals and the remaining three per cent to the NDP.

Mr. Rowe's 47 per cent was well above the provincial vote tally by the Progressive Conservatives which was 36 per cent with the Liberals getting 34 per cent and the NDP 29 per cent.

Mr. Rowe and his staff aid they were satisfied with the results indicating they expected their plurality to be halved.

The NDP candidate came in last in all of the towns and townships relinquishing second place in the two new additions to Northumberland, Hope Township and Port Hope.

Trenton Jealous?

COBOURG — Russell Rowe, MPP for Northumberland said Trenton's fear and jealousy of Belleville may eventually be the motivation for the town to break away from its ties with Hastings County and join Murray Township and Northumberland County.

Speaking in an interview at his election headquarters, Thursday night, he said the decision would have to be made strictly by the municipality with no outside interference.

All Over but Shouting

A triumphant Russell Rowe enters his main campaign headquarters in Cobourg Thursday night to receive the congratulations from his staff and well-wishers. The incumbent Speaker of the House was returned easily to office, sweeping 13 of 15 towns and townships in his Northumberland riding.

Rest at Last

Isobel Kirkpatrick, Liberal candidate in Northumberland was defeated handily by incumbent Russell Rowe in Thursday's provincial election. Mrs. Kirkpatrick takes a breather after a long hard campaign at her headquarters in Port Hope while waiting for the election results to come in.

Bad News

John Taylor, New Democratic Party candidate in Northumberland, was defeated in the elections Thursday, but his party's standings in the riding were increased. Mr. Taylor said he would not be disappointed if he lost the election as long as his 17 per cent share of the vote increased. It did, to 20 per cent and Mr. Taylor said he was looking upon the campaign as a chance to introduce the electorate to NDP ideas.

Rowe Sweeps Towns

By JERRY BROWN
Staff Reporter

COBOURG — Russell Rowe, Progressive Conservative incumbent in Northumberland riding and Speaker of the House, swept 13 out of 15 towns and townships in Thursday's provincial election and once again demonstrated he may be the most stalwart campaigner in his party.

Mr. Rowe accumulated 13,186 or 47 per cent of the vote, his closest rival Liberal Isobel Kirkpatrick receiver 10,194 votes (33 per cent) and John Taylor, the New Democratic Party candidate 6,191 or 20 per cent of the total vote.

The Speaker was bucking what one of his campaign workers called a "strong message" to Premier William Davis from the Provincial electorate.

Mr. Rowe indicated the results were compatable with what he and his campaign staffers expected, saying he had thought his plurality and per cent of the popular vote would decrease with the addition of Hope Township and Port Hope to the riding.

The PC candidate won Port Hope, Mrs. Kirkpatrick's home town, which had 6,298 eligible voters, by 200 votes, with all three candidates receiving about one third of the total cast.

Mr. Rowe lost to Mrs. Kirkpatrick in Hope Township by 104 votes 492 to 596, and in Murray Township by 37 votes, 1,033 to 1,070 for the Liberal standard bearer.

The Speaker's eight per cent plurality loss from almost 55 per cent in the 1971 election to yesterday's 47 per cent was reflected in the Liberal's rise of five per cent and the NDP increase of three per cent.

Mr. Rowe said the campaign was a confusing one nad it was too bad a minority government had to be formed but he said he would make no predictions on the upcoming house's record.

Mr. Rowe said it was traditional for the Speaker of the House to be elected at the beginning of every session and would not predict if he would win.

"The success of the next government depends on the calibre of the people who have been elected and how well they can work together," he said after arriving at his main headquarters in Cobourg and accepting the congratulations of well-wishers.

Mrs. Kirkpatrick was an underdog in the election and many of the Northumberland electorate gave her little chance to defeat the incumbent.

She thanked her workers at her Port Hope centre before going to congratulate Mr. Rowe, saying even though she had lost she felt it was a valuable experience. Mr. Rowe complimented her on waging a hard "clean campaign".

John Taylor the NDP candidate had stated previously that he would not be disappointed if he did not win the election but was glad for the opportunity to present his party's policies to the electorate. He said before the election if the NDP increased its vote it would be a significant victory, indicating it would show the current eastward spread of NDP strength was continuing.

Fewer Than Two in Three Voted

TORONTO (CP) — Nearly-complete tallies indicate that fewer than two of three eligible electors voted in Thursday's Ontario election.

The final count will show that about 3,227,000 residents voted—under 65 per cent of the 4,854,000 eligible.

In the last Ontario election in 1971, more than 73 per cent of the 4,500,000 eligible voters cast ballots. And in the federal election of July 8, 1974, more than 71 per cent voted.

A heavy rainstorm swept much of the province on voting day this time.

The Conservatives won more than 40 per cent of the legislature seats with about 36 per cent of the popular vote. In the last election in 1971, the party captured more than 66 per cent of the seats with less than 45 per cent of the vote.

The Liberals, with 34 per cent of the vote this time, won just under 29 per cent of the seats. In 1971, the Liberals got only 20 seats with almost 28 per cent of the popular vote.

His report to city council showed that 33 per cent received only temporary assistance and 16 per cent were given long-term aid.

Minority Government Can Work: Nixon

PARIS, Ont. (CP) — Liberal Leader Robert Nixon said Thursday that a minority government can work in Ontario, but added his party is not prepared to join with another party to keep such a government alive.

"I think there'll be an election before the regular four years elapses," Mr. Nixon told reporters.

He said Canada has had many minority governments, so "I don't see why one can't work here in the province of Ontario."

"We'll have to respond to the platforms and programs Mr. Davis (Premier William Davis) brings forward," he said.

"There's been a tremendous reduction in Conservative support, so we'll just see what happens when the house convenes Oct. 21."

Mr Nixon, who led the Liberals in the last three provincial elections, says he has no regrets about the campaign, "but I am disappointed—quite a bit disappointed."

Mr. Nixon said he did not feel there would be an alliance between the Liberals and either the NDP or Conservatives.

"I think our traditions here are for the parties to maintain an individual stance on the basis of our own policies and either vote for or against government bills as we see fit."

Mr. Nixon said he is "kind of looking forward" to a minority government situation.

He said he would like to see legislation introduced in the next session to set up rent review boards and give the Ontario Energy Board the power to regulate oil and gas prices.

Ontario should also have another budget soon, he said.

Mr. Nixon said he would not be taking a vacation and probably would be at his Queen's Park office Friday.

Earlier, the Liberal leader told about 350 supporters at the Paris fairgrounds that his party had elected more members than at any time since 1937.

Mr. Nixon, who arrived at the Paris fairgrounds smiling, waving and appearing exuberant, congratulated Premier Davis on the victory at about 10 p.m. EDT Thursday.

He was greeted by campaign manager Dick Mundy, who said: "I am ready to start campaigning tomorrow."

Mr. Nixon noted that a minority government would be Ontario's first since 1943. In 1943, the Conservatives beat the Liberals, then led by Mr. Nixon's father, Harry.

"We're proud of what we were able to do," the Liberal leader said. "We conducted a strong campaign."

Mr. Nixon said a minority government could last "months, years, who's to say?"

He said election results were as yet "inconclusive and we'll be watching them closely."

Mr. Nixon said new Liberal members coming into the legislature would be a valuable addition to his caucus.

Voters Switch Normal Loyalties

TORONTO (CP) — The voters of Ontario—35 per cent of the Canadian electorate — switched traditional loyalties Thursday and all but threw out their provincial government in apparent anger about inflation.

In reducing the Progressive Conservatives to a minority and pushing the Liberals to third place behind the New Democratic Party, the electors of the biggest province also bought themselves the possibility of another general election soon.

Thursday's balloting was the 10th general election, including one federal election, in the country in just over two years. And it was the first in that time to give the government in power anything less than a decisive mandate to carry on.

The rebuff to the Conservatives after 32 years in office will be attributed in post mortems to many factors, including possible errors by Premier William Davis.

But the dominant issues in the campaign had to do with inflation—rising rents and high mortgages, the price of fuel and food, the pressures on pensioners.

The message of the election for politicians in Ottawa as well as at Queen's Park seems clear: The electorate wants its leader to do something about the deteriorating economy, to provide the "economic leadership" demanded in a speech earlier this month by Beryl Plumptre, chairman of the federal food prices review board.

The disgruntlement that all but defeated the Davis Conservatives also probably worked against the Liberals of Robert Nixon who gained seats but lost their place as official opposition.

The provincial Liberals were lumped with the federal government throughout the campaign—Mr. Davis spoke of the Nixon and Trudeau Liberals as "kissing cousins"—so the voters may have been taking an indirect swipe at the Trudeau government as well.

The link was emphasized by the Liberals themselves in the closing days of the campaign. John Turner, who had helped focus public attention on the deteriorating economic situation by quitting as federal finance minister last Thursday, appeared in public supporting Mr. Nixon just before election day.

The chief beneficiary of the people's search for economic leadership was the New Democratic Party under Stephen Lewis, which won more seats than ever before in the province and became the official opposition.

The second-place finish means Mr. Lewis is spared the difficult political dilemma that his father had to confront at the federal level between 1972 and 1974.

Lewis Promises to Work Hard

TORONTO (CP) — Party Leader Stephen Lewis promised Thursday night to work constructively for Ontario after his New Democrats appeared to have won a record number of seats in the province's general election.

With late returns still coming in and the NDP battling the Liberals to form the official Opposition, Mr. Lewis said he will not obstruct the Davis government frivolously.

"The NDP will work for the general good of the province and attempt to present itself as a serious alternative to the Progressive Conservatives in the next election," he told noisy, cheering supporters at NDP provincial headquarters.

"We have the right to be seen as the alternative," he said, with his party elected or leading in 38 of 125 legislature seats.

The Liberals were elected or leading in 37 ridings and the Progressive Conservatives in 50 at the time.

The previous largest NDP win in Ontario was in 1943 when the CCF—the NDP forerunner—won 34 seats.

"I admit to you with immense pleasure it's wonderful for a change to have a political rather than a moral victory," Mr. Lewis said.

He congratulated Premier William Davis and Liberal Leader Robert Nixon for their campaigns. All leaders fought as effectively as possible "and should be saluted for it," he said.

There were loud boos at the mention of Mr. Nixon's name, but the NDP leader did not acknowledge them except to say: "There are emotions that loose (themselves) during the campaign that require perspective."

Mr. Lewis thanked NDP workers across the province for fashioning "this extraordinary gain" and voters who supported his party.

He said the NDP fought the campaign on issues that concerned voters and will continue to do so when the legislature is called into session.

"We apparently have up to 38 members . . . we shall have to get a larger caucus room," he said to repeated cheers.

He was interupted by shouts of "We're No. 1" and an impromptu chorus of "For He's a Jolly Good Fellow"—his second such salute of the night.

Earlier, he was greeted by similar cheers when he arrived at NDP headquarters to thank workers for a resounding personal victory in Scarborough West. He won the riding by about 9,000 votes.

"I just want to thank you

PCs Mark 11th Time Party Returned

TORONTO (CP) — The re-election of the Progressive Conservative government in the Ontario election Thursday marked the 11th straight general election in Canada in which the party in power has been returned.

The last provincial or federal turnover of power was August 30, 1972, when the New Democratic Party ousted the Social Credit government in British Columbia. And Premier Dave Barrett's B.C. government is the only one in Canada still in its first term.

In the three years since the British Columbia upset, all other provincial governments have been re-elected and the federal Liberal government has been re-elected twice—as a minority Oct. 30, 1972, and with a majority July 8, 1974.

However, the fact that Ontario's Conservative government has been returned with only minority strength in the legislature breaks a nine-election string during the last 2¼ years in which the federal and eight provincial governments have been returned with decisive legislative majorities. This string began with the re-election of the NDP government of Manitoba June 28, 1973, and ended with the return Tuesday of the Conservative government in Newfoundland.

Before that stretch of electoral stability, however, came three years in which there were eight turnovers of power in 11 provincial elections, followed by the near defeat of the federal government in the 1972 national election.

The period of power shifts began with the New Democratic Party's defeat of the Liberals in Manitoba June 25, 1969, and closed with the NDP win in British Columbia.

Governments also changed during that three years in Quebec, where the Liberals turned out the Union Nationale in 1970; Nova Scotia, where the Liberals beat the Conservatives in 1970 and New Brunswick, where the Conservatives turned the tables on the Liberals in 1971; Alberta, where the Conservatives ended 35 years of Social Credit rule in 1971, and Newfoundland, where the Conservatives defeated the Liberals in 1972 after 23 years.

Davis Admits PC Policy Has Not Been Widely Accepted

BRAMPTON, Ont. (CP) — A shaken Premier William Davis admitted Thursday that his government has instituted policies not widely accepted by Ontario voters, but vowed to provide stability and leadership even though his Progerssive Conservative party is in a minority position for the first time in 32 years.

"This province is still the envy of a lot of other places, not only in this country, but in other parts of North America," Mr. Davis told supporters at his campaign headquarters here.

"As long as I'm premier of this province, that's the way it's going to be."

The premier viewed the election results at home, then travelled the few miles to his campaign headquarters when it became clear his party would be unable to sustain the majority government won under his leadership in the 1971 provincial election.

He carefully skirted any question of how long the 30th Parliament of Ontario would last, but vowed to provide strong leadership in the months and years ahead.

He added he is "more than satisfied" that his party dealt with the issues since the campaign began more than five weeks ago.

But he said there was no question some policies the government has instituted since 1971 "have not met with widespread approval." One of those policies was obviously regional government, which appeared to cost the Progressive Conservative party heavily in central and southwestern Ontario.

He congratulated Stephen Lewis, leader of the New Democrats, for what he said was "quite obviously a constructive campaign," but there were no congratulations forthcoming for the campaign waged by Liberal Leader Robert Nixon.

Mr. Davis has been deeply offended by attacks on his and his government's integrity, a main theme of the Liberal campaign.

He vowed to provide the best in leadership and stability even though his party is in a minority position.

"I have no debts in this election," Mr. Davis said.

The premier has been a constant critic of the federal government's economic policies and in his short speech to campaign workers, [illegible] that there was "no question" the country is in a state of economic difficulty.

Mr. Davis said there is no doubt there will be some, including himself, who are disappointed that his party didn't get a majority.

Flanked by his wife and children, the premier thanked local campaign workers for ensuring his re-election in the Brampton area—which he has represented in the provincial legislature since 1959.

More Women Elected Thursday

TORONTO (CP) — Ontario voters elected a record seven women from a record 48 women candidates in Thursday's provincial election.

The New Democratic Party and the Progressive Conservatives will have three women members each in the next legislature, the Liberals one.

All three women members in the last legislature were re-elected.

Margaret Birch, minister of social development, retained her Scarborough East seat in Toronto. Margaret Scrivener, parliamentary secretary to Housing Minister Donald Irvine, won a tough race in the Toronto riding of St. David, while Margaret Campbell retained her Liberal seat in Toronto St. George.

Bette Stephenson, 51, former president of the Canadian Medical Association, won the Toronto riding of York Mills for the Conservatives.

In another Toronto riding, Beaches-Woodbine, Marion Bryden, 57, research director for the NDP for seven years, defeated Conservative Thomas Wardle, the member in the last legislature.

The NDP's Gill Sandeman defeated John Turner, member in the last House, in Peterborough.

And in Ottawa's Carlton East, Evelyn Gigantes, 32, of the NDP narrowly defeated Paul Taylor, Liberal member in the last legislature. Ms. Gigantes lost to Mr. Taylor in a byelection in 1974 by 300 votes.

Among the prominent women losers in the election were Conservative Robin Jeffrey, former mayor of Belleville; Liberal Claudette Millar, former mayor of Cambridge; Conservative Barbara Greene, controller in the Metropolitan Toronto borough of North York; and Liberal Millie Caccia, wife of Charles Caccia, member of Parliament for Toronto Davenport.

Reaction Favorable Election Results

By TED WELCH
THE CANADIAN PRESS

The prospect of minority government in Ontario has prompted favorable comment from provincial spokesmen for labor, teachers, developers and civil servants.

Meanwhile, Premier Dave Barret said Thursday in Fernie, B.C., that "very, very pleased" Ontario NDP Leader Stephen Lewis did so well.

The standings early today gave the Progressive Conservatives 51 seats, the NDP 38 and the Liberals 36.

David Archer, president of the Ontario Federation of Labor, said in Toronto he is "happy as hell" with the minority government. Minority administrations are capable of good legislation, he said.

"After 32 years in power, the Conservatives needed some chastisement for what I consider arrogance," he added.

Grant Notley, Alberta NDP leader, said the showing of Mr. Lewis and his party "clearly establishes the NDP as the major political force in Canada." Mr. Notley is the lone NDP member in the Alberta legislature.

J. Richard Shiff, president of Bramalea Consolidated Developments Ltd., said in Toronto that what "hits you in the eye" aboutthe election result is that housing has been the most important issue.

Last week, he criticized Mr. Lewis for what Mr. Shiff said were unfair, broad attacks on developers and landlords.

In a minority situation, he said he believes all parties will "make it their business to concentrate their efforts on solving the critical issues ahead, particularly housing."

He said he expects a minority government to offer incentives to help solve the shortage of rental and new housing in Ontario.

The Conservative government's loss of seats also might be interpreted as criticism of the red tape involved in the housing field.

CSAO HAPPY

Charles Darrow, president of the Civil Service Association of Ontario, had a "very favorable" view of the results.

"I think it's great. In our position, a minority government just works out fine."

Georges Gauthier, president of the Ontario Teachers' Federation, said minority government should be "very interesting," but predicted another election before too long.

He said that despite some disagreements, the federation had a good working arrangement with the Conservative government, adding that Liberal party attacks on the quality and cost of education "had us worried."

Nixon Ponders Political Future

ST. GEORGE, Ont. (CP) — Liberal Leader Robert Nixon was pondering his political future today after a disappointing showing by his party in the Ontario general election Thursday.

Liberal campaign strategists said they had hoped to win at least 50 seats in the next legislature and were disappointed when results flowing into campaign headquarters in nearby Paris indicated the party had fallen far short of the mark.

The minority Conservative government which evolved Thursday can work in Ontario, Mr. Nixon told reporters Thursday.

At the same time, he said his party is not prepared to form an alliance with any other party to keep a minority government alive.

"I think there will be an election before the regular four years elapses," he said.

In Paris, high-ranking Liberal party officials said last Saturday's free-for-all television debate between Premier William Davis and Mr. Nixon helped the New Democrats.

Party President Jeffrey King said the "dicey situation we had a few days ago broke in their favor.

But Mr. Nixon said Canada has had many minority governments, so "I don't see why one can't work here in the province of Ontario," adding the Liberals will have to respond to platforms and programs brought fort by the premier.

Actresses Base Roles On Historical Research

By ISABEL HUGGAN

What was it like to be a woman in Prince Edward county 30 years ago?

"Incredibly busy," says Lesley Forrester, who has been researching this topic for her roles in the Belleville Theatre Guild's first play of the season, "Around about 1883-84".

"I just can't get over how hard women had to work inside and outside their homes," she says. "And what interests me is that they had two roles to fulfill. For besides having to do strenuous physical labor, they had to look like ladies as well. There's such a conflict between those two roles, but nothing I've read shows that women complained about it."

With Sharon Poitras and Linda Snefjella, Lesley has been reading a number of books about the female condition in the past, including excerpts from women's diaries in Eva Zaremba's anthology, "Privilege of Sex: A Century of Canadian Women."

"It's been hard to find direct, relevant information about women in this area," says Lesley. "It's even harder to find out how they really felt.

"We've found that they seldom analyzed their feelings in the diaries, and seemed to show very little self-interest. But we've read a lot about how tough they were in the face of hardship."

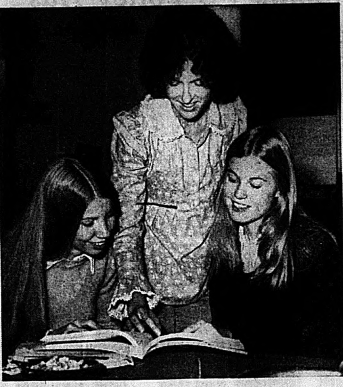
In creating their roles for the drama, based on actual local events, the three women have worked for several weeks with the men in the cast and director-playwright Bill Culp.

"The characters come from within us," says Sharon, explaining the workshop technique the actors have used, "but I find my characters' personalities restricted by the times. For example, acting the part of a daughter I shouldn't realistically talk back to my father, or refuse to do something he'd ask. I feel limited in that way."

Linda and Lesley add that their on-stage movements, although not especially hampered by long skirts, are much less free than they would be in a contemporary play. "I'm not as physically relaxed as I am ordinarily," says Linda.

Making their transition doubly hard is the fact that they must switch parts within the play, from female roles to symbolic and impersonal beings. They also take part in a comic scene in which they, and one of the male actors, portray temperance women.

"Around about 1883-84" opens Oct. 8 at the Pinnacle Playhouse, and will run until Oct. 11, and then Oct. 15 - 18.



Sharon Poitras, Lesley Forrester and Linda Snefjella look over some of the historical and feminist writings they've researched for their roles in "Around about 1883-84", a play about the last hanging in Prince Edward county.

Mr. and Mrs. Terrence Cretney

Cretney — Maxwell

Diane Maxwell and Terrence Wayne Cretney were wed in Faith Chapel in Toronto this summer, in a service conducted by Rev. James Naismit.

The bride is the daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Harry Maxwell and the groom is the son of Mr. and Mrs. Robert Cretney.

Given in marriage by her father, the bride wore a gown of white taffeta with a sheer overlay. The high neckline, bodice and sleeves were trimmed with seed pearls. A matching head band of sequins, seed pearls and daisy applique held a full chapel train. She carried a cascade of white roses, stephanotis and baby's breath.

Mary Maxwell the bride's sister, was maid of honor in a mint green and white dotted dress. Heather Maxwell and Erica Brewster were bridesmaids in matching mint green gowns, carrying bouquets of daisies, carnations and rosebuds.

Catherine Cretney provided organ music, and Brian Maxwell attended the candles.

Robert Cretney, the groom's brother, was his best man. Andrew Wilson and Colin Brewster were ushers.

A reception at the Inn on the Park, Toronto, followed the service. After a honeymoon in Bermuda, Mr. and Mrs. Cretney have made their home at 20 Elizabeth Street North, Port credit.

Mr. and Mrs. Robert James Reynolds

Reynolds — Kline

The Church of St. Michael the Archangel was the scene of the August wedding of Janet Marie Kline, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. J. Russell Kline, Halifax, Nova Scotia, and Robert James Reynolds, son of Mr. and Mrs. James R. Reynolds, Clearwater, Florida and Belleville.

Father Kenneth Stitt performed the afternoon ceremony.

Given in marriage by her father, the bride wore a floor length gown of silk jersey with semi empire waist and mandarin neckline. Her tulle illusion cathedral length veil was caught in a Juliette cap trimmed with appliques and seed pearls. She carried yellow roses, baby's breath and fern.

The bride's sister, Nancy Kline, was maid of honor in a melon and green silk flowered jersey and carried a nosegay of white and green tinted chysanthemums. Paul: Kline, the bride's sister, Liz Marshall, and Trudy Reynolds attended the bride in similar ensembles.

Groomsman Alex Sellers was assisted by ushers Robert Andrews, Charles Smith, Christopher Marshall and David English.

A reception was held at the Park Room of the Four Seasons Hotel.

The couple will reside in Toronto.

Gardeners Hear About Canning From Food Council Specialist

By SHARON AIRHART

Canning and freezing were the topics of food scientist Carroll Nelson who addressed the most recent meeting of the Belleville Garden Club.

Mrs. Nelson, who works with the Ontario Food Council, said her officer receives more than 150 calls per week from home canners.

"Canning is a science," she stressed, warning the 140 members present of the dangers of botulism which occurs in improperly canned foods.

Fruits are high in acid, she explained, and may be canned by the boiling water bath method but vegetables which are low in acid must be canned in a pressure canner.

Oven canning is not safe, she said.

"If you have canned produce this year and have not processed in a pressure canner for vegetables, boil the canned produce for 10 minutes before serving."

Mrs. Nelson said people can write to her office (Ontario Food Council, Parliament Buildings, Toronto) with questions about canning. She asked people to include their telephone number so that they could be called with replies.

Persons who prefer freezing can obtain a free publication (No. 504) from the federal department of agriculture and food or by writing the food council.

Mrs. Nelson said that vegetables to be frozen must be blanched to destroy enzymes which continue the normal growing and deterioration process. The only exceptions are onions, mushrooms and green peppers. Corn must be blanched for seven minutes she said.

She said that fruits can be frozen without sugar and that it may be prevented from turning brown by adding asorcbic acid.

At the meeting, prizes were awarded for the six best vegetable plots raised by Garden Club members for the Cheshire Home. Winners were Mr. and Mrs. D. Ritchie, Myrna Goodwin, Douglas Stevenson, John Birkett, Mrs. R. Stickler and Mr. McWilliam and Mrs. Boomhower.

A prize for unusual vegetables was awarded to Bernard Lee for a Big Mac pumpkin.

Other prizes for plots were awarded to L. Paulson, Lance Cooke, Mrs. Janet Curley, Guy Buller and Joe Gray.

The Cheshire Home expressed thanks in a letter to the Garden Club for landscaping and for the produce produced in member's city garden plots for the home.

To Members and Friends of the Quinte Progressive Conservative Association

Now that my second term of office as your representative in the Ontario Legislature has come to a close, I want to record my appreciation to all of you for the unfailing support, co-operation and assistance you have given me.

As you can imagine, the decision not to run again was not an easy one to make. However, it will soon be eight years since I was first elected a Member of Provincial Parliament, and during that time I feel I have accomplished most of the things I set out to do.

I have no doubt I will miss the excitement and sense of fulfilment that comes from having an active role in shaping the laws of the Province, and I will certainly miss all of you in the Riding Association that I have had the privilege to work with. However, in my best judgment this seems to be the time for me to step down from an active political career.

I owe you all a debt of gratitude for helping to make it possible for me to serve the Quinte riding. I believe that together we have been able to accomplish a great deal for the Quinte area and I shall continue to contribute in any way I can.

It was a privilege to serve with Bill Davis and other Government Members and to participate in the deliberations of Cabinet. My years, first as Minister without Portfolio, then Minister of Health, and now, Correctional Services, have been interesting and certainly not uneventful.

We can be proud of our Province. Through enlightened, responsible government we have attained a quality of life envied by others on this continent.

Enid and I will miss the hurly-burly of elective public life but we will still have a keen interest in political affairs in the area. As individuals and as a family we have made some wonderful friends and have shared with you and others happy, memorable experiences.

Thank you all - in particular the members of our Executive, both past and present, who have helped in so many ways.

Sincerely,

R. J. Dick Potter, M.D.

Experts Say

Conserve Fuel Painlessly

EDMONTON (CP) — The Alberta Motor Association (AMA) says voluntary fuel conservation can be carried out in Canada without hardship or severely inhibiting the personal flexibility of transportation provided by the automobile.

The AMA, which has launched a fuel conservation program with Haste Makes Waste as its theme, says the single most effective way to improve gasoline mileage is to slow down.

Reducing speed from 70 miles an hour to 65 can reduce fuel consumption by eight per cent: to 60 miles an hour, 16 per cent and to 50 miles an hour, 26 per cent.

The AMA says the average Canadian car travels 12,000 miles a year, delivers 17.5 miles to the Imperial gallon and drinks about $500 worth of gasoline.

The association says slowing down is just one of the many factors involved in reducing fuel consumption and its program offers hundreds of simple steps motorists can take to improve mileage.

For instance:

Stepping hard on the gas can double the amount of gasoline that squirts into the carburetor. Drive as though you have an egg between your feet and the gas pedal.

Long warmups are unnecessary. Drive off slowly as soon as the oil-pressure warning light goes off. Shut the engine off if you are going to stop for more than one minute.

When buying a new car, consider that the weight of a car has much to do with the rate of gasoline consumption. Every 100 pounds requires an extra 15 gallons a year.

There is a little matter of friction resistance, which has more to do with the tires than the car. Tests have shown that radial ply tires reduce rolling or friction resistance. They cost a little more but wear longer and can give up to six per cent better mileage.

An automatic transmission will guzzle anywhere from two to 15 per cent more gasoline than a manual. It's worth remembering, however, that the automatic may be easier on the car. This factor, plus ease of operation, may outweigh fuel savings.

An air conditioner adds a load to the engine and reduces mileage and can consume about six per cent more fuel.

Thorough engine tune-ups can improve gasoline mileage by 10 per cent or more and a dirty air filter can rob a car of a mile per gallon at 50 miles an hour.

Flying Granny

DUBLIN (AP) — The Flying Granny, 83-year-old Marian Hart of Washington, D.C., arrived here Sunday after breaking her own record as the oldest woman to fly the Atlantic solo and said she did it "just for kicks."

Mrs. Hart piloted her single-engine Beechcraft from the U.S. capital to Shannon Airport on Saturday and continued on to Dublin "to make a few night circuits" over the city.

She dismissed her flight as "not as exciting as in the old days."

Sprightly but frail looking and dressed in a brown tweed suit, Mrs. Hart recalled a visit to Shannon in 1953 when she flew the Atlantic for the first time 'n another Beechcraft.

"The airport has changed. It's not as nice as when I was here first. It's gotten too big."

Mrs. Hart described her latest adventure as "just another little trip," but aviation experts said she is the oldest woman ever to fly the Atlantic solo.

She arrived at Shannon after stops at Gander, Nfld., and Reykjavik, Iceland, in her small 1961 plane in which she has logged more than 5,000 hours flying time.

Mrs. Hart said she plans to keep flying for many more years and will head next to the Middle East.

THE ANNUAL MUNICIPAL ENUMERATION
STARTS TODAY

The annual municipal enumeration is underway. This municipal enumeration is separate and distinct from the recent provincial enumeration which was conducted for the provincial election. During the following week, an enumerator, carrying a proper identification card, will call at your residence for a few minutes to check basic information required in determining:

- the allocation of education property taxes between the public and separate school systems;
- the distribution of provincial grants to local governments to help reduce local tax bills;
- the preparation of jurors' lists; and
- population information needed for other municipal programs.

The enumerator must record such information as the name, age, property status (e.g. owner or tenant), school support and residency of all members of the household.

When the enumerator visits, please check that the information on the Enumeration Notice is correct. If it is not, revise it and verify the changes.

If you are not home, a Notice will be left for you. If changes are necessary, please make them and mail the Enumeration Notice in the self addressed postage prepaid envelope accompanying the Notice. For any additional information, please contact the local assessment office.

Ann Landers

Real Men Were Never Meant to Dance!

By ANN LANDERS

Dear Ann Landers: I am convinced the American woman's obsession that men be good dancers is breeding the masculinity out of them.

Dancing is a woman's game. A truly masculine male was not meant to glide a woman gracefully across the dance floor. His centre of gravity is different and he is likely to feel clumsy and awkward when he attempts to imitate the grace and rhythm that his partner expresses so naturally. This is why most manly men hate to dance.

Not so with the gay element. They are invariably marvellous dancers and have fooled a great many women. Some women have even married them because they are so beautiful and dance so well.

This trend will be reversed only when women get smart and stop falling for fairies who "Tiptoe Through the Tulips."

Wise them up, will you, Ann?—Orlando Observer

Dear O. O.: Wise THEM up? Dearie, you're the one who needs to be wised up. Such hogwash I haven't heard since I left Iowa.

Your notion that only gay guys are good dancers is ridiculous. I don't know who you've been dancing with in Orlando, but come to Chicago and I'll prove your theory is cockeyed.

Dear Ann Landers: I am 72, my husband is 73. We've had separate bedrooms for 10 years, since Horace's snoring got so bad I couldn't stand it. He used to "visit" me occasionally, but hasn't done so for about six years—which is fine with me.

Last week a neighbor told Horace about a drug for Parkinson's disease that awakens the sex drive in older men. He said a 70-year-old Parkinson's patient who hadn't had the urge for 10 years took the medicine while hospitalized and began to chase the nurses down the corridors.

Horace has been nagging me for three days to write to you and ask if there is any truth to it. I hope you'll say NO.—No Signature, Of Course

Dear No Sig: The drug your neighbor heard about is called l-Dopa. The effects on that patient were "unusual." My medical consultants tell me l-Dopa cannot be obtained for use as an aphrodisiac. So I don't think you have anything to worry about, dear.

Dear Ann Landers: My wife is going through the change. She perspires a lot and is always complaining that it is too hot in the house. The woman never sits down. She is constantly on the run, up the stairs, down the stairs, cooking, cleaning, washing windows—it would make anybody perspire, change or no change.

When the kids or I tell her it's chilly in the house, she says, "Put on a sweater."

Do you think it's fair that we should have to wear sweaters on account of her condition? Is there any way we can ALL be comfortable?—Chilly Willy

Dear Chilly: There might be. Has your wife been to a doctor lately? In recent years some highly effective medication has been developed for menopausal women. If your wife hasn't looked into it, I suggest she do so at once.

Big Sandbox Makes Babysitting Easier

FORT McMURRAY, Alta. (CP) — Blanche Reynolds is Fort McMurray's No. 1 babysitter, and to about a dozen children here she's also the lady with the world's largest sandbox.

Mrs. Reynolds lives with her husband in a renovated ex-restaurant near this booming oil sands community in northeastern Alberta. There's a small forest of swings sprouting in her yard next to an oversize sandbox, where 14 children happily gouge tunnels.

An abbreviated chain-link fence runs around the yard. The fence has no opening—adults simply step over it, but the toddlers inside show no desire to stray. If anything, more children want to get into Mrs. Reynolds' yard than out of it.

Recent studies have stressed the acute need for day-care centres for children here, but that's no news to Mrs. Reynolds. The demands on her babysitting services have grown so strenuous that recently she applied to upgrade it to a full-fledged day-care centre.

When she came to Fort McMurray three years ago, kids were the last thing on her mind. The couple's two children had long since grown up, and 14 years of working in an Ontario factory gave her no obvious qualifications for the job.

It began with a single newspaper advertisement asking for a woman to look after children in a home half-days. She answered and from then on she was "swamped."

The 14 children she now looks after range from six months of age to kindergarten level. Fees are $6 a day for the smallest tots. If two children are sent from the same family, they're charged $8 daily. However, rates are flexible.

"If a mother's got lots of money, OK. If not . . . well . . . I don't worry."

Meals aren't confined to rigid times because the children "don't want it down to a routine—I find it keeps them happier this way."

'Flashy Dressing' Gone with Beehive

TORONTO (CP) — Today's fashionable woman, attuned to the times, is dressing in an elegant but more casual way says Toronto designer John Artibello.

"She dresses to be admired but not noticed in an unpleasant way," he said, citing a bygone era when he would see a woman "so done up in the morning you wondered if she was going to a party or coming from one."

He said that this kind of ostentation, "went out with the beehive hairdo and flashy fads of the '60s.'

Mr. Artibello said today's woman knows what suits her, takes the best out of fashion for herself and builds a wardrobe around it.

This fall, the trend is towards sweater dressing for daytime and long slinky dresses at night, he added.

"I don't like seeing pants everywhere. If you're going to a dinner party or the theatre, you can reward your hostess or escort by looking attractive.

"A woman doesn't have to have a lot of clothes to look smart, but it's a good idea to have a few fine feathers to wear at night."

Another Toronto designer, Vienna-born Maggy Reeves said: "Good taste counts, knowing when to put something on or leave it off. In brief, if you are in doubt, leave it off."

As for individuality, Miss Reeves said it can be achieved by doing a small thing like wearing a buckle at the side instead of the centre. Or pinning a brooch on the cuff of your suit rather than the lapel.

Fashion co-ordinator Norma Wildgoose said that since the sweater is the base for fall dressing, the skirt, shirt and sweater make a dressed-up look when they are in the same color.

"The layered look appears in all the new collections," she said. "A cardigan is worn over a turtleneck sweater and shirt topping a skirt or pants."

Singles Date By Videotape

NEW YORK (AP) — Singles turned off by the singles scene are turning on to a new video dating service that first lets them see, hear and select their dates via television.

"It's the end of the blind date," proclaims Videomate, New York's only video dating service that provides the latest electronic refinement in the age-old game of boy-meets-girl.

"Now, you can see and hear your date on closed-circuit TV before you date," says a Videomate advertisement. "It's fun! It's riskless! It's new!"

Instead of making stilted chatter over costly drinks in a crowded bar, Videomate members pay $60 to tell a camera and microphone about themselves and their romantic ideals.

They view tapes of other "Videomates" who in turn look at their tapes. If it is mutually agreeable, they get together.

"Video dating cuts out a lot of the baloney in getting to know people," says Jim Wilson, 27.

Last Living Member Of Group Honored

TORONTO (CP) — A. J. Casson, the last living member of the Group of Seven, was recently awarded an honorary degree at the University of Toronto.

The artist, who began painting in 1920, was invited to join the distinguished group in 1925. But at that time ,they were considered neither distinguished nor a group.

Canadian reaction to the artists' paintings resembled that of the Paris critics and public to the Impressionists' work in the late 1800s. It was mainly disgust and anger.

The Group of Seven were unique at that point, Mr. Casson recalled, because they painted art with Canadian eyes, not European. He dismissed early Canadian art:

"Around 1912, and for many years after, a large percentage of works shown in any given exhibition were by so-called Sunday painters. The demand for Canadian works was so limited that most artists earned their living by doing commercial work or teaching."

He said the group came together in an effort to change the viewpoint of Canadian painting. They held an exhibition at the newly opened Art Gallery of Toronto in 1920. They adopted the name of Group of Seven because they didn't want to be known as just another art society.

Mr. Casson said that the exhibit so provoked the critics that "blandness went out the window."

He said the critics and public could not fathom a real art movement inspired by Canada.

"Painters and their works were attacked from all sides. The paintings were compared in the press with a Hungarian goulash, a drunkard's stomach, head cheese, and they said that the group had fouled the nest of Canadian art."

This criticism angered the artists at first, Mr. Casson said, but it also furnished publicity for a previously apathetic public. Soon the outcry changed into compliments and praise.

The artist stressed that the Group of Seven organization has been constantly misinterpreted. He said the group had no leader, no secretary, no regular meetings and no jury. They held together for friendship and common objectives.

"The group existed for two purposes—to paint Canada as Canadians and to let in a breath of fresh air."

Over the years, the artists sketched and camped in every part of Canada, said Mr. Casson. For example, two of the artists, Lawren Harris and A. Y. Jackson, made their campsite on the north shore of Lake Superior, a complete wilderness at that time. They made some of their best sketches there.

He said the group named lakes they liked after favorable critics and the marshy, desolate lakes after critics they disliked. The names were never written publicly.

In 1932, the group decided to disband due to some illnesses and members leaving Toronto.

Mr. Casson said: "I remember that last meeting very well, it was there that the group decided that it had accomplished its main objectives.

"The group had helped to free Canadian artists from the shackles of worn-out conventions."

Mr. Casson currently works with police tracking down fraudulent group works.

"Back in the group days, anyone who spent time faking group paintings would have been wasting his time."

George Wallace Shuns Limelight

MONTGOMERY, Ala. (AP) — George Wallace like Brer Fox, is layin' low these days. There's a briar patch out there he'd as soon not get into just now.

Democratic party officials denounce his candidacy, polls cite his slipping popularity, state legislators pushing his bills wait in vain for his support, reporters prowl his home turf digging up allegations of lack of leadership and fellow-governors question his physical stamina.

Wallace, all the while, stays in his family quarters at the governor's mansion nursing a broken leg and a bruised image.

While other declared and undeclared 1976 presidential candidates (Wallace is both, having declared he's in but will wait a while to "announce") covet every inch of newsprint they can get, the man with a message for the masses turns away reporters by the droves.

What about all those charges of neglect and poor administration? Wouldn't he like to answer them?

He would not. But after 10 days of badgering he consented to anyhow, sort of, and by phone rather than in person.

'Just asking the question is insulting to the people of Alabama and I resent that," he said. "The people of this state are just as intelligent and have just as much knowledge about government as the people of any state in the union.

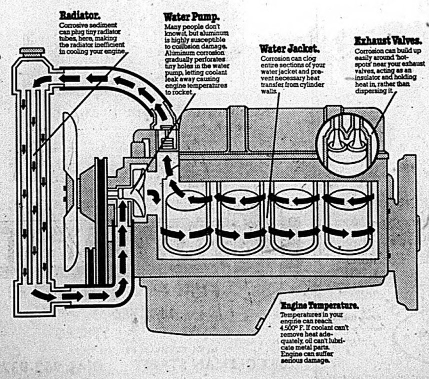
HOW YOUR COOLING SYSTEM CAN AFFECT THE PERFORMANCE OF YOUR ENGINE.

First the bad news.

Depending on the size of your engine, there are between 5,000 and 7,000 square inches of bare metal inside your cooling system—metals like steel, cast iron, copper, brass and solder—even aluminum, which is being used increasingly in cooling systems, especially in imported cars.
All of these metals are susceptible to corrosion.
This type of corrosion can easily build up without your even knowing. So it could be affecting the performance of your engine, right now.
It can build up near your exhaust valves, clog your water jacket, plug your radiator and even eat holes in your aluminum water pump or your aluminum cylinder heads.
Any of these corrosion build-ups can cause dangerous engine over-heating and lead to costly repairs.



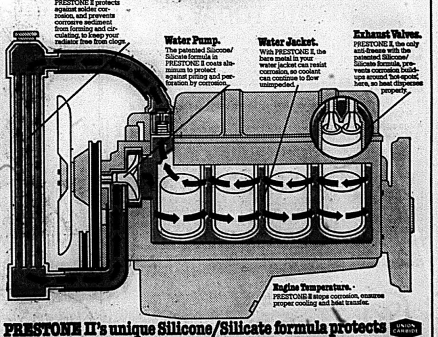
Radiator.
Corrosive sediment can plug tiny radiator tubes, here, making the radiator inefficient in cooling your engine.
Water Pump.
Many people don't know it, but aluminum is highly susceptible to corrosion damage. Aluminum corrosion gradually perforates tiny holes in the water pump, letting coolant leak away causing engine temperatures to rocket.
Water Jacket.
Corrosion can clog entire sections of your water jacket and prevent necessary heat transfer from cylinder walls.
Exhaust Valves.
Corrosion can build up easily around 'hot-spots' near your exhaust valves, acting as an insulator and holding heat in, rather than dispersing it.
Engine Temperature.
Temperatures in your engine can reach 4,500° F. If coolant can't remove heat adequately, oil can't lubricate metal parts. Engine can suffer serious damage.

Now the good news.

PRESTONE II prevents cooling system corrosion. In fact, PRESTONE II is the only anti-freeze and summer coolant which contains the patented Silicone/Silicate formula to protect against this corrosion.
This unique Silicone/Silicate formula actually bonds itself to every square inch of bare metal inside your cooling system.

It forms a tough protective film over the metal which effectively resists corrosion all year round, to help maintain maximum engine performance.
To ensure the fullest possible protection against corrosion and the expensive damage it can cause, install a fresh fill of PRESTONE II every year.

To back flush your cooling system at home, quickly and professionally, look for the economical Prestone Flush & Fill Kit, wherever PRESTONE II is displayed.



Radiator.
PRESTONE II protects against solder corrosion, and prevents corrosive sediment from forming and circulating, to keep your radiator free from clogs.
Water Pump.
The patented Silicone/Silicate formula in PRESTONE II coats aluminum to protect against pitting and perforation by corrosion.
Water Jacket.
With PRESTONE II, the bare metal in your water jacket can resist corrosion, so coolant can continue to flow unimpeded.
Exhaust Valves.
PRESTONE II, the only anti-freeze with the patented Silicone/Silicate formula, prevents corrosion build-ups around 'hot-spots', here, so heat disperses properly.
Engine Temperature.
PRESTONE II stops corrosion, ensures proper cooling and heat transfer.

PRESTONE II's unique Silicone/Silicate formula protects every square inch of metal inside your cooling system.

Wrist-slapping Makes Crime More Attractive

OTTAWA (CP) — A history of judicial wrist-slapping has made commercial crime an attractive proposition in Canada—so attractive it shakes the economy from time to time.

But tougher policing is making it harder to earn a dishonest dollar.

The RCMP's commercial crime section, made up of well-schooled sleuths, was formed in 1967 after a series of multi-million dollar finance company collapses shook foreign investors' confidence in Canada.

Meanwhile, Parliament has mulled over the competition bill for the last six years. The second phase of this bill to govern business practices faces another fight in the Commons this winter. The Bankruptcy Act also is coming up for amendment—and, no doubt, a broadside against the fact that it will place greater personal responsibility on individual directors of bankrupt companies.

Canada's competition law has always been rated weak by experts. Former corporate affairs minister Herb Gray says leaky anti-trust laws encourage inflation by allowing big business to keep prices high, even when demand is low.

Lawyer Douglas Hogarth, former Liberal member of Parliament for New Westminster, maintains that good anti-combines law—a stronger competition bill—would do as much as any government measure to slow inflation.

Enforcement of what law there is has not always been zealous. Eric Kierans says that as Quebec revenue minister he got the impression that the tax department would merely demand its share if it did stumble across a corporate fraud.

"Why are certain kinds of rip-offs punished as stealing and others praised as smart business practice?" asks the law reform commission of Canada in its latest annual report.

"Under the present law, it seems that gentlemen don't steal," the commission comments. "At best they outsmart others; at worst, they're criminals in plain clothes.

But the RCMP, using the Criminal Code like a scythe, have been cutting into a golden field of "plainclothes" suspects. Supt. Henry Jensen, who led the commercial crime section for eight years until his reassignment this fall to the National Defence College, says the penalties must be tougher.

He cites the case of the Dare to Be Great pyramid sales scheme, which sucked $120,000 out of Calgary residents before the operators were charged, as a classic. The operators were fined $75,000, then popped up again in New Brunswick.

"That probably was regarded as a heavy business tax," Supt. Jensen says of the fine. His question—"Did that crime pay?"—answers itself.

Former Hamilton harbor commissioner Kenneth Elliott, 42, was sent to prison last summer for six years for defrauding the commission of $280,000. Reginald Fisher, 62, a bank consultant, was sentenced to three years.

The investigation that put them in prison also will bring 12 prominent executives and 12 dredging companies into court Nov. 3 for preliminary hearing on charges of conspiracy to defraud taxpayers of a total of $4 million.

Solicitor-General Warren Allmand has described this as the most successful investigation in Canadian history. It is only one of 2,600.

German Noblemen Sell 100 Castles

BONN (AP) — One hundred castles and country palaces have been put up for sale in West Germany by nobleman owners too strapped to pay astronomical costs of upkeep.

At least two castles can be leased for a symbolic annual fee of 1 Deutsche mark—40 cents. But there are no takers because renovation costs amount to several hundred thousand dollars.

All along the Rhine River, hundreds of weathered bastions are crumbling while the owners argue with the West German government over tax rebates for urgent repairs and tax writeoffs to lure buyers.

"At least half the 800 Rhineland castles and palaces will collapse without major rebuilding and restoration work," said Hubert Klanert, manager of the West German Castle Association.

In 36 miles of vineyard-carpeted Rhine Valley between Mainz and Koblenz, half the 60 rocky citadels dating from the Middle Ages are threatened with collapse.

Three years ago, the association's list of available castles was printed in Japanese and distributed by a Tokyo department store. But no Japanese buyers appeared.

"Shortly after the oil crisis last year, I spoke to three real estate agents who represented oil sheiks," Klanert said. "We discussed several castles for sale, but I never heard from them again."

Klanert's headquarters is Marksburg Castle, a medieval fortress perched on the edge of the middle Rhine gorge at Braubach.

"Upkeep costs are enormous," he reported. "We spent $120,000 over the last two years just for reroofing."

More than 40,000 Americans—the largest contingent of foreign tourists there—stop off at Marksburg Castle each year during cruises on the Rhine. They provide an important source of revenue to defray operating expenses, Klanert said.

"But Marksburg is an exception. Many other castles are too remote or run down to be integrated into the tourist industry."

Five castles are currently on sale in the middle Rhine region.

The most famous is Rheinstein Castle near Bingen, which was the object of a celebrated swindle earlier this year.

The castle was originally offered for sale by the Duke of Mecklenburg for $1.6 million. But this price nosedived after a pretended buyer looted the premises of antique furniture, paintings and old weapons worth an estimated $800,000.

"The asking price now is about $120,000," Klanert said.

Some 15,000 castles, palaces and historical ruins are scattered around West Germany. Upkeep costs for only a limited number of the most famous landmarks and the others must survive from private sources.

"We simply have to abandon many worthwhile restoration projects because the antiquities are too far off the beaten track and can't be used for anything," Prof. Max von der Freeden, director of Wuerzburg's castle museum, complained in a newspaper interview.

Alberta Operates Literary Branch

EDMONTON (CP) — When John Patrick Gillese talks about his work, his eyes sparkle, his arms flail the air and he is apt to pace around his office.

No typical civil servant, Mr. Gillese has spent the last four years trying to make Alberta "the literary mecca of Canada."

And he thinks he is succeeding.

"Writers are popping out of the woodwork all over the place," said Mr. Gillese, director of the film and literary arts branch of the Alberta government. "A really outstanding literary climate is developing here."

Named supervisor of creative writing with the provincial culture department in 1971, one of his most astonishing discoveries resulted from his decision to launch a search-for-a-new-Alberta-novelist competition in 1972, with a top prize of $2,500.

"I expected about 15 entries but we got 98, and 27 of the manuscripts were good enough to publish."

Jan Truss of Water Valley, Alta., whose manuscript entitled Bird at the Window won first prize in 1972, recently sold her book to Redbook in instalment form.

The second-prize winner, 23-year-old Fred Stenson of Pincher Creek, Alta., received rave reviews from critics for his novel, Lonesome Hero.

To date, three entries to the annual contest—open to writers who have never published a novel—have been published by Macmillan of Canada, and film companies are "nibbling" at more recent winners, Mr. Gillese said.

"I suppose I could have sat back and given grants to W. O. Mitchell, but I don't think that would have been too valuable," he said, adding that other provinces now are following Alberta's innovative approach to creative writing.

The director, a free-lance writer for 30 years before accepting his present position, has organized more than a dozen community and regional workshops on creative writing, including some in small rural towns. Writers such as Rudy Wiebe and Raymond Hull, author of the Peter Principle, have attended the workshops, aimed at getting budding writers started in the field.

Mr. Gillese has also compiled his writing experience into a popular correspondence course which sometimes requires registration a year in advance and boasts resultant sales from 64 per cent of its students.

As well, creative writing courses have been established in the Cree language and in prisons, with one prison official recommending the federal government institute similar programs throughout Canada.

The white-haired director is convinced authors should become "an integrated part of society"—one reason behind his decision to experiment with a "writers in the school" program under which authors visited 20 schools in Alberta last year.

"You can teach creative writing in Grade 1," Mr. Gillese maintained. The subject matter has "an astonishing power" over children in a classroom.

The department, which also offers the usual grants to writers and publishers, publishes Bulletin every two months, a publication crammed with information for the writer. A comprehensive handbook on breaking into print, outlining potential markets in North America, has also been compiled by Mr. Gillese.

"Being a writer myself, I was aware of the need for guidelines for both professional and beginning writers."

Mr. Gillese, who credits the provincial government with having "the uncommon good sense" to establish a literary department years ago, said a typical day involves speaking with publishers, answering queries from writers, and keeping up with a barrage of telephone calls.

"This is intensive work. It's like a fire has broken out."

The director, who has sold 5,000 magazine features, two books and many documentary film scripts, began with a budget of $14,000 which now has been expanded to $300,000.

However, he said most of the money is recouped by the benefits of encouraging literary talent.

Mr. Gillese, who recently received the Rothman's merit award for literature "for notably advancing the cause of Canadian writing," vividly remembers his first $4 cheque for an article, and thinks the "writer in the garret" philosophy should be discarded.

The director, who hasn't had time or energy to pursue his own writing since accepting the government job, said he recalls being told the position might allow him time to write another novel.

"But I didn't even have time to read a novel until this summer."

But he did not know it was Liberty's father until Lund told him.

Metis and Eskimos Will Work Pipeline

CALGARY (CP) — If approval is granted to build an underground natural gas pipeline from the western Arctic to southern Canada, more than 100 northerners—most of them Indians, Metis and Eskimos—will be fully qualified for key jobs on the multi-billion-dollar project the moment it gets under way.

A special career development program, initiated by the oil and gas industry in 1971 and since supported by the federal and territorial governments, has been training men in a wide range of skills required in pipeline construction, operation and maintenance. The workers are guaranteed jobs in the industry whether a pipeline is built or not.

Known as Nortran (Northern Petroleum Industry Training Program), the scheme was developed to enable as many native people as possible to participate responsibly and profitably in the North's industrial development.

The training project has shown that the workers, many of whom were either unemployed or were existing under harsh economic conditions as hunters and trappers, have good learning capabilities and a natural aptitude to understand technical problems."

Although limited to the number of workers who at present can be permanently employed by the oil and gas companies, enrolment will be greatly enlarged when the pipeline project is approved.

It is expected that about 400 northerners will eventually be trained for steady jobs in gas transmission, processing and exploration. These will be in addition to the several thousand temporary jobs that will be available during the construction period.

The companies backing Nortran represent those supporting the applications of either Arctic Gas or Foothills. They include Alberta Gas Trunk Line, Gulf Oil Canada, Imperial Oil, Shell Canada. Both industry and government recognize the need to give northerns first chance at job opportunities in the North.

It is a unique example of co-operative action in a highly competitive venture in which the successful applicant is yet to be determined.

"Launching the scheme was at first a slow process," said Barry Virtue, manager of Nortran. "Native supervisor-counsellors spent considerable time in the norther communities explaining to the people the petroleum development plans and how, through training, they could participate.

"Many of the younger men and women had little experience with a wage-related economy. To move from their homes to other locations for training and employment was a difficult emotional decision to make."

Gradually, however, the idea caught on and in the qualifying process, the number of those willing to move south to petroleum operations or north to exploration sites in the Mackenzie Delta and Beaufort Sea justified setting up permanent training procedures.

"Northerners working on the line and returning to their homes when on leave will, of course, have money to spend. This should help, rather than adversely affect, the northern economy."

Salisbury Booms

SALISBURY (CP) — This booming city of 400,000 was not even a name on a map 85 years ago.

It was on Sept. 12, 1890, that the pioneer column camped on the open veld at the end of a long journey from what was then Bechuanaland. Where the pioneers first raised a crude flagpole there now is a garden—Cecil Square—surrounded by tall, modern commercial buildings.

By the turn of the century the tiny community had begun to grow. The population was 1,600, but Salisbury was still a village lacking municipal water and light supplies and with only 30 miles of built-up roads.

For all that, one woman could write: "Our little family is growing too big. . . . Salisbury is becoming civilized and suburban."

But the first 14 years of the century saw Salisbury overcome many of the pioneering problems and begin to take shape as the foundation on which the city of today has grown.

These problems were of every kind: of economics, geography, social difficulties, climate and health, lack of amenities, politics, communications.

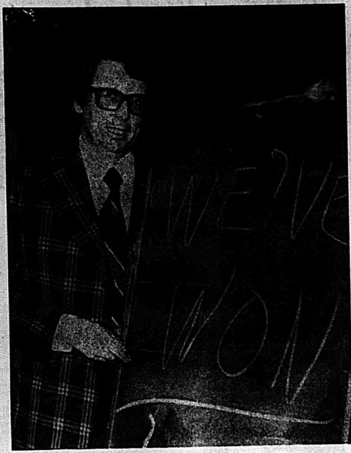
BELLEVILLE, ONTARIO, FRIDAY, SEPTEMBER 19, 1975



Hugh O'Neil stands beside tote board proclaiming We Won.

Vote Close

O'Neil Winner in Quinte Upset

By ROBIN CHASE
Staff Reporter

Hugh O'Neil, the 39-year-old Grit newcomer who says he was unsure of victory before the provincial election Thursday, is the first Liberal legislative member to represent Quinte riding in 38 years.

Mr. O'Neil upset the Progressive Conservative reign with a 710-vote margin of victory over Tory candidate Robin Jeffrey — 12,448 to 11,738

Up until returning officer Gerry Joyce confirmed an O'Neil victory at about 9.30 p.m., Liberal workers had been keeping a running total of the Belleville situation — the area they were most concerned about.

Mr. O'Neil was not present when the polls began to come in to his headquarters and showed he had a slight lead in Belleville in the early returns.

At about 8.35 p.m., there was dismay among party faithfuls when Mrs. Jeffrey took the city lead for a few minutes. And for about the next 10 minutes, the lead seesawed.

So it was almost storybook his wife Donna, daughter Kathy and son David walked into the committee rooms at 8.55 p.m., he too the Belleville lead for good.

At that point, Liberal workers began sensing victory. They were already greeting Mr. O'Neil as a winning candidate.

And when confirmation arrived, bedlam resulted — singing, dancing, handclapping — with Mr. O'Neil being hoisted upon the shoulders of party workers and paraded through the crowd.

In his acceptance speech, Mr. O'Neil gave total credit for victory to his party workers and made special mention of those workers who he had never had the opportunity to see or talk with.

"You people are the ones who have won this election," he commented. To which an unidentified worker yelled out, "we'll do it again."

Mr. O'Neil also complimented Lyn Harrington, his campaign manager and party organizer Charley Bates who "kept after me (before his nomination) and boy, am I ever glad they did."

During an interview, Mr. O'Neil admitted he did not think he would win but, of course, there was that ever-present hope. He did not think the final tally between himself and Mrs. Jeffrey would be as close as it was, he added.

He explained with 38 years of Conservative representation in Quinte and with Conservative Dr. Richard Potter's large majority in 1971, the Liberals were the underdogs in this election.

"I don't really know what's happened," he commented. "We've really been organized. We had a lot of workers and they have worked so hard."

Mr. O'Neil said his first action as a member will be to discuss with the Liberal riding executive future plans.

In addition, with a minority Conservative government provincially, he will likely begin campaigning soon, he noted.

Mr. O'Neil said he would not make an immediate statement on the future of his position as president of Fraser and O'Neil Real Estate and emphasized his staff would be the first to know of his intentions.

Mrs. Jeffrey, her campaign manager Fred Deacon and Conservative Hastings MP Jack Ellis visited Liberal headquarters after it was determined Mr. O'Neil had won.

Mrs. Jeffrey said Mr. O'Neil fought a "clean" campaign with everything "above board."

She remarked that if she ever ran again in any campaign, she would prefer to have Mr. O'Neil as a candidate.

Liberal Margin Clear

Sway Belleville — that was the theme of the Liberal campaign as they attempted to gather city voters to the Grit cause in Quinte riding prior to Thursday's provincial election.

And the intensity with which Liberal workers concentrated their efforts in Belleville during the campaign appeared to work — Hugh O'Neil winning over Conservative candidate Robin Jeffrey by 710 votes.

Mr. O'Neil is a Trenton resident and Mrs. Jeffrey resides in Belleville but the Liberals took Belleville by about 400 votes.

In Trenton Mr. O'Neil won his home poll handily — by 156 to 102 over Mrs. Jeffrey with NDP candidate Carson McLauchlan attracting 16 votes.

At poll No. 1 in Belleville (Foster - ward), Mr. O'Neil edged Mrs. Jeffrey 58-51 in the O'Neil family's former stomping grounds.

Harrington: We Worked On Belleville and Won

Lyn Harrington, campaign manager for winning Liberal candidate Hugh O'Neil in Quinte riding Thursday, says his workers assumed they had Trenton and Sidney Township sewn up and concentrated their efforts on wooing the Belleville voter.

"I'd have to say we assumed we had them," he said in an interview.

Mr. Harrington related in Belleville, "we established ourselves earlp in the campaign with our sign campaign. We surprised people in Belleville by being so strong."

This concentration continued right up to when the polls closed, he said, with the hardest drive in Belleville on election day."A lot of people got soaking wet," he added.

Asked what the Liberals did differently in this campaign compared to past provincial ones, Mr. Harrington said, "it's new blood . . . new organization . . . new candidate . . . dedication to the candidate."

Mr. Harrington said he was surprised at the final vote result. "I though it might be even closer," he remarked.

But he said some people were probably fed up with the Conservatives in Quinte. "There was a lot of dissatisfaction with the Tories," he commented.

The next duty for the riding executive will be to "start working for the next election," Mr. Harrington said.

He explained that with a minority Conservative government in Ontario, there will likely be another provincial election in the near future.

Mr. Harrington was chosen campaign manager following his nomination of Mr. O'Neil at the Liberal nominating convention in August.

Robin Jeffrey, Tough Campaigner, Gracious Loser

38 Years of Tory Rule Ends

Disappointed, Jeffrey Will Try Again

By COLIN BRUCE
Staff Reporter

No sooner had Robin Jeffrey admitted defeat in Thursday's election when she announced she will return to carry the Tory banner next time around.

With her party gathering only 51 seats across the province and left to face the problems of running a minority government, an early election could be in the wind.

"I'll run in the spring if an election is called," said Mrs. Jeffrey as she left her committee rooms to personally congratulate the successful Liberal candidate Hugh O'Neil.

"He's a great candidate who fought a clean battle."

Thursday marked the toughest day of the campaign for the former city mayor. Ironically, it was the day she abstained from canvassing. "I left my campaign in the hands of the organization with the exceptions that I would not campaign on Sundays nor on voting day," she said.

She spent the day having her hair done and shopping for groceries with some time spent visiting poll staffs.

Like many others, she was confident of a Tory win.

She did not let her supporters down — presenting herself as a winner in other ways when she visited her election headquarters to admit defeat, committee room staff and campaign workers. "We ran a good race. There is no disgrace in losing."

"Don't look so sad," said Mrs. Jeffrey to volunteer workers who sat close to tears. "We had a darn, good fight."

Leaping to the top of the desk — bringing with her, her campaign manager Fred Deacon, she said "we didn't win but we made a lot of friends."

Ever smiling, Mrs. Jeffrey thanked her workers calling them a "great, great bunch of people. I love every one of you."

"We're still going to have a party and tie one on," she said.

Earlier in the evening, before polls closed, Mrs. Jeffrey confided the universal fear of a politician. "I wonder if I have the faith of the people."

"If I don't have their faith, I'll have to think of my life ahead," she said.

Asked if a return to municipal politics is a possibility, she answered, "no, that part of my life is over." She had often referred to provincial politics as a natural step from local government — a graduation of sorts.

"I've thought about studying law," she said. Prior to the counting of the ballots, Mrs. Jeffrey preferred not to speculate on taking a second run at winning the riding.

"I didn't expect to have the support that Dr. Richard Potter had last time (a majority of more than 8,000 votes) but I expected to win," she said.

"I really love government and the campaigning," she said. "I feel I did everything I could."

"There are no ill feelings and I respect my opponents for that," she said.

Deacon Dismayed At Loss

My candidate worked hard, said Progressive Conservative campaign manager Fred Deacon. "I consider the election result as a personal defeat."

No where were the effects of the Tory defeat in Quinte riding more plainly visible than in the face of Mr. Deacon.

Refusing to dismiss Robin Jeffrey's loss as a side effect of any anti-Davis sentiment among Quinte voters, Mr. Deacon said, "I suppose there's something I should have changed . . . things I should have anticipated and acted on."

"Never in my wildest imagination did I think this would happen."

"I'm going to have to sit down and think about this," he said. "Robin worked so awfully hard."

For most of the evening Mr. Deacon stood before the committee room tally board hoping for a turnaround that never came.

"I feel I let her down. I didn't anticipate the right things."

PC Official Admits Liberal Vote in City Unexpected

The strong Progressive Conservative vote anticipated in Belleville and Sidney Township never materialized Thursday for former Belleville mayor Robin Jeffrey — ultimately spelling defeat for the Tory campaigner.

Quinte riding returning officer Gerald Joyce listed the unofficial count as Liberals, 12,448, Progressive Conservatives, 11,738 and New Democrats 4,744.

Almost 29,000 of a possible 42,000 voters in the riding or 69 per cent cast ballots "representing a very strong turnout considering the inclement weather," he said.

It was anticipated, at least by Conservatives, that voters in both communities Trenton and Belleville, would polarize — backing the home towner and Liberal Hugh O'Neil's sweep in Trenton came as no surprise.

But, from the beginning when poll tallies started to trickle in, it was evident the Liberal candidate was taking too much Belleville ground, said Gerry Brennan, president of the Quinte PC association.

It was the rural hinterland of Sidney Township that sounded the closing note for the Conservatives.

"We knew we had a fight on our hands but we thought we'd be much stronger in Belleville and the township," said campaign manager Fred Deacon.

McLauchlans watch NDP provincial gains come in

NDP Finish Third

McLauchlan Happy with Vote Increase

By AL ZABAS
Staff Reporter

The man with the green carnation in his lapel was smiling Thursday night as New Democratic Party returns rolled in from across Ontario.

Carson McLauchlan pumped hands, extended in congratulations, and kept a watchful eye on one of the two color television sets in NDP headquarters.

He hadn't won in Quinte riding, but the satisfaction showed as unofficial election results indicated the NDP would form the opposition in Queen's Park.

He said Thursday night he was proud.

"We took the vote away from the Conservatives as we had expected." Mr. McLauchlan said.

The decision of voters was as much an "anti-Jeffrey move as an anti-Conservative move," he added.

Because the Conservative party was the incumbent party, Mr. McLauchlan said he aimed his campaign at them: "We went after them, Hugh O'Neil didn't."

" He ran a very quiet, high budget campaign," he said. The Liberal kept his profile low and "let us do the work."

"They tagged along while we raised the issues," O'Neil benefited from some of our spadework," said Mr. McLauchlan.

He didn't begrudge the Liberal his upset victory. Neither Mc Lauchlan, nor his campaign workers said they had expected to win the riding.

But both candidate and campaign workers expected to make gains. Mr. McLauchlan predicted his candidacy would bring between 18 and 21 per cent of the popular vote.

It didn't. But the NDP did make gains. In the last provincial election, the Quinte riding candidate captured 13.7 per cent of the vote, while this year, Mr. McLauchlan improved that percentage to 16.4.

"It's a heck of a gain," he said. "We stood still for so long."

In 1967, the NDP managed 13.2 per cent of the vote, just below 1971 election results in Quinte riding.

He said he considered the increased percentage a personal victory: "We managed to attract a lot of workers that weren't involved before."

"I think they (workers) realized that we put up a candidate that will be around for awhile," he said.

The election wasn't a political victory, but it was a moral victory for him, a victory he said he plans to use as a jumping-off point in the next election.

The campaign brought out workers, and brought out more money than the NDP in Quinte riding have ever had to work with, he added.

He said during the course of the election that his candidacy was in part an effort to gain credibility, something he said he felt he had not established, in his unsuccessful bid for a seat on city council in December last year.

NDP Vote Increases

New Democrtic Party candidate Carson McLauchlan didn't win his home poll in Quinte riding.

The loss, although not a signal of ill fortune, was indicative of the voter sentiment towards the NDP in Ontario's 30th provincial election.

Conservatives and Liberals battled while the NDP quietly picked up votes to increase their percentage of the popular vote in Quinte Riding from 13.7 in 1971 to 16.4 Thursday.

In Poll 51, in Belleville, where Mr. McLauchlan voted, the Liberals and Conservatives each counted 73 votes, the NDP 39.

The wide margin in his home poll was echoed in all 179 polls in the riding. Not one poll was won by the NDP, a sitution different from 1971 when the party won a Batawa poll over the Liberals by a slim margin of five votes.

Reilly Credits Good Showing To Time, Money and Work

New Democratic Party campaign manager Ian Reilly called the campaign of candidate Carson McLauchlan one of the most successful the party has run in Quinte riding for years.

He attributed its success to the right combination of money, time, and the abundance of workers.

For the first time in four elections, the NDP had had the money to make its candidate visible, he said. Working with about $8,300 in contributions, the election committee for the first time put a candidate's name on radio.

"Ninety to 95 per cent of homes in the riding were either knocked at or phamphlets were left," said Mr. Reilly. He estimated about 200 workers, either canvassed or erected signs in the riding.

But strategy also paid off, said Mr. Reilly.

Early in the campaign, he instructed cahdidate Mr. McLauchlan to attack Conservative Robin Jeffrey.

"We figured Mrs. Jeffrey was in for a come-uppance," said Mr. Reilly. "We figured it was O'Neil now, and McLauchlan four years later."

His assessment, he said was based on the "historical win figure" of around 18 per cent of the popular vote.

"Eighteen per cent gives you a hell of a spring board to victory," he said. At that percentage, the party is taken as a serious contender.

Mr. Reilly said the NDP campaign in Quinte centred on an anti-Jeffrey slant. It's intention was to pull votes from the former Belleville mayor while at the same time encouraging the Conservative vs Liberal fight.

Cards Crumble Under Expos

ST. LOUIS (AP) — Jim Dwyer singled, doubled and tripled while Gary Carter and Pete Mackanin hit home runs to lead Montreal Expos to a 5-0 National League victory over St. Louis Cardinals Thursday night.

JIM DWYER

The Expos, completing a two-game sweep, made the most of eight hits off Cards right-hander Ron Reed (12-12) who departed after six innings, and Harry Parker, who was greeted by Mackanin's solo homer in the seventh.

Dwyer, who was traded by the Cards to the Expos at mid-season, tripled and was stranded in the first before doubling home Tim Foli two innings later to snap a scoreless tie.

In the sixth, Foli doubled and Dwyer singled, Foli stopping at third. The two executed a double steal to score Montreal's second run. Carter, a rookie, then smashed his 17th homer of the season over the left field wall.

Montreal right-hander Steve Renko (6-12) blunted a St. Louis bid in the fourth and afterward breezed to his third triumph of the season over the Cards pitching a five-hitter.

Gets By With A Little Help

JIM TODD

By THE ASSOCIATED PRESS

Life is much easier in Oakland than it is in Chicago. Just ask Jim Todd.

"I was really dragging after the eighth inning," said the Oakland A's pitcher. "I needed help."

Todd got the help and the A's picked up another victory Thursday night, clipping Chicago White Sox 7-6 in an American League baseball game.

The win reduced the A's "magic" number to three with any combination of three victories or three Kansas City losses giving the A's the American League West title.

In Thursday's other American League games, Kansas City Royals edged Minnesota Twins 4-3, Cleveland Indians nipped Detroit Tigers 2-1 and California Angels topped Texas Rangers 5-3.

Todd split last season between Wichita of the American Associaton and the National League's Chicago Cubs, where he posted a 4-2 record with an earned run average of 3.89

"The difference between being here and with the Cubs is I'm working," the righthander said. "The Cubs used me only to mop up and had no confidence in me."

White Sox manager Chuck Tanner also saw the difference.

"As far as I'm concerned, Todd has taken up the slack left by (Catfish) Hunter," Tanner said. "He's been involved in 20 wins with 12 saves and eight wins and who knows how many times he got guys out when it meant something."

With Chicago leading 4-2, the A's tied it with two runs in the fourth, then scored twice more in the fifth as Phil Garner led the hitting attack with a triple and a single, driving in two runs. Ray Fosse added a triple for Oakland.

Todd was the fourth of five A's pitchers and ran his record to 8-3.

Amos Otis' tie-breaking single in a two-run seventh inning lifted Kansas City past Minnesota and helped the Royals keep pace with Oakland.

Boog Powell hit a solo home run in the fourth and singled home Duane Kuiper, who had walked, in the first as Cleveland continued its late-season winning ways.

Andy Etchebarren's three-run homer in the sixth and Frank Tanana's route-going seven-hitter gave the Angels a come-from-behind victory over Texas. Tanana, 16-8, gave up seven hits, including Jim Fregosi's two-run home run in the ninth.

The Toronto Secondary School Athletic Association (TSSAA) withdrew from OFSAA at its annual meeting last June when the provincial body raised its dues to five cents from three cents per student.

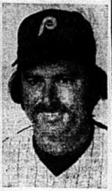
Pittsburgh Drive Blocked By Phils — For Time Being

By THE ASSOCIATED PRESS

Pittsburgh Pirates were only Pittsburgh Pussycats to Steve Carlton.

"I wish he had hung a few curve balls instead of those snap dragons he was throwing," said Willie Stargell after the Philadelphia left-hander tamed his hot-hitting Pirates 4-1 with a four-hitter Thursday night.

The Pirates, who have been hitting like there's no tomorrow, were just putty in the hands of Carlton in the National League baseball game at Veterans Stadium.



STEVE CARLTON

"He got us out in key situations," said Stargell. "He had a good breaking ball and a slider on occasion. He threw the heat (fastball) to spots. He was real sharp tonight."

Carlton had to be to silence noisy Pittsburgh—a team that had collected 51 hits and 40 runs in its last three games.

Carlton won the game under pressure conditions, for a loss would have killed any flickering hopes the Phillies might have had of catching the first-place Pirates in the National League East.

As it is, it still would take a miracle. The Phillies pulled within six games of the Pirates, whose "magic" number for clinching the division remained at five. Any combination of Pittsburgh wins and Philadelphia defeats adding up to five would eliminate the Phillies.

In Thursday's other National League games, Montreal Expos beat St. Louis Cardinals 5-0, New York Mets defeated Chicago Cubs 7-5 and Cincinnati Reds trimmed Atlanta Braves 4-3.

Home runs by Mike Schmidt and Greg Luzinski backed Carlton's superb pitching. Carlton raised his record to 14-13 by taming the Pirates, striking out 11 and walking five.

Schmidt broke a 1-1 tie in the second when he led off with a home run to increase his league-leading total to 37. Larry Bowa singled, stole second and scored on Jay Johnstone's single to push the Phillies' lead to 3-1.

RENNIE STENNETT

Luzinski, hitting in his 11th consecutive game, hit his 33rd homer of the season to make it 4-1 and drop Pirates starter Dock Ellis's record to 9-8. The Pirates' only run off Carlton came in the first inning on Rennie Stennett's triple and a single by Manny Sanguillen.

Stennett, incidentally, continued to break records with his bat. He collected two hits Thursday night to tie the National League mark of 12 hits in three games, held by three other players.

He started the record streak with seven hits in one game, for another record, and three more in another for a two-game mark of 10.

Jim Dwyer singled, doubled and tripled while Gary Carter and Pete Mackanin pounded home runs to lead Montreal over St. Louis.

Dave Kingman's club-record 35th home run of the season, a two-run blow in the bottom of the ninth inning, lifted New York past Chicago.

Rusty Staub hit his 18th homer of the season, a two-run drive in the fifth, for the first two Mets runs. Staub singled in the ninth before Kingman launched his game-winning blast and topped the team record of 34 homers set by Frank Thomas in 1962. Staub now has 100 RBIs, the most in his career and most ever for a Met.

Bill Plummer's run-scoring single in the 10th inning carried Cincinnati over Atlanta.

Maloney Will Keep Plugging

KALAMAZOO, Mich. (AP) — Being traded to Detroit doesn't seem to bother Dan Maloney, who thinks he can have just as good a season for the Red Wings as he did last year for Los Angeles Kings.

"You've got to treat everything the same no matter where you play," Maloney said Thursday after the fourth day of the National Hockey League team's training camp.

Maloney was half of the package dealt by Los Angeles for Marcel Dionne. Maloney had his best season last year, scoring 27 goals and 39 assists to become the Kings' third-highest point-scorer.

"I don't feel bad about the trade," he says. "I can have just as good a year this season. "Detroit has to be pretty interested in me. They gave up a pretty good player to get me. I don't do anything fantastic. I'm not a fancy stickhandler. I'm not a fancy skater. I'm not a fancy scorer. I just work hard."

Orginally the first-round draft choice of Chicago Black Hawks in 1970, Maloney was traded to Los Angeles for Ralph Backstrom in early 1973.

Terry Harper, the other half of the Dionne deal, doesn't take such a casual view of the trade as his fellow team-mate. Harper still has not reported to camp.

"I think Terry will change his mind and come to camp," Maloney said. "I'd sure like to see him here. He could help this team."

Caribous Nip Quebecois 12-11

MONTREAL (CP) — Goals by Bruce Murdock and Terry Sanderson six seconds apart in a 10-minute overtime period snapped a 10-10 tie and Quebec Caribous edged Montreal Quebecois 12-11 Thursday night in the opening game of their best-of-seven National Lacrosse of the game with fivt minuts League final series.

Murdock scored his third goal of the game with five minutes gone in overtime to give Quebec an 11-10 lead and Sanderson added the eventual winner as he fired a shot over goaltender Keith Todman's shoulder.

Dave Durante and Pat Differ also had three goals each for the Caribous with Jim Higgs and Travis Cook adding the others.

Dave Tasker scored three goals for Montreal, with Ron Pinder adding two. Dave Litzenberger, John Davis, Serge Loiselle, Bruce Arena, Gord Floyd and Gerry Pinder were the other Montreal marksmen.

The Quebecois used Todman in goal because of injuries to regular goalkeepers Dave Evans, who has a fractured right hand, and Ernie Mitchell, who suffered an eye injury Tuesday night.

The NLL allowed Montreal to borrow Todman from Maryland Arrows, and Gary Van Schagen from Long Island Tomahawks served as the backup. Both were third-string goalies in the regular season.

The teams were tied 2-2 after one period and Montreal led 6-5 going into the third. Ron Pinder's first goal with 34 seconds remaining in regulation time forced the overtime.

Referees Bill Dicks and Jack Leitch called 56 minutes in penalties, including three fighting majors to each club.

A crowd of 6,086 saw Montreal fire 59 shots at Quebec goalie Larry Smeltzer while the Caribous had 43 drives.

The win was the first ever for the Caribous in Montreal after nine consecutive defeats. The first four losses came in 1974 when the Caribous franchise was in Syracuse, N.Y.

The series resumes Sunday night in Montreal.

Strict Security For Davis Cup

BAASTAD, Sweden (AP) — The tightest security measures ever for a sports event in Sweden were in force for today's start of the Davis Cup tennis semi-final between Chile and Sweden.

About 1,300 policemen, equipped with dogs, horses and helicopters, were on hand for the opening singles matches. Swedish ace Bjorn Borg met Chile's Patricio Cornejo in the day's first match, with young Birger Andersson of Sweden then facing Chile's No. 1 player, Jaime Fillol.

Swedish officials were expecting some 5,000 demonstrators to protest the overthrow of the Chilean government of Salvatore Allende and current conditions in Chile.

There have been threats of violence, including reported death threats against members of the Chilean team, although there were no incidents of violence at a demonstration by about 1,500 Thursday night.

A 40-foot fence was erected around the tennis court to discourage spectators from hurling objects at the players. The 1,500 spectators were to be searched for weapons upon entering the arena, and match organizers said that anyone refusing to be searched would not be admitted.

The Swedish and Chilean players are sharing a house alongside the centre court, inside an area which has been dubbed the "iron fortress" because of the tight security.

Beginning Thursday, the players were prohibited from leaving the compound, and they will not be permitted to leave until the matches are over Sunday.

The doubles match between Chile and Sweden will be played Saturday, with the final two singles matches on Sunday.

The winner of the Chile-Sweden best-of-five series will meet the winner of the other Davis Cup semi-final, between Australia and Czechoslovakia, for the title.

Sault Demands Return of Choice

SAULT STE. MARIE, Ont. (CP) — Sault Ste. Marie Greyhounds have given coach Pat Ginnell of Victoria Cougars two days to return Tim Coulis to the Soo or they will launch court action to have the 17-year-old Kenora, Ont., native returned.

The Greyhounds, of the Ontario Hockey Association Major Junior A Series, made Coulis their No. 2 draft pick in last spring's draft of over-age midgets in the province.

He was actually picked in the third round after the Greyhounds traded away their first-round choice.

Ginnell maintains he had Coulis on Victoria's protected list long before the Greyhounds drafted him.

Coulis left the Greyhounds after only two days of pre-season training and wound up in Victoria where Ginnell says he will remain since all concerned with the youngster, including the player and his parents, want him to stay with the Western Canada Hockey League team.

A gentleman's boundary exists between the two major junior hockey leagues that prohibits the leagues from encroaching in the other's territory to obtain players. The boundary is along the Manitoba-Ontario border.

Ed Chynoweth of Saskatoon, WCHL president, said Thursday the league teams this week voted 11-1 to have Coulis returned to the Soo.

Last year the OHA's Sudbury Wolves lost their No. 1 draft pick, Gord Roberts, to Victoria under similar circumstances. Victoria stood firm and won out in a court hearing. Roberts, however, was Detroit-born and did not come under the stringent OHA-WCHL rules.

University Rules Directly Conflict

TORONTO (CP) — The Star says University of Windsor Lancers will reject a compromise solution to a dispute involving the eligibility of football player Dave Pickett.

The newspaper quotes Windsor athletic director Richard Moriarty as saying the Lancers will not agree to play the remainder of their scheduled games as exhibitions.

On Wednesday, John Dewar, president of the board of governors of the Ontario Universities Athletic Association (OUAA), proposed the switch to an exhibition schedule.

He indicated then the Canadian Intercollegiate Athletic Union (CIAU) would accept the compromise although there had been no commitment.

"No way," said Moriarty. "Playing in our own league, with our own rules, with totally eligible players (under the OUAA constitution), then asking us to play an exhibition schedule is just impossible."

At issue is a conflict between the eligibility rules of the OUAA, which say Pickett can play, and the CIAU, which say he can't.

The provincial and national bodies got an extra two days to resolve their differences Thursday when Saturday's OUAA game between Windsor and University of Western Ontario Mustangs was re-scheduled for Monday.

Western players voted to go ahead with Monday's game and asked athletic director Bob Barney to retain a lawyer to protect them should the CIAU go ahead with its plan to suspend Windsor's opponents.

When the CIAU announced Monday the Lancers had been suspended for using Pickett in last weekend's season opener, they said any future opponents of Windsor would also be suspended.

Two days later Dewar announced that Windsor opponents failing to meet their schedule commitments faces "appropriate disciplinary action."

Both bodies limit an athlete's college career to five seasons, but the OUAA says that means a limit of five years in the sport in question. The CIAU rule includes years of competition in any sport.

Pickett played three years of football and two years of basketball at University of Saskatchewan before switching to Windsor for this season.

Mustangs Vote To Play Monday

LONDON, Ont. (CP) — Players of University of Western Ontario Mustangs voted unanimously Thursday to play a scheduled football game against University of Windsor, despite the threat of suspension by the Canadian Amateur Intercollegiate Athletic Union (CIAU).

If Western had decided not to play the game, now scheduled for Monday in Windsor, it faced possible action by the Ontario Universities Athletic Association (OUAA).

The Mustang players asked Western athletic director Bob Barney to retain a lawyer to protect them should the CIAU go ahead with its threat to suspend any school which plays Windsor.

Coaches of most other sports at Western, who agreed to support the football team and the coaching staff, also asked for legal advice should the CIAU decide to impose sanctions against the university in all sports.

The CIAU suspended Windsor on Monday for using an ineligible player in a football game last Saturday. However, the player, quarterback Dave Pickett, is eligible under OUAA rules.

Vancouver's Maloney Happy With Looks of 1975 Canucks

VICTORIA (CP) — They will not be a carbon copy of Philadelphia Flyers, but Vancouver Canucks have developed a more menacing look heading into the 1975-76 National Hockey League season.

Phil Maloney, general manager-coach of the Canucks, said at the team's training camp this will be the biggest Vancouver team in the club's six years in the NHL.

"We definitely won't have as many little guys as in previous years," Maloney said. "The rookies are bigger than ever and we've got a couple of young guys in here for their second season who won't be pushed around."

After just three days of camp, Maloney was pleased with the development of second-year professionals Harold Snepsts and Ron Sedlbauer, who both played in less than one-third of the Canucks' games last season.

Both are six feet, three inches tall and weigh nearly 200 pounds.

Snepsts, a defenceman, played in 26 games last season before suffering a serious knee injury in February, but showed Maloney a willingness to take on the tough guys of the NHL.

Sedlbauer scored 23 goals in 53 games with Seattle Totems of the Central Hockey League before being recalled late last season. The left winger scored only three goals in 27 NHL games, but impressed Maloney with his aggressiveness in the corners.

Maloney, who guided the Canucks to first place in the Conn Smythe Division and the team's first ever playoff berth during his first full season with Vancouver last season, also has immediate plans for his two top junior draft choices, right winger Rick Blight, who scored 60 goals for Brandon Wheat Kings in the Western Canada Hockey League, and left winger Brad Gassoff, a 50-goal scorer for Kamloops Chiefs of the WCHL.

Gassoff had 251 penalty minutes last season. He is the younger brother of St. Louis Blues' defenceman Bob Gassoff, who had 222 minutes in penalties last season in the NHL.

"We were looking for size in the draft and I think we got what we were after in Blight and Gassoff," said Maloney. "Blight is very good with the puck and his skating should improve when he gets in better shape."

Gassoff started hitting in the opening practice and has the veterans keeping their heads up. Defenceman Mike Robitaille took one of Gassoff's body checks and said later he had not been hit that hard in the last five years.

Dennis Ververgaert, a third-year right winger, also promised Maloney he would be more aggressive this year. Ververgaert now is wearing a helmet and told reporters he would play it tougher in the corners because he is over a shoulder injury which plagued him last season.

Maloney was pleasantly surprised when goaltender Gary Smith reported to camp at 207 pounds. Smith played at about 230 pounds last season when he was the team's most valuable player.

"We are much further along this year than we were at this time a year ago," said Maloney. "The players are in much better shape because most of them worked out for a couple of weeks before camp opened."

NFL Strike

Seasons Don't Change Players

By THE ASSOCIATED PRESS

When the leaves begin turning and the air takes on the chill nip of fall, it's time for the National Football League season to begin.

But sometimes it takes more than a mere change of seasons to change men's minds.

This year it took 13 hours of gruelling labor negotiations preceded by 19½ months of uncertainty, a hard-headed federal mediator who wouldn't give in to confusion or other hard-heads, and the frightening threat of finally losingfan interest and dollars.

It wasn't until 9 a.m. EDT Thursday, less than three days before the scheduled start of the NFL's regular season, that a strike by five NFL teams began to crumble and the pro football season emerged, at least temporarily, from potential chaos.

Sargent Karch, executive director of the NFL Management Council (NFLMC); Ed Garvey, Karch's union counterpart, and the government's top labor troubleshooter, W.J. Usery, head of the Federal Mediation and Conciliation Service, emerged from a marathon session in New York to announce they had reached a "memorandum of agreement."

Almost immediately New York Jets, one of the five striking teams, announced they would return to practice.

Three more striking teams—Washington Redskins, Detroit Lions and New York Giants—followed suit.

And shortly before 6 p.m., New England Patriots, who began the series of wildcat walkouts six days ago, said they would return to the practice field.

Although details of the "memorandum of agreement" never were officially announced, The Associated Press learned later Thursday they were based on a six-point proposal made after an all-night session Monday in Washington.

After a brief introduction in which the owners and union agreed it was in their best interests to come to an early solution to the deadlocked negotiations, the "memorandum of agreement" said that the owners and players agreed to the six-point proposal as amended at the 13-hour meeting.

The first point of the original six-point proposal said the Patriots' camp would be open by Sept. 16 for practice. That date was changed to Sept. 18.

The second point said there would be no lockout or strike from Sept. 16 through Oct. 1. Again the Sept. 16 date was changed to the 18th.

The third point said the NFLMC would make a new contract proposal by Sept. 25. That date was pushed up to Sept. 22.

The fourth and fifth points, which gave assurances of a rank-and-file vote and no lockout or strike until the vote was finished, remained the same.

The sixth point said no reprisals would be taken against any players for action taken before Sept. 16. That date was changed to the 18th.

After the final pact is put before the union, there will be three additional days of negotiations to iron out details. The contract will be presented to the players in its final form by Sept. 25.

They will have from Sept. 25 until Sept. 30 to complete their vote and then must announce that vote within 48 hours, or by Oct. 2, four days after the start of the second NFL weekend.

Management spokesman Terry Bledsoe said the controversial Rozelle Rule, which the union had refused to accept as a negotiable issue, would be included in the new pact.

Joe Robbie, managing general partner of the Miami Dolphins and a member of the NFLMC executive committee, said the rule would be modified, but it would still allow for compensation to teams for players leaving to play for another NFL team.

Jocks — When You Need 'Em They're Always There

For the last few years area sports fans have been treated to numerous extra - special games. There was the hockey game between the Syracuse Stars and the old Belleville McFarlands, a softball game between the Belleville Yardmen Ladies team and the Quinte Umpires Association and there's the baseball antics of the CJBQ Homers whenever they take the field.

All these presentations have been fun to put on, if not a put on to be funny. Another thing they all have in common is the reason for their creation. Each game was for the benefit of someone or something else. The Homers do their thing for a number of causes, the McFarland game was to assist the Goegan family and the umpires did their number for a compatriot — Bruce Nickle.

Jocks are quite often jeered at by those non-athletic supporters. Everyone that's ever been involved in sports in one way or another has probably fallen under some form of criticism simply because of ones sports oriented lifestyle.

But when someone needs support, when an athlete or his family is in need, the first ones to stand beside him are his fellow athletes. Such is the case with Saturday's exhibition football game. Tomorrow at 1.30 p.m. at Centennial Secondary School, the Senior Chargers are going to take on the highschool football players of years gone by. The whole thing is being presented to help out Frank Hubble, a former Bay of Quinte football player.

Frank lost his leg in a near fatal car accident early in the year. To get him back in the stream of life, some of his former teammates and a lot of the guys he played against are turning over the receipts of the game.

"We want to help Frank make any necessary adjustments," said one of the game's organizers, Greg Scarlett, "while we're not certain of everything that has to be done, we figure if we give him a few dollars he'll know what to do with it."

It's times like this when the cynics, — the people that knock sports and those involved in them — find it hard to argue their side. And even if they do, who cares. Those who play together, stay together, as is proven by tomorrow's football game. So the cynics might better be quiet anyway.

SLICES — Well folks, I guess this is what is referred to as the change in seasons — athletic seasons that is. And the whole change in our coverage area takes place this weekend. Before your very eyes, in the next few days, athletes will change their equipment in the Bay of Quinte region.

For example, the South Hastings Baseball League could close out its season this weekend. Latta leads Melrose 2-1 in their best-of-seven final and games are scheduled for Saturday and Sunday. The Belleville Industrial League officially hangs its gloves up on another season with the annual closing banquet Saturday night. Belleville Minor Softball Association is holding its closing day tomorrow and tonight, the Quinte Exhibition Raceway is holding its last card of the year.

Cycles that begin: — The Belleville Bobcats have their first home game of the year (an exhibition contest) against Whitby. Highschool soccer started yesterday and football just three days ago. OMHA tryout are on again Saturday and Sunday and Quinte Hockey League teams start their practices tonight.

Unlike the change in cycles of the year, seasons in sports have become just one big cycle with no apparent end.

Sport Briefs

ROME (AP) — China was voted in as a member of the International University Sports Federation Tuesday. Primo Nebiolo of Italy, who was re-elected federation president, confirmed that the federation's soccer championships will be held in Uruguay and the table tennis championships will be held in Israel, next year.

IRWIN WINS

HAMILTON (CP) — Tom Irwin of Moncton, N.B., shot rounds of 72 and 75 Tuesday to win the Canadian Professional Golfers' Association assistant pro tournament by four strokes. Irwin had a three-round total of 216 to pick up $1,000, an invitation to the 1976 CPGA tournament and an exemption into next year's Canadian Open. Pat O'Donnell of Kingsville, Ont., was second at 220 and Al Jensen of Ottawa, was third at 221. Harry Brotchie of Winnipeg, Brian Carberry of Victoria, Don Liska of Oakville, Ont., and Lars Melander were tied for fourth with three-round totals of 225.

Bob Shire (right) proudly displays the fruits of his labors on a recent fishing excursion on the Moira River. He and mate Slim Wheadon went out specifically for muskelunge and their catch only goes to prove the old proverb 'seek and thou shalt find' has a lot of truth to it. Shire hooked himself this 32 pound, 48 inch muskie in Laws Channel.

Bowlers Association Completes Major Split

In a move geared to make a more manageable operation possible, the Bay of Quinte Bowlers Association has been divided into two sections.

Heading up the newly formed Quinte South Bowlers' Association is Wally Knapp of Frankford. Elected at a Wednesday meeting at Belleville Brunswick Bowl, Knapp has been active in five-pin circles in Belleville and Trenton for several years.

Explaining that the decentralization idea would enable the two associations to have more equal representation on the governing body Knapp listed Belleville, Brighton, Picton, Trenton and Tweed as members of the Quinte South group.

Making up the other Bay of Quinte Zone are centres in Campbellford, Hastings, Havelock, Stirling and Springbrook. These communities will operate in the Trent Valley Bowlers' Association.

On hand at the meeting to represent the Ontario Bowling Congress (OBC) was that group's publicity director Walter Heaney of Toronto. He explained the benefits to be derived from membership in the OBC.

Representing Belleville Brunswick Bowl was manager Ron Swatuk; Belleville Bowl-O-Drome, manager Bob Sills; Picton Lanes, owner-manager Ron Darroch, D and A Lanes, Trenton, Wally Dance.

Elected to serve with Knapp on the Quinte South Association's executive were five bowling enthusiasts from Belleville and two from ton.

Belleville's Paul Taylor is vice-president; Sylvia Curry, secretary; Bea Hunt, treasurer; Madeline James, awards chairman, and Jim Nicholls, tournament director. Trenton is represented by Harold Stoddart, lanes certification, and Tom Irvine, scores recorder.

Efforts to increase membership in the new association are now under way.

Phil Tomsett Qualifies For Athletic Support

A young Belleville man with a winning skill for curling is among 30 Ontario students eligible for a special aid grant from the federal government.

He is Philip D. Tomsett, 94 Sidney St., now in his third year as an honors commerce student at Queen's University.

The grants are made by the health and welfare ministry to student athletes involved in non-Olympic sports and hockey. The program, initiated five years ago, was aimed at encouraging athletes to attend Canadian universities and to assist them in combining their educational and competitive sports careers.

University students are eligible to receive $1,800. Some 272 eligible students, representing 23 sports were named as eligible on the list that included Mr. Tomsett.

The Belleville student took up curling when his family moved to Gananoque for five years before returning to Belleville two years ago.

He was a member of the rink that won the 1973 all-Canada schoolboy's curling championship and played second on the group that won the university curling trophy last year.

While resident in Bellevile, he attended St. Michael's Academy and Nicholson senior school.

Devils Nip Trojans

Weather Weakens Squads Scoring Punch

Weather was the big factor in Bay of Quinte highschool football games Thursday as teams found themselves almost entirely limited to ground action by the rain.

At Bayside, the Red Devils offence snuck in an extra point on Vic Podmilsak's 30 yard boot into the end zone and held on for a 7-6 victory over Centennail Senior Chargers.

In Thursday's junior contest, Moria Trojans travelled to Madoc, but came back empty handed as the Centurions put together a second half rally for a 20-12 win.

"We were a little surprised by the outcome," said BSS coach, Gord Smith, "we expected to score more points, but considering the weather it was almost impossible."

Smith's Red Devils mounted a 6-0 lead when Rick Hodgson ran a quarterback option around the end for 15 yards and touchdown. Later in the contest the home squad moved in front 7-0 as Podmilsak drilled the ball into the CSS end zone.

The Chargers bounced back with a TD from quarterback Rob DeJong with only a few minutes remaining in the game and decided to go for a two point conversion. The pass into the Bayside end was incomplete. Centennial then attempted an onside kick. That attempt was good and with th clock running down, the Chargers began to move the ball down field.

However, as fate would have it, the visitors fumbled the ball, Bayside recovered and ran out the clock.

Madoc Junior Centurions made their football debut in the Bay of Quinte League a smashing success. This is the first year the Centre Hastings School has entered a junior squad in the highschool league. They opened their schedule at home and keyed by tailback Kelly Welch's two touchdowns, overcame a 12-7 half time deficit to the delight of the fans.

Wayne Willemsem added the other major for the victors and Lewis Gaylord counted a pair of singles.

Dave Bennett, Moira's quarterback, scored one of his teams TD's and directed right halfback Jeff. Runciman into the end zone on a 40 yard sweep for the other.

IN MEMORIAM

DODDS, Maxwell — In loving memory of a dear father and grandfather who passed away Sept. 19, 1974.

In tears we saw you sinking.
We watched you fade away.
Our hearts were almost broken,
You fought so hard to stay,
But when we saw you sleeping,
So peacefully free from pain,
We could not wish you back,
To suffer that again.

—Sadly missed by daughter Donna, son-in-law Albert and family.

ADAMS — In loving memory of a dear father and grandfather Gordon Nelson who passed away September 19th, 1972.

Two tired eyes are sleeping,
Two willing hands are still,
For one who suffered far too much,
Is resting in God's will,
You never said goodbye to me,
Perhaps it's just as well,
I never could have said goodbye,
To one I loved so well.

—Sadly missed and always remembered by daughter Melody, son-in-law Edward and granddaughter Suzanne.

REID — In loving memory of a dear son Clare Reid who passed away Sept. 19, 1972.

—Always remembered and sadly missed by Mom, Dad, brothers and sisters.

ADAMS, Gordon Nelson — In loving memory of a dear father and grandfather Gordon Nelson Adams who passed away September 19, 1972.

Our family circle has been broken,
A link gone from our chain,
But though we're parted for a while,
We know we'll meet again.
Some day we hope to meet you,
Some day we know not when,
We shall meet in a better land,
Never to part again.

—Always remembered by daughter Fran, son-in-law Al and grandchildren.

Your Horoscope

Bernice Bede Osol

Saturday, Sept. 20

ARIES (March 21-April 19) If you have something important to do, play a lone hand today. Getting others into the act could spoil everything.

TAURUS (April 20-May 20) You can dictate your terms in business dealings today. The one you're negotiating with may try to bluff a little, but he's holding deuces, not aces.

GEMINI (May 21-June 20) Enjoyment comes for you at a large gathering today. Shun the lone wolf who wants to drag you off in a corner. Appreciate the whole group.

CANCER (June 21-July 22) This could be a great day if you associate with prestigious people. It's an excellent time to hobnob with the boss in surroundings away from the office.

LEO (July 23-Aug. 22) Today you're programmed to deal with big ideas. Tackle major projects you've had on the back burner. Don't get bogged down in trivia.

VIRGO (Aug. 23-Sept. 22) In a situation where you have a vested interest, you stand to benefit if you sit back and let the other party take over today.

LIBRA (Sept. 23-Oct. 23) You have a valuable ally of long standing. He'll be very much in evidence when you need help today. Seek his advice on an important decision.

SCORPIO (Oct. 24-Nov. 22) Your performance is at a superior level today. Those around you will be a trifle envious at the ease and efficiency with which you handle things.

SAGITTARIUS (Nov. 23-Dec. 21) While some may feel your actions are on the flamboyant or risky side, you'll use past experience to do seemingly difficult tasks easily.

CAPRICORN (Dec. 22-Jan. 19) Don't give out too much information on your intimate affairs today to one who is only curious and could do nothing to help even if he knew all the facts.

AQUARIUS (Jan. 20-Feb. 19) It's admirable to be fair in dealings with your mate or close companion, but avoid conceding more than you need to thus short-changing yourself.

PISCES (Feb. 20-March 20) You were prudent enough to lay something aside for a rainy day. Don't yield to temptation and blow your small surplus on a whim.

By Oswald and James Jacoby

Paul Cromelin shows todays hand as an example of what happens when beginners play hands that have not been specially South's jumps to two spades was correct in expert standard American bidding, but most beginners would just bid one spade. However, four spades was the normal contract to reach.

Paul explains typical student's play by South cashing dummy's ace, king of diamonds and ace of clubs; leading a spade to the 10 ruffling a club; drawing trumps with a second finesse; ruffing a diamond with dummy's [illegible] trump; leading a heart to the queen; losing two hearts and a diamond and exulting, "I made it."

The principle of play he taught from the hand was that in general you should work on your longest side suit. It is hearts, so at trick two South should lead the nine of spades, let it ride, draw trumps and lead a heart toward dummy's king.

Then a heart back toward his hand with the low heart, not the queen being played. This is the so-called automatic finesse and succeeds since West must play the ace. After this start South makes six, not a mere four.

Ask the Jacobys

From Florida:
My partner opens one spade. What should I do with:
♠ Q 6 5 ♥ 3 2 ♦ A 7 6 5 ♣ J 9 4 3

Raise him to two spades. If he can't make two spades the hand belongs to your opponents. You may have shut them out. If he has a really good hand he can bid on and your support should be enough for him.

Drugs Treat Hyperkinesis

By G. C. THOSTESON, MD

Dear Dr. Thosteson: Please explain what hyperactiveness is. How can you tell if a child is hyperactive? What should be done for them? What are the dangers?—Mrs. C. K.

I could list dozens of symptoms of the truly hyperkinetic child, and to no avail. There are subtle differences between the exuberance of youth and hyperkinesis, which is a neurological disorder.

A frustrated mother or a temperamental teacher may easily dub the child as hyperactive when it is not. The diagnosis should be made by someone experienced in abnormal behavior in children.

The hyperactive child is restless, has trouble paying attention (which creates his learning difficulties), has problems with speech. He may exhibit traits which, in a one-to-one relationship, can be considered charming but in a group situation can be considered anti-social. He is apt to be clumsy, restless, a disturber of classroom atmosphere.

But all of this can easily be attributable to family problems—discord between parents, too strict discipline, etc.

Other physiological factors can be involved—diet among them. He may be just hungry. Eating patterns should be examined. Or he may be allergic to something, making him irritable.

It is well to begin with a complete physical examination and an analysis of the home situation. Counselling by a child psychologist or a psychiatrist might or might not be indicated.

If confirmed as true hyperkinesis, then drugs available in treatment of the disorder might be considered. Often, such drugs can be used in making a final determination. If behavior improves with the drugs, true hyperkinesis can be confirmed.

But the parent must be certain that what he or she sees as hyperkinesis is real and not merely "in the eye of the beholder."

Dear Dr. Thosteson: My husband has been suffering with hiatal hernia along with a heart condition.

This makes it difficult sometimes to tell which is which. He's been told is chest pains are due to the hernia and not to his heart.—A. J. D.

The pain associated with hiatal hernia (which is, as you know, a problem of the esophagus at the point where it passes through the diaphragm toward a connection with the stomach) can mimic several other disorders. Heart disease and gall bladder problems are but two.

There is no way I can describe to you the differences in pain associated with either condition your husband has had diagnosed. There are many methods, however, of ruling out heart-caused pains. If your husband's heart problem is thought to be under control through medication, then logically one must assume that the pain he experiences is from the hiatal hernia.

But differentiating between the causes of such pain remains one of the toughest assignments a physician confronts.

Dear Dr. Thosteson: I am an 18-year-old girl with a quite embarrassing problem. I have enlarged breasts. I've heard that this can be altered with a simple operation in a doctor's office. Is this true?—B. P.

Reduction of truly hypertrophied breasts (those two to four times normal size for body frame) can be undertaken where the size creates real medical or psychological problems.

Such operations are considered major in the sense that they require the skills of an experienced plastic surgeon. One would not be performed in a doctor's office.

Also, you should be certain that the problem is not related to general obesity. In the hands of a skilful surgeon, results of such operations have been quite successful.

RCMP Investigates Corporate Fraud

By GERARD McNEILL

(RP) — The 329 RCMP officers in the commercial crime section are more at home with pocket calculators than pistols, more at ease with briefcases than those broad-rimmed hats.

They are the first policemen in Canadian history with the time, money and training to investigate high-level corporate and bureaucratic fraud and corruption.

They are working on 2,600 cases that last year involved $206 million in losses to the public.

"That's the tip of the iceberg," says Supt. Henry (Hank) Jensen, interviewed in his small office in the former Ottawa seminary that is RCMP headquarters.

"Does white-collar crime pay? I hate to admit it but I think it does. Of that $206 million, we recovered $16.5 million for investors.

"In terms of penalties, these people get a much better break than those involved in burglary or theft."

NEW TO DOCK

Perhaps that's because ground is being broken not only in investigation but in the courtroom, where big business is a relative newcomer.

Neither the Criminal Code nor the Bankruptcy Act has been changed significantly in the last eight years but they are the main RCMP instruments of prosecution.

"It has been strictly enforcement of the law," said Supt. Jensen, who noted that the law was rarely applied in a significant way in the first century of Confederation to the "plainclothes criminal"—the description given business criminals by the law reform commission.

This month, Supt. Jensen, 41, left the commercial crime section he organized to spend a year at the National Defence College in Kingston, Ont. Those selected to attend are usually being groomed for higher posts.

Insp. D. K. Wilson, 40, who is in charge of the RCMP's legal branch, succeeds him as head of the commercial crime section. Insp. Wilson also is a member of a commission, under Judge Rene Marin, inquiring into the internal procedures of the RCMP and is helping to draft a report that probably will lead to sharp changes in the force.

He is as excited as Jensen about the potential of the commercial crime section.

"What we're doing now is just scratching the surface," he said.

Supt. Jensen, a native of Ridgetown, Ont., joined the RCMP when he was 18 and went from rural routine to detective work, investigating drug offences, burglaries, safe-crackings, before studying commerce at the University of Alberta in the early 1960s. The emphasis then was on the administrative needs of the force and the young commerce graduate might have wound up in the payroll office at headquarters.

However, the resounding crash of Atlantic Acceptance Corp. in 1965 caught the attention of governments. Atlantic was caught $110 million short, 60 per cent of the money being owed to United States investors.

The Atlantic collapse shook the economy. Foreign investors were so leery of Canada that sales finance companies had trouble raising money.

The Bank of Canada expanded the money supply to help the country's chartered banks meet a 17-per-cent increase in loans, an inflationary measure that affected virtually everyone in Canada.

Workers Trained For Retirement

TORONTO (CP) — A number of Canadian workers are being trained for retirement.

Robert Reneaud of the personnel division of the Chrysler Corp. in Windsor, Ont., says: "We try to impress on the workers the advantages of thinking about retirement almost from the day they begin working."

Chrysler and United Auto Workers (UAW), among those who have developed early retirement programs, have a joint pre-retirement program covering finances, investment, health matters, housing, legal affairs and good use of leisure time.

Many workers are retiring before the traditional retirement age of 65 as the UAW-auto industry "30 and out" retirement provision allows workers with 30 years' service to retire at 55.

Participation in the pre-retirement course, developed in 1960 with the help of the University of Michigan, is voluntary. Interest in the program has increased as more workers have become aware "that there is a whole new life out there," Mr. Reneaud said.

Charles McDonald, director of the UAW's retired workers department in Canada, says workers mainly are preoccupied with financial matters when they start the course but interests later broaden.

Lawrence Crawford, director of the office of aging in the Ontario ministry of community and social services, said pre-retirement counselling may make the difference between rewarding years and problem years.

David Watt of the YMCA Centre for Counselling and Human Relations said: "It's amazing how many people there are who have no plans or goals for their retirement years."

The Ontario government's office on aging has been conducting a study since 1958 to determine middle-aged employees' attitudes toward retirement.

Results of interviews with study subjects show that the number of persons with positive attitudes to retirement increased in the six years between the ages 48 and 54.

Attitudes to leisure time also changed. More men thought staying home agreeable when they were 54 than they did when 48.

More than half of the subjects, however, found three aspects of retirement disagreable—staying at home no regular routine and loss of contact with people.

Brothers Take Sides On Egg Dilemma

KINGSVILLE, Ont. (CP) — The egg-marketing dilemma has put a crack in the relationship of brothers Stan and Floyd Johnson.

The two epitomize the division existing among Ontario egg producers.

Floyd supports the Ontario Egg Producers Marketing Board, the board's production quota system of 62 per cent and a six-cent levy on every dozen eggs.

"Stan says I'm crazy for believing in them, but if I'm so crazy then why am I getting so much money from the system?" Floyd asks.

His brother contends that the system will eventually put the small producers out of business.

After 25 years as an egg producer near this community 28 miles southeast of Windsor, Stan says the levy and quotas are intended to assist the large producer instead of protecting the small farmer.

The farmer with a small flock faces a sizable loss in his market with the production quotas cut to 82 per cent on Sept. 1, while the wealthier farmer will be able to shoulder the change with ease, Stan said.

The quota system was to prevent huge surpluses, caused by large producers, he added.

"We've never had a surplus. We're producing eggs to meet market demands and now our quotas have been cut so we can't produce enough."

Stan also finds the levies unfair.

"If you have 100,000 hens, you pay six cents a dozen and if you have 500 hens, you pay six cents," he pointed out.

Floyd disagrees: "If the guy has only 500 hens and he's told to cut back, sure he'll be out of business but he's not simply an egg producer. He's got something else going for him."

Floyd, who lives across the road from his brother, has been an egg producer for 16 years.

"If it wasn't for the egg board, I wouldn't be in the business today," Floyd said.

Since the board was formed in 1970 after an egg price dip, Floyd has been able to buy a new car, tractor and egg grader and to build a new egg room.

Stan has refused to pay his levies since the beginning of the year and argues the board does not benefit the smaller producer who grades and markets his own eggs.

On the other hand, Floyd said the price protection is worth the six-cent levy since the board sets the price.

The tax enables the board to function "for your benefit and I know it does," Floyd said.

Stripes Deter Sharks

PHILADELPHIA, Pa. (CP) — After months of research off the Australian coast, researchers believe a brightly-striped bathing suit would deter sharks from attacking. William Dunson, professor of biology at Pennsylvania State University said sharks have never been known to attack the sea snake, a brightly striped ocean reptile.

Germ Warfare Diseases Kill Three U.S. Civilian Workers

WASHINGTON (AP) — The United States Army acknowledges that three civilian employees—a microbiologist, an electrician and an animal caretaker—were killed within a 13-year period by diseases contracted while working at the Biological Warfare Laboratory at Ft. Detrick, Md.

Two of the men died of anthrax, a fatal infection usually caught from cattle or sheep, and the other from a virus which caused an epidemic in Bolivia.

The three were identified as Dr. William Boyles, Joel Eugene Willard and Albert Nickel.

Details of the deaths in 1951, 1958 and 1964 were contained in an army memo made public Friday by Representative Thomas Downey (Dem. N.Y.), a member of the House of Representatives armed services committee.

Until then-President Richard Nixon disavowed germ warfare as a potential instrument of U.S. foreign policy, Ft. Detrick was the centre for military research on the deadly variety of warfare.

The army said none of those who died had participated in experimental human volunteer programs, but rather were regular employees at Ft. Detrick, in Frederick, Md., about 40 miles north of Washington.

The unsigned memo found in Pentagon files said Boyles, the microbiologist, died Nov. 25, 1951, after contracting anthrax of the lungs.

Two newspapers in Frederick were told that he died of acute bronchial pneumonia and his death certificate initially listed pneumonia with gastric ulceration and hemorrhage.

Following a final autopsy in January, 1952, attempts were made to add anthrax as a cause of death to ensure occupational death benefits for the victim's family.

After Willard, the electrician, died on July 5, 1958, the army memo said officials at Ft. Detrick and the Frederick County Public Health Office decided not to make public disclosure of the real cause of death, also anthrax.

"After discussion of the security aspects, it was decided the death certificate would specify anthrax as the cause of death and the newspaper release would specify occupational death from respiratory disease," the memo said.

As in the other two cases, the electrician's illness originally was diagnosed by a private physician as unrelated to his work.

His doctor initially suspected a routine virus and prescribed aspirin. He died five days later in the Ft. Detrick hospital.

Nickel, an animal caretaker, became ill on Jan. 26, 1964, and the next day reported to an out-patient clinic. He complained of severe diarrhea, vomiting and headache, and was treated by a private doctor.

The doctor prescribed some medication which helped, the army memo said, and for the next several days his illness was not believed to be related to his job at the secret, high-security installation.

He died at 1:25 a.m. Feb. 10, 1964, but his family was not notified until nearly 12 hours later, the army said.

The cause of death was listed as Bolivian hemorrhagic fever, a disease then causing a serious epidemic in Bolivia.

The army said federal research on the disease was being done at the request of the U.S. Public Health Service.

A member of Downey's staff said details on how the men died were provided by the army only after extensive delays and a visit to Ft. Detrick.

After news appeared this week that the Central Intelligence Agency maintained a store of deadly poisons, the staff member said Downey gave the army an ultimatum to deliver the information he sought within 24 hours. Army officials complied late Friday, he said.

A Matter of Choice

For some, the question of what university is best suited to the individual's needs is easily answered. But, for the majority help is needed. Here, Centennial Secondary School guidance counsellor Sid Allcorn discusses the possibilities of a particular university with senior student Marilyn Williams. A day-long program to help solve student and parent problems will be held by 16 Ontario universities next Tuesday at the education centre on Ann St.

University Day Planned For Area High Schoolers

By COLIN BRUCE
Staff Reporter

Ontario's 16 universities will be represented in Belleville Tuesday to meet with senior high school students drawn from the length and breadth of Hastings and Prince Edward Counties.

More than 1,000 students are expected to take advantage of the opportuniy to meet with university officials — a preparatory step before individuals chose what schools they would like to continue their education next fall. The day-long program is being organized by the association of county school guidance counsellors.

At least two representatives from each university will attend the function — arranged by local organizers as "three-pronged" approach, said Centennial Secondary school counsellor Sid Allcorn. During the morning, each high school will be visited by two universities. Simultaneously, university life will be discussed on the morning open line show on CJBQ. In the evening, students and parents are invited to attend a mass exhibit of all the universities at the education centre on Ann St.

"Don't send your child — bring him is a good motto for the day," said Mr. Allcorn. The sessions will give parents a prime opportunity to clear up any unanswered questions.

The education centre segment of the day will begin at 7:30 p.m. and is schedulled to conclude at 10 p.m.

"It is a most important day for students who intend going on past high school," said Mr. Allcorn. "Considering the amount of money a student will invest in three years of university, the choice of which he will attend will probably be the biggest decision the student has ever made."

Because universities must know well in advance what it can project for the following year's enrollment, students must have a clear idea of what course and what schools they would like to attend by December.

"Programs where students can find out a lot of the answers are not used enough by either the student or the parent," said Mr. Allcorn. "We always get people coming back in November asking us the questions they should be asking the universities directly, right now."

Each student — after seeing what the different universities have to offer — is allowed to make three choices of schools in their order of preference. By June 4, a student will be notified if he has been accepted and has a maximum of two weeks to notify which school of his three choices he has decided to attend.

Fire Chief Against Relaxing Standards

By HARRY MULHALL
Staff Reporter

The city's fire chief has recommended against exempting a high-rise apartment developer from the city's fire-sprinkler bylaw.

Chief Leo Culhane gives the opinion in a letter scheduled to come before city council Monday night.

Council deferred action on the request — from Creson Developments — two weeks ago. Creson plans a 10-storey apartment on the east side of Palmer Road.

The developer said an Ontario building code — which would supersede municipal building ordinances — was in the process of being approved. But time lost in the interval would raise the cost of the project.

The request is among items up for decision when council holds its regular session. These include a bylaw authorizing $100,000 in expenditures for downtown parking facilities by the city's parking authority. Councillors balked at passing the measure two weeks ago until they received more information.

PM Takes Tour

OTTAWA (CP) — Prime Minister Trudeau made it official Friday: He and Mrs. Trudeau will visit Venezuela, Mexico and Cuba Jan. 23 to Feb. 1.

In a statement the prime minister announced that he is making the trip at the invitation of Presidents Luis Echeverria of Mexico, Carlos Andres Perez of Venezuela and Prime Minister Fidel Castro of Cuba.

Waters Receding

Prairie Town Flood Ruins Grain Crop

DAUPHIN, Man. (CP) — Floodwaters were receding in this western Manitoba community of 10,000 early today following a sudden, one-day inundation considered one of the worst in living memory.

The Vermilion River was about 1½ feet below its crest by midnight Friday night, while power and telephone services, out for nearly five hours in some parts of the town, began to return to normal.

But services in the nearby towns of Ochre River and Ste. Anne were on an emergency basis, as sandbags and pumps continued to arrive.

All highways leading into the area were closed by the floods, hampering relief efforts. Schools and businesses were closed, freeing—townspeople for volunteer sandbag duty.

Hardest-hit neighboring communities were Ste. Rose du Lac, Ochre River, Laurier and McCreary.

About 10 families in Ochre River were evacuated from their homes, but no one was injured as a result of the flooding

Dauphin Mayor Andrew Newton warned residents of his town and surrounding communities to boil all drinking water.

No official assessment of damages was available but dozens of basements were flooded, streets and highways covered with water, and services interrupted.

In the countryside, swathed but unharvested grain from countless acres of cropland was swept away and thousands of tons of hay—much of it put up months ago but standing in fields—were rendered worthless.

Tom Pringle, northwest region director for the Manitoba department of agriculture, describing the Westlake area east of here, said:

"I think you could call it a wipe-out of forage crops and grain crops from here on in. I doubt farmers will be back to the crops until freeze-up, and then it'll be too late."

Immediate cause of the floods was the three inches of rain that fell earlier in the week, coupled with about an inch Thursday night and Friday. Though not normally too much for the soils, ditches and rivers to absorb, it proved too much for ground already saturated from the above-normal precipitation of recent weeks.

The weather forecast for today was for a continuation of drizzly, moist conditions with some relief in sight by Sunday.

UN Strength In Jeopardy

UNITED NATIONS (AP) — The United States, under heavy attack for grouping UN membership for South Korea and the Hanoi and Saigon Communist regimes into a single issue, has warned that "the United Nations will die if it does not remain representative."

U.S. Ambassador Daniel Moynihan made the statement Friday night after the General Assembly voted 123 to 0 to ask the Security Council to "reconsider immediately and favorably" UN admission for North and South Vietnam.

The two Communist governments were vetoed by the U.S. on Aug. 11 in retaliation for the Security Council's refusal to take up South Korea's application.

Nine countries including the U.S. abstained on the assembly request, which the Security Council may take up as early as next Monday.

Friday's vote came after a series of speeches variously accusing the U.S. of vindictiveness and lack of generosity and of using the Korean issue as a pretext for denying UN membership to the two regimes that defeated Saigon and American troops in the recent war.

Speakers included the UN observers of North and South Vietnam, the first time diplomats of non-member countries were allowed to address the assembly. Both said their desire for good relations with the American people had been spurned by the U.S.

Moynihan repeated the U.S. policy stated at the time of the August vetoes that "the United States is not opposed to the admission of the two Vietnamese states, but we are not prepared to agree to their admission as part of a practice of selective admissions by which the Republic of Korea is excluded."

Party Principles Come First: Lewis

TORONTO (CP) — The Ontario NDP leader, Stephen Lewis, said Friday his party will risk another quick election if necessary rather than abandon principles if fought for in the provincial election campaign.

"I'm not entering (minority government) in a hostile or belligerent frame of mind," he told reporters after the NDP won 38 of 125 seats Thursday, indicating the NDP will succeed the Liberals as the official Opposition.

Premier William Davis, who saw his Progressive Conservative government plummet to a minority of 51 seats, knows the NDP attitude on crucial issues, Mr. Lewis said.

"I presume he will want to respond with legislative action."

He cautioned reporters, however, against comparing the NDP finish—two seats more than the Liberals—with the balance-of-power federal NDP showing in 1972.

"They were still the third party . . . The most exciting thing for us is the official Opposition position."

He said this will give the NDP a chance to point out government flaws and take alternate positions without necessarily being labelled obstructionists.

"My approach is very simply one of good faith . . . What we can support, we will; what we can't, we won't."

Patty Hearst Bail Witheld Until Jury Polled

SAN FRANCISCO (AP) — Patricia Hearst's lawyers must convince a doubting judge their client can be trusted not to flee if she is released on bail.

The newspaper heiress was taken back to her cell in the San Mateo County Jail in Redwood City following a federal court hearing here Friday where her $500,000 bail on a bank robbery charge was revoked and she was held without bail.

The FBI, meanwhile, said it was fingerprints in a Pennsylvania farmhouse that led to the capture of Miss Hearst and two other members of the Symbionese Liberation Army (SLA) terrorist band.

U.S. District Judge Oliver Carter set Tuesday for further hearings on bail after U.S. Attorney James Browning told him: "There are no conditions of release that will assure Miss Hearst's future appearance before this court." Carter described her as a someone who had "announced to the world with others their revolution against the system" and had "then punctuated it with gunfire."

Defence lawyer Terence Hallinan said Miss Hearst would plead not guilty and was prepared to promise the judge she would not flee if released.

Miss Hearst, 21, was arrested Thursday with Wendy Yoshimura, 32, who was turned over to Alameda County, Calif., authorities on charges of possessing explosives. About an hour earlier, agents arrested SLA members William and Emily Harris.

An FBI source in Philadelphia said agents first picked up the cross-country trail that led to the arrests when they unexpectedly found Miss Yoshimura's fingerprints in a Pennsylvania farmhouse early this year.

The source said Miss Yoshimura hid out near Atlantic City, N.J., sometime in 1973 in the home of Stephen Soliah, 27, a housepainter. He was arrested Thursday on charges of harboring Miss Hearst and Miss Yoshimura in a San Francisco house.

An FBI spokesman in San Francisco said agents were seeking Soliah's sister, Kathy, for questioning "in connection with the Hearst case."

Miss Soliah was a friend of Angela Atwood, one of six SLA members killed in a May 1974 shootout with Los Angeles police. Miss Soliah also paid several visits to a friend of Miss Yoshimura, Willie Brandt, who is in Soledad Prison on a conviction of possessing explosives.

In revoking bail, Carter said he sympathized with Miss Hearst's parents, renounced by their daughter when she joined the SLA in April, 1974, two months after she was abducted by the band.

"Any of us who have been parents knows what this means on the heartstrings," he said. "It's putting them on the torture post."

Randolph Hearst, president of the San Francisco Examiner, sat with his wife Catherine and three of their daughters in the front row of the packed courtroom during the hearing, gazing intently at Patricia.

The Hearsts said that in a prison reunion Thursday night, Patricia told them she loved them and wanted to come home.

Besides Tuesday's bail hearing, Carter set Sept. 29 for a preliminary hearing on other matters facing Miss Hearst, who is wanted in Los Angeles on a federal firearms violation and 19 state charges. Bail there has been set at a total of $1 million.

Browning told the court that Miss Hearst had a loaded .38-calibre pistol in her purse when arrested. He said she told officers where to find two carbines in a closet of her residence.

Browning also said the government plans to use Miss Hearst's own tape recorded messages about her conversion to revolutionary ideology in its case against her.

Stephens-Adamson Plans Major Push

W. R. Vaughan

Larry Bronson

Belleville's Stephens — Adamson firm is making an all-out push to break into the world market — an effort marked this week by the announcements of three major foreign trade missions.

During the past year the local firm has been actively expanding its foreign trade connections and announced Friday key personnel will leave on trade missions to the Soviet Union and Amsterdam in the first week of November. Earlier this week the company also announced it will participate in a trade mission to the Peoples Republic of China.

Marine Division manager W.R. Vaughan and Jack Hanna leave for Amsterdam Nov. 8 as part of the government-picked Canadian delegation to Europort '75.

Larry Bronson will leave for Moscow Nov. 7 in the first trade mission of its kind to the Soviet Union. Allis-Chalmers Ltd. — the American parent of Stephens-Adamson — was bound by U.S. legislation which forbade dealings with iron curtain countries. Trade agreements since have been signed between the two countries opening the doors for exchange of goods and services.

While Allis-Chalmers will present an overview of its entire operation to Soviet officials, the Belleville firm is expected to be the centre of Russian interest.

The Soviet are embarking on a massive road building program scheduled over seven years. The majority of the equipment needed for transportation of crushed gravel and road building materials is produced by the Belleville plant, said Mr. Bronson.

Europort '75 to be held in Amsterdam is where Stephens-Adamson will promote its off-shore product potential. Mr. Vaughan said self-unloaders which unload a cargo vessel automatically with no help from shore will take prominence in the exhibit.

Mr. Vaughan said the firm is looking particularly at the super freighters which cannot enter some European ports because of their size. Self unloaders can enable cargo transfer from the super tanker to more conventional sized vessels before port is reached.

"We have to expand into this world market — particularly aiming at third world countries — if we are to grow", said Mr. Lewis explaining the foreign market push.

Driver Charged After Two-car Collision

MADOC — A 42-year-old Trenton man has been charged with careless driving in connection with a two-car collision Friday on Highway 62 at the Madoc boat launch on Moira Lake just south of this village.

Ontario Provincial Police at Madoc identified the man today as Alexahder Jackson, the new postmaster at Madoc.

Police said a 1970 — model car driven by Shirley Hagerman, 35, of RR 5, Madoc was stopped on the highway, waiting to make a left turn when it was involved in a rear-end collision with a 1971 — model car.

Police said the second vehicle had been travelling at a high rate of speed on slippery pavement and skidded.

Constable Bill Haggerty estimated $200 damage to the second car and $75 damage to the Hagerman vehicle in the 5:10 p.m. mishap.

Education Beat

Best Forget Departmentals

By RON CARSON
Staff Reporter

For those over 25 the mention of Grade 13 departmental examinations still strikes terror in the heart

They were as much a part of high school as smelly lockers and boring 3:15 announcements that so often pressured students into exiting from school as soon as possible thus accounting for the smelly lockers. For better or worse they were abandoned in 1967 by the ministry of education.

Departmentals were the glorious test. If a student managed to survive and pass them he or she somehow entered a new phase in adulthood. The dawn of success and happiness was just around the corner.

The ritual started in Grade 12 when everyone knew there would be something different about next year. By the fall of Grade 13 teachers would immediately set the mood "we're going to try and prepare you for them but most of it is up to you." As if something much larger than the system was about to set mammoth tests.

It was always rumored and never denied that the province was determined to fail 20 per cent of the papers and that 80 per cent of the students would somehow have the knowledge and skill to conquer.

So it was only a matter of picking out one slow learner in a group of five students nearby you and your chances of passing were quite good. However, that didn't always work because no one knew if the 20 per cent failure rate varied from school to school or town to town.

When the departmentals were abolished the purists cried out that marks would be contaminated and that universities would have no way of determining the creme de la creme of that year's crop. The standards of Ontario scholars were also supposed to drop but then so did the monetary value of them, so who cares.

Today after eight years a few of those who survived claim departmentals should be brought back because they made students tough and worthy of bigger and better things.

Of course the not-do-well remembered aspects of departmentals are that the examinations emotionally crippled some students who were achievers in their own ways. They left scars on some students because of the year-long preparation and anticipation.

It may have made evaluation more difficult for universities but then in view of changes in the 70s these institutions of higher learning aren't too particular now anyway.

The people it did hurt were the hundreds of teachers who made an extra buck during the summer marking these papers for at least six weeks

The abolishing of the departmentals was a blessing and a step in the right direction for the ministry of education.

Goat Popularity On Rise: Breeder

Goats are good for you.

That's one reason their future is growing faster than some goats can graze, indicates Bob Lough.

Mr. Lough should know. The herd he maintains on his Avonlough Rd. property just west of Belleville proves that. Mr. Lough is a major breeder of goats — operating a hobby that grew into a spare-time business, now one of the biggest east of Toronto to the Quebec border.

Goats, one of the oldest species of husbandry animals, have a short history in Canada, where they've tended to eb regarded almost as the eccentrics of the barnyard.

But that is changing, says Mr. Lough.

One indication of demand is that prices have tripled in six years he says.

In the United States where there's "extremely high demand" and goats came earlier on the scene, prices for a good specimen have gone as high as $1,000.

"Which isn't bad for a little animal two-and-a-half feet tall," says Mr. Lough.

Goats supply food, need little space for browsing — and can be good pets.

Aside from growing popularity as show animals says Mr. Lough, goats also are being sought for more practical purposes.

— There's been an increase in people moving to the country who'd like to be more self-suppicient, have a food-producing animal around, that's also a handy size. The goat, with its milk, is an obvious answer.

— Goat's milk. The emphasis on health foods focused attention on the special qualities of goat milk. It's completely homogenized — the cream doesn't separate as in cow's milk — and its cholesterol and sodium content are nil. Easily digestible, It's good for babies, or adults with heart and other conditions. Butter and cheese also may be made from it.

A good goat will average four quarts of milk daily — and milking is one of the chores around the Lough household.

To the tastebuds there's little difference from cow's milk except it may be sweeter, says Mr. Lough.

In health food stores it sells for about $1.25 a quart. But going commercial means the milk must be pasteurized according to milk marketing standards.

Yet in Quebec, they've solved the problem by forming a co-operative, and selling bulk milk for cheese manufacture in Montreal.

Locally, members of the Eastern Ontario Goat Society — which meets in Belleville — have been discussing a similar possibility, says Mr. Lough.

And goat's meat also tastes like lamb — another reason some people raise the animals.

Mr. Lough, production developer manager for Allied Chemical in Belleville, has been breeding pedigree, registered stock for eight years.

Ellis Seeking Views On Ottawa Development

Have any thoughts on the shape of things to come for Ottawa?

Submit them to Jack Ellis MP Hastings, or the committee on the national capital region, which will start hearings early next month.

The committee is to consider and sound out Canadians on whether the federal government should create a separate region in the Ottawa area distinct from local government.

Made up mostly of MPs with municipal experience — Mr. Ellis is a former mayor of Belleville — the committee starts hearings Oct. 3 and will also travel across Canada.

Mr. Ellis said he personally feels the majority of Canadians would prefer the national capital be planned and administered as a separate entity from municipal government.

He said such a move would be an advance toward creating a "proper setting" for the nation's capital city.

Currently high-rise development close to Parliament Hill "doesn't do justice" to the federal layout.

"I would like to see something different than the present regional municipal setup," said Mr. Ellis.

However, he was not prepared at this point to suggest alternatives.

The committee is anxious to obtain as many suggestions as possible.

"I don't know how many people in this area realize they could have a say," said Mr. Ellis. "I'd personally be happy to hear from them."

The committee can be reached by mail care at the House of Commons.

Cow, Car Collide

MADOC — A 42-year-old Queensboro man has been charged with failure to report an accident in connection with a car-cow collision early Friday on the Madoc Public School Rd. one mile east of Highway 62.

Ontario Provincial Police at Madoc indentified the man today as James Devolin.

Police said the collision occurred at about 3 a.m. between a 1973 — model car and the cow owned by Robert Curtis of RR 1, Madoc. The cow was slightly injured.

Goat Grooming

Robert Lough gives coat of prized buck goat a swift brushover. The hefty animan is among pedigree herd raised by the Avonlough Road man for breeding stock as, he says, demand for goats grows in Canada.

Eye-catching Tractors Made from Scrap Metal

By CLIFF KENYON
Staff Reporter

Most people take scrap metal to a dealer, but not John Croskery. He builds tractors.

"I've built a lot of stuff in my day," said Mr. Croskery, a retired construction machinery mechanic and now a member of the Eastern Ontario Steam and Antique Association.

He spent Wednesday exercising the larger of his two home-made tractors at the Hastings County Plowing Match held at Glenn Morrow's farm south of Stirling.

"It's a great attraction and a great past-time," said Mr. Croskery of Marmora.

The tractor which fits in the back of a pickup truck is powered by a seven horsepower 1918 Fairbanks and Morse engine.

The steering wheel, transmission and rear end are parts of an old pickup truck.

"The rest is scrap iron put together," he said. He built the tractor about four years ago.

The compressed air starting system, which he designed himself, attracted crowds of onlookers as the compact tractor spluttered and hissed before the engine fired belching black smoke out the exhaust.

He also designed the engine's automatic drip oiler.

"I've got a head for figuring things out."

Mr. Croskery has taken the tractor to five fairs or plowing matches this year. He's used it to cut and skid logs and crush rocks. In winter he attaches a snow plow.

Mr. Croskery, who said he was brought up with machinery, said the tractor works better than he had expected.

It's a great satisfaction when you get something to work and people appreciate it."

John Croskery of Marmora attracted crowds of onlookers Wednesday with his home-made tractor on display at Hastings County Plowing match at Glenn Morrow's farm south of Stirling. Mr. Croskery made the tractor out of scrap parts.

Gardening Column

Saving Tubers Simple Task

By ROSS HAWTHORNE
Staff Reporter

Last week in Toronto I attended a show sponsored by the Canadian Chrysanthemum and Dahlia Society. And until that moment I was proud of the dahlias in my garden. Well as they say, pride goeth before a fall and since fall is almost here, I'll pass along to you some of the tips I picked up on the preservation of dahlia tubers over the winter mouths; tips that should be valid since the members of the society are wintering over the tubers of prize-winning cultivars (a fancy name for plants).

What you'll need for winter storage of dahlias is cardboard boxes, back copies of this newspaper, a bag of peat, a sharp knife and a garden fork.

And for winter storage of mums, a clear spot of garden near the south or west foundation of your home.

After frosting, carefully take a garden fork and carefuly lever all around the dahlia plant until the clump pops free. When the clump has been cleaned of all soil, gently set it on a sheet of newspaper. Then carefully examine each tuber in the clump in order to find the eye, a small spot or bump on the neck. You see, those eyes are important because they will be the start of next year's plant. If the neck containing the eye is lost from the tuber, then that tuber will be blind and of course, non-producing.

Then with the traditional sharp knife, seperate each tuber above the eye where the neck attaches to the stem.

Then lay an inch of peat in the box and lay the tubers out in a row, one inch from the sides and a quarter or half inch apart. And in sequence add another inch of peat, a layer of tubers and so on until the carton is full.

By the way, don't forget to mark or identify the tubers before you pack them away — or you'll never remember next spring. I know one chap who color codes them with magic markers and he says it works just fine.

Now, mums are preserved in a little different way. The whole clump of the old plant is dug and left intact including whatever soil may cling. Cut the stems of the mums to within four to five inches of the top of the root cluster. Then on the south or west side of the house, near the foundation, dig a hole deep enough to bury the tops of the stems six to eight inches below the soil surface.

But again, before you bury the root clumps, be sure and identify them — or come next spring, you won't have a clue. One way is to bury a small upright stake with each clump and then make a little map identifying each stake and the clump at its foot. And then staple, nail or somehow attach the map where it can't be lost, such as to a beam in the cellar, next to the foundation wall where the clumps are buried

PUC Road Work Creates Hazard

BY MARG HAYLOCK
Staff Reporter

PICTON — The summer of '75 in Picton will be remembered by motorists as 'detour days" in Delhi and on Main Street.

Improvements to the town's water works system through the Picton Public Utilities Commission required excavation over the Town Nill and necessitated temporary traffic obstructions in other areas.

Progress frequently demands temporary inconveniences and the average motorist does not object to detours and brief delays in the name of "improvement of services."

The delays may be inevitable but their manner is purely the product of the men at work.

When excavation was in progress recently on Main Street near the corner of Paul Street, traffic was forced to come to a halt behind heavy equipment. There was no flag man on the job, on at least one morning, to direct motorists around the construction site. Drivers were forced to muster courage and edge around the work site in hopes that there were no cars climbing up the Town Hill to turn east.

On another occasion work was in progress at the foot of the Town Hill with no flag man to direct cars safely around the construction site.

Motorists could only crawl forward optimistically into the afternoon traffic.

If the construction firms holding contracts for street work in Picton hold an aversion to flag waving its time town council stepped in to demand someone to tell drivers where to go.

The work in progress is essential and when completed will greatly benefit the town but there is no reason to permit uneccessary inconvenience and potential hazard on these jobs. Flag men should be at the work sites at all times to direct motorists around the construction projects. The pin-the-tail-on-the-donkey approach motorists have been required to adopt in hitting the correct lanes with their vehicles is not necessary.

Scientist Says Pollution Harming Ontario Crops

TORONTO (CP) — A scientist at the University of Guelph says fruit and vegetable crops along a 200-mile path from Windsor to north of Toronto are being damaged by wind-borne industrial and car exhaust pollution from the United States.

Douglas Ormrod, professor of horticultural science, said Tuesday that a research program he led this summer indicates a variety of crops, shrubs and trees show effects of pollutants "that appear to come from Detroit, Cleveland and other larger U.S. centres around Lakes Erie and Ontario."

"We haven't found a way to measure such damage, and proving a cause and effect is almost impossible," he said. "But all indicators are that the American cities are the source of the pollution."

The worst damage was found in Essex and Kent Counties, "but we've traced the effects of ozone pollution—either by itself or in the form of smog—through to the Guelph area and on to Woodbridge and Bradford north of Toronto."

Ozone is a by-product of electrical discharge.

Prof. Ormrod said his $16,000 research program, funded by the federal and provincial governments, has traced pollution damage as far as Prince Edward County, almost 100 miles east of Toronto, but this damage is probably caused by pollutants from Toronto.

He said crops most sensitive to pollution in southwestern Ontario are grapes, white beans soya beans and tobacco, "with the damage receding the further you get away from Detroit."

The Niagara farming and fruit belt, however, seems to be away from the prevailing southwest and west winds and "it is the least affected area we have surveyed."

A Look Back at the Political Contradictions of the Diefenbaker Government

By JOHN D. HARBRON

Foreign Affairs Analyst

Thomson News Service

At the time of John Diefenbaker's 80th birthday, we must look back a considerable time, more than a decade in fact, to the last Conservative government in Ottawa between 1957 and 1963.

And before that, we must look back even further to the previous one, that of Conservative R. B. Bennett which came to power in 1930 at the height of the depression and was voted out of office in October. 1935 by the long-lasting late prime minister Mackenzie King.

The R.B. Bennett regime which ended its life almost exactly 40 years ago is part of our history. Mr. Diefenbaker's government which ended in 1963, 12 years ago, is getting to be that way.

And yet many of the issues which belabored him and his cabinet in foreign policy areas are still with us today, perhaps in different forms and requiring clearly different decisions, but the same issues nevertheless.

In the early 1960s Mr. Diefenbaker had to deal with the nuclear weapons problem, pressures from the United States that we maintain a strong role in NATO, relations between Canada and the hemisphere, energy resources and who should control their use and export, yes even pollution problems began to demand solutions at the federal level in the early 60s.

I mention nuclear weapons first because it was over major cabinet splits and resignations on this policy that the Diefenbaker years came to an end.

Some key members of Mr. Diefenbaker's cabinet like former national defence minister Douglas Harkness and former trade and commerce minister George Hees supported nuclear weapons on Canadian soil, while Mr Diefenbaker's pacifist external affairs minister Howard Green, did not.

On energy policy the Diefenbaker government set the course for today's regulatory agencies, chiefly the National Energy Board and a federal government policy which lasted until the new oil crisis of 1973 which resulted in growing Canadian oil exports to the U.S.

In foreign policy an allegedly pro-British Conservative government maintained trade and diplomatic relations with Cuba though under relentless pressure from Washington not to do so.

This was part of the other major foreign policy crisis of the Diefenbaker years, yet to be recorded in full, of his four day delay in supporting the U.S. during the Cuban missile crisis of October, 1962.

And though Mr. Diefenbaker, like all Canadian prime ministers, before him and to date, would not join the hemispheric international body now called the Organization of American States, he did move positively in hemispheric affairs.

As a result of his spring, 1960 visit to Mexico City to see former Mexican president Adolfo Lopez Mateos he became the first Canadian prime minister to visit Latin America while in that office.

And his department of external affairs opened a Latin American division, still in existence, the kind of move one would have expected from the continentalist-oriented Liberals.

The massive wheat sales to China initiated and continued during the Diefenbaker years, were one of the main thrusts making possible the recognition of Peking by Prime Minister Pierre Trudeau thereby permitting one of Mr. Trudeau's personal dreams to come true.

The Economic Stew

Back in the Dirty Thirties there was an English economist named G. D. H. Cole. He was a man of some stature, a professor, as we recall, at the famous London School of Economics and an advisor to the British Labor Party.

Cole wrote a book entitled "An Intelligent Man's Guide Through World Chaos." Books were written for intelligent people in those days — witness George Bernard Shaw's "An Intelligent Woman's Guide to Socialism."

In the Thirties, the world's problems were legion. But then, as today, one of the major problems was the instability of the value of money. Then, in much of the world, the devil was deflation — the disastrous drop in prices and the sharp increase in the value of money. Today the prevailing condition is just the opposite, climbing prices and the decline in the value of money. It may well be, though, that opposite problems will illuminate each other. Let us listen to Cole.

Money, said Cole, was enormously complicated. Not more than five economists in the world laid claim to a full understanding of its mechanism — and no two of them agreed.

How money works may be tremendously complicated, but money itself is a very simple thing. It is nothing less and nothing more, than a claim for goods or services.

Deflation and inflation are alike in this: by altering the purchasing power of money they alter the amount of goods and services to which the holder of money can lay claim.

If we remember this, we may make some advance toward the understanding of inflation in today's world. It is customary to say that prices are pushed up by rising costs. Among rising costs is the cost of labor. Labor unions blame this on the rising cost of living. But we shall get near to the truth if we remember an earlier, more radical, demand by labor — for a bigger slice of the pie of gross national product. This ambition has not been achieved. Wages have gone up — but statistics prove that labor's share has not increased. The economic system has provided ample opportunity for other classes to protect their share of the pie. Everybody is getting more money and this additional money buys no more than before.

Of course, a few get no more money. Recipients of government pensions may enjoy COLA but "actuarily sound" pension schemes pay at the old rate, which means that they return to those who saved much less than they paid in.

That ought to make us beware of actuaries. In fact, if we give the matter even a few minutes of intelligent thought, we are forced to the conclusion that, when we invest our money in anything at all, when we postpone our claim to enjoy the use of goods or services, we throw ourselves on the mercy of tomorrow's producers.

Only their generosity, voluntary or involuntary, will allow us to enjoy tomorrow what we ourselves do not produce tomorrow.

Inflation is the way in which today's producers say that the non-producers, pensioners, investors, the handicapped, the sick and the unemployed, are demanding too big a slice of the national pie.

Amid the 1000 Islands

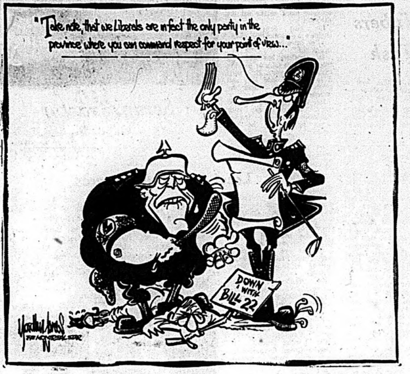
A young Loyalist College student was telling us of a forthcoming trip with some companions to the Thousand Islands.

Something many have done of course, but behind the commonplace is the stability and sense of timelessness that even the passage of the years does not diminish perceptibly.

A look at the old photographs lends credence to that. So too does mention of a similar trip by Flora Carver in the current issue of the Hastings Manor Times. Last month 35 manor residents made the trip to the islands, with one of the main attractions — — as Mrs. Carver notes — for those who made the trip as many as 40 years ago, the legendary Boldt castle.

John MacLeod, always enthusiastic about Manor outings, may have spoken for most when he said he had never enjoyed anything more since leaving Scotland 54 years ago.

By contrast, another page of the publication strikes a more sombre note with a poem aptly entitled "Misguided Missiles." It speaks eloquently of a speed-crazed world and the recklessness of some drivers. Alas, too many of our young people never live to enjoy a tranquil cruise among the Thousand Islands, or anywhere else.



"Take note, that we Liberals are in fact the only party in the province where you can command respect for your point of view..."

Role of Television in the Election

By DON O'HEARN

Queen's Park Bureau

Thomson News Service

TORONTO — While still reasonably fresh in our minds let us talk about the one major development in campaigning in the election—the TV debates.

In recent years election campaigning has been swinging more and more to a media proposition.

The old days of mass meetings and oratorical outbursts on the stump have pretty well gone—at least as far as the leaders are concerned.

No party now attempts more than one or two mass meetings, mainly because they know they can't get the interest.

Campigning per se is largely a matter of going from centre to centre and shaking hands and trying to pep up riding workers.

There is no attempt to personally reach the mass of voters in any community.

Rather the goal is to get a message to them through the media, local for direct results and general for the over-all campaign.

Thus the press conference has largely taken the place of the old-time meeting. And in this campaign we saw the TV debate finally come into its own.

There were attempts in the past to put on television "debates," of course, but they were pallid affairs and largely boring.

In this provincial election the approach was finally arrived at where leaders were put on the air and simply let run loose.

And at last we had something approaching a real debate, an affair which had life and interest and which gave some inkling of the various leaders as real people.

The format of the debates certainly could be improved upon.

There was general disorder.

In the Davis-Lewis affair, though there wasn't the hurly-burly of Davis-Nixon there still was untidiness.

The loudest man, in this case Lewis, tended to get the lion's share of the floor. And there was too much discussion of one or two points.

The Davis-Nixon confrontation, of course, was a semi-brawl.

It was so out-of-hand that it probably turned off a good many viewers.

But still even it had a good deal of merit. The voters, at least, were seeing real people.

In future such debates there should be some shape or format. Perhaps confining answers to a set time period with penalties for interruptions.

Perhaps also a list of subjects, which also would be confined to time periods.

And then a strong hand in the chair (in fairness to Fraser Kelly these were an absolutely new type of program).

Given this, the TV debate could form a most important part of our electioneering.

LETTERS

Is Hunting Really Necessary?

Editor,
The Intelligencer:

In Saturday's Toronto Star, there is evidence in some of the letters that a few Canadians do have a conscience when it comes to slaughtering animals.

Especially now, as the killing season draws nigh, we should think about what really goes on out there. The hunters would have us believe that it is a very manly and brave sport, and that only a sissy would want to miss out on all the fun. The fact is that most of them are out to vent all the hostilities they have built up over the year on Mother Nature and her animal subjects.As a result, one doesn't even feel safe to walk in the woods in autumn any more. Animals retreat further into the bush, and even so their numbers decline each year.

Why do they engage in this bizarre pastime? To provide meat for their families? To a certain extent, perhaps this is true. But there is another obvious reason. They like to kill legally and without restraint, to speak of.

I once went out duck-hunting with my father. On the way there to his consternation, I dropped all but about three or four shells in the lake. Although at the time I felt I'd never be a "real man" because I'd fouled up the duck killing expedition. Looking back, I'm thanking God I dropped the shells in the lake because they saved me from becoming involved in the murder of several ducks.

It is ridiculous for man to continue to treat animals on this planet in such a cruel and heartless manner. Strangely enough, when I speak to people on this subject the most common reaction is to express doubts as to my sanity. Is it insane to be compassionate?

Why don't all you hunters stay home this fall and enjoy a nice soy-bean casserole instead of terrorizing the wild-life? Or would autumn just not be the same for you without this bloody ritual? Ladies, do you want your husband involved in this cruel sport when he could be doing something productive as opposed to destructive. It's time for people of conscience to speak out. Let's ban the hunt in our country!

"Go ye therefore, and teach all nations, baptizing them in the name of the Father, and of the Son and of the Holy Ghost: Teaching them to observe all things whatsoever I have commanded you: and, lo, I am with you always, even unto the end of the world. Amen." Matthew 28:19,20

It must be obvious to everyone by now if we had only obeyed the Lord and gone into the world with the gospel, there would have been no need to go with guns. Just a fraction of what we have spent would be sufficient to spread the word of God to the ends of the earth.

Housing Vacuum

By VINCENT EGAN

Business and Consumer Affairs Analyst

Thomson News Service

New home prices are rising beyond the reach of the typical buyer, while construction activity slumps and many Canadian families remain badly housed.

Why doesn't the housing industry respond to the natural forces of public demand?

Probably because governments have no clearly formulated long-term housing objectives. Instead, federal and provincial housing policies move in fits and starts.

That's the conclusion to be drawn from a study of housing policy in Canada by Richard Shaffner of C. D. Howe Research Institute in Montreal.

Even without government intervention, the housing market might fluctuate sharply. People can either speed up or delay their decision about buying or renting, depending upon the cost of mortgage loans, the trend of the economy, their job prospects and so on.

Housing supply, on the other hand, is much less flexible because of the nature of the business and the time required to plan and build new units.

"Building firms are generally high-risk businesses that have poor bargaining power for capital when it is scarce," says Mr. Shaffner.

"Moreover, a rise in interest rates tends to choke off effective demand for housing, contributing to an abrupt decline in construction."

Demand for housing was abnormally high during 1973 and early 1974. The reasons: Special tax treatment of home owners; a rush to invest in real estate as a hedge against inflation; and the urge for speculation.

But in 1974, the tables were turned and the demand for single - family housing fell sharply. Factors in the decline included the economic recession, the rise of mortgage rates to unprecedented heights and—in Ontario—the introduction of a punitive tax to discourage what the provincial government interpreted as land speculation.

A recovery in construction began this spring, when interest rates were receding from their late-1974 peaks.

Now, however, the renewed upsurge in interest rates and in construction costs is likely to slow the recovery.

Mr. Shaffner sees the potential for an even more serious shortage of rental accommodation during the next few years—made worse by the existence or fear of adoption of rent controls in many cities.

If that shortage were allowed to grow, upward pressure on rents could be a major new source of inflation in the future, says Mr. Shaffer.

The most sensible policy for governments would be to try to encourage the supply or construction of accommodation, rather than to rely on vote-catching policies that subsidize new home purchasers and stimulate demand.

And such policies could only be successful if they were based on long-term objectives. Housing demand is so volatile that short-term "solutions" are likely to be out-dated before they can take effect.

In Mr. Shaffner's view, one such policy should be incentives to increase the construction of smaller, less expensive homes that the typical Canadian family can afford to buy.

Another should be expansion of the federal government's Accelerated Rental Housing Program, under which Central Mortgage and Housing Corp. offers cut-rate financing to firms that build apartments to be leased at agreed rents.

Today's housing market—high unemployment and hard times on the building side, and a pressing need for affordable accommodation on the buying side—is a contradiction that must be corrected.

The Bureaucracy Balked First Dief and Now Prime Minister Trudeau

BY RICHARD JACKSON

Ottawa–Both John Diefenbaker and Pierre Trudeau would be startled and a little chagrined to hear anyone draw similarities between them. They have clashed consistently on everything from proper dress in the Commons to bilingualism in the public service.

The similarity lies in the output of decisions from cabinet. When Mr. Diefenbaker was prime minister, his cabinet ministers often despaired of getting a clear go-ahead from the Chief.

His political sensitivities were so acute that he couldn't bring himself to endorse a program that might prove politically inexpedient at some future date. His ministers then were left to pursue their policies without wholehearted cabinet approval.

The result was evident in later years when, as opposition leader, Mr. Diefenbaker would sometimes find himself raking a particular government program only to discover that it had begun under his own term in the prime minister's office.

Prime Minister Trudeau can't be said to suffer from the same hesitancy to make a decision. Yet the bureaucratic jungle he has created in an attempt to apply modern techniques to the decision-making process, leads to the same result- a blockage in output of clear policy decisions by the cabinet.

There are committees of cabinet, committees in the Privy Council Office and committees in the prime minister's personal staff. There are inter-departmental committees of public servants, there are commissions of inquiry, there are task forces and private consultants.

All are busy preparing input papers for cabinet. The resultant constipation of information leaves ministers and officials irritable and confused. Decisions only pop out when the laxative of a deadline is applied.

Agriculture Minister Eugene Whelan's promised beef stabilization plan is a case in point. The minister promised that the new plan would be announced well before the old one ran out on August 11. More than a month has gone by and still no announcement. He hasn't even announced the payout under the previous plan even though the Agricultural Stabilization Board worked out weeks ago what it must be.

The Agricultural Stabilization Act spells out the formula for stabilizing beef returns. It has been passed by Parliament and is the law of the land. Agriculture Canada economists have done the arithmetic for the new beef plan and there it sits on the cabinet agenda awaiting a decision.

The late Mike Pearson was known to have the leakiest cabinet in Canadian history. He didn't seem to care how much his ministers talked. Mr. Trudeau keeps a tight lid on his ministers but leaks abound simply because there is so much paper around.

Hundreds of public servants have documents in their desks marked "Confidential To Cabinet." They are position papers prepared for cabinet committees. Some may be close to what cabinet will eventually approve and some may be away off target.

Under more normal circumstances, loyalty would keep the documents out of sight. But they are disturbed that loyalty to Mr. Trudeau seems to be more important in senior appointments important in senior pointments than loyalty to the public service.

They also know there are dozens of copies of the documents around the department. A copy sent to a reporter will not likely be traced to themselves. And maybe if it gets into the press, the cabinet might be jolted into making a decision.

College Students Renew Their Interest in Church

By GEORGE W. CORNELL
AP Religion Writer

NEW YORK (AP) — College students, generally turned off to organized religion in recent years, seem to be taking another look at it. Or at least a glance.

"There are some minimal signs of their reidentifying with that institution called the church," says Rev. Patrick O'Neill of Washington, D.C., head of the campus ministries office of the United States Catholic Conference.

"But it's on a pick-and-choose, cafeteria basis and it's not a great groundswell. They don't feel bound to the every-Sunday type schedule. They want to take care of a private need.'

Individual chaplains and other religious leaders at several universities also noted as spring terms ended a similar edging of students back toward church involvement, although often only in tentative, exploratory ways.

Rev. Dr. John H. McCombe, dean of Hendricks Chapel at Syracuse University in Syracuse, N.Y., says an upturn of student interest in religion there appeared typical of experiences on campuses across the country.

"I have visited a dozen or more campuses within the last six months, and I find chaplains reporting attitudes and ambience very similar to that we see at Syracuse," he says.

One indication of it, he adds, is that attendance at regular Sunday chapel services has tripled since 1970, when only about 75 students turned out, but now the figure usually is about 225, often more, sometimes up to 350.

This still is only a fraction of a total student body of 16,000, he observes. "They're not standing at the church doors, breaking them in that they might enter." But he says the heightened concern showed in other ways.

For instance, he notes that more than 1,100 persons weekly took part in small group meetings, fireside dialogues and similar activities at the student-faculty community house sponsored by Hendricks Chapel.

Rev. Varre A. Cummins, chaplain at St. Lawrence University at Canton, N.Y., notes that chapel participation rose from a handful of two or three to about 60 in the course of a year.

Sister Helene Malley, campus minister at the State University of New York at Albany, reports an increased response to projects sponsored by the Newman Club, Catholic student organization.

Judy Bialer, program director for the Jewish Student Coalition—Hillel Foundation at the Albany campus, says participation has climbed from only about 30 four years ago to 230 in 1974-'75.

Rev. Duane Feldman, Lutheran pastor on the Albany campus, says that those students who do take part in religious activities, seem more zealously dedicated to it.

Eternity Helps Men Face Their Death

By Dr. Gordon C. Smyth

Our ancestors may have had crude or exaggerated notions about heaven and hell. However, they never surrendered the conviction that this present life is involved in a higher destiny that determines its true character.

One consequence of this conviction was that it made them try to live responsibly. Another was that it made many of them willing to lay down this life rather than lose the freedom and dignity with which God had enriched it.

They knew better than we do, even though we are always in danger of a nuclear war, that everybody must die. Because they dared confront the meaning of death, life and not death provided the context of their existence. It was life that moved within two worlds at the same time. It was at home in time and in eternity.

The New Testament presents the whole Gospel as rooted in and dependent upon the resurrection of Jesus Christ. The early Church was filled to overflowing with "resurrection-consciousness".

In it the Christ of the resurrection not only gave meaning to the Jesus of history. He gave ultimate validity to the whole order of historical development, including our own human experience.

For instance, Eric Sevareid recently interviewed George F. Kennan on television. Dr. Kennan, former American ambassador to the USSR, is a Pulitzer Prize-winning historian. Toward the close of the interview the host drew his guest out on the future of "the two major movements in the world, Marxist Communism and Christianity". Dr. Kennan gave the advantage, even inside the Soviet Union, to the Christian religion because of the light that it sheds upon the mystery of death.

The resurrection, through which Christ confirmed the change that God had wrought in human nature, introduces eternity into this present life. This makes all the difference. St. Paul was the first but not the last to affirm that human suffering is "not worth comparing with the glory that is to be revealed to us" (Romans 8:18).

It is the touch of eternity found in the resurrection of Jesus Christ that helps men and women to bear with courage and humor what has to be borne in the struggle for existence.

Arid Lands Can Feed Antelopes

NAIROBI, Kenya (Reuter) — A large-horned antelope called the oryx may provide part of the answer to Africa's shortage of protein food, according to an American wildlife expert.

Experiments which have been carried out in an arid area of Eastern Kenya over the last four years have provided startling evidence that in areas such as the drought-stricken Sahel the oryx has enormous advantages over conventional cattle.

According to Robinson McIlvaine, former U.S. ambassador here and new African director of the World Wildlife Leadership Foundation (WWLF), the experiments have shown that the oryx needs only between one-third and a quarter of the water needed by cattle to keep alive and it puts on twice the weight on the same intake of food.

Women in Ads: An Unreal Image

You've seen her a thousand times.

She's pretty but not beautiful. Nicely dressed but not terribly chic. Happy. Smiling. Caring. The kind of person who'd make a great neighbour. Not too bright, mind you, but nice. But most of all, she's a Mother. And a Wife.

She's never cross or tired or bored with doing dishes. She's thrilled when her sons go out and get filthy so that she can prove her worth by getting their clothes clean again. She only drinks milk when her husband tells her to. Even her mother-in-law admits she's a Good Woman.

Who is she?

Why she's you! Or is she? If you're a North American woman, that fiction describes the stereotype you're supposed to fit. The Housewife, portrayed so regularly and so boringly in television advertisements from laundry detergent to mufflers.

These days, many people don't like her. What men and women have been saying is that these representations of women are both sexist and degrading and are far from reality.

Consequently, in late 1974 and early 1975 the Ontario Status on Women Council conducted a survey of attitudes of women towards advertising. It was designed not so much to yield statistics but to provide insight into the sorts of things women find objectionable in advertising.

The most frequently named objectionable advertisements were the milk ads, Playtex Cross Your Heart Bras, 28 Hour Girdle, Body Language Bra, Belvedere Cigarettes, Johnson and Johnson Maxi and Mini Pads, Alpo and classified newspaper advertising.

Other advertisements found to be objectionable were Secret pantyhose, Speedy Muffler, Crisco Oil, 2nd Debut, Spic and Span, Molson's, Thong Bathing Suit, Stay Free, All, Clairol Loving Care and something called Mary Brown Chicken Legs.

Further down on the list: Geritol Modess, Ajax, Loblaws and the International Women's Year Advertising Campaign.

In all, 294 stores and products were named.

What did respondents object to? They assessed the offensive aspect of the advertisements as stereotyping or demeaning the female role (33 per cent), intellectually patronizing or insulting (30 per cent), sex linked portrayal which viewed woman as sex object or obsessed with her own physical appearance (22 per cent), invasion of privacy (eight per cent), misleading advertising in general (four per cent) and all other complaints (three per cent).

What were some of the comments of the persons surveyed?

One respondent criticized a salad oil ad which depicts a young girl cooking dinner for her family and her boyfriend. The father stresses that "good cooks make good brides".

"I objected to this ad because the future of this girl is involved . . . It portrayed a rather stereotyped role for a young girl who has no part in the decision of her own future, i.e. no alternative to marriage."

Another respondent asks "Why do mothers always get stuck washing things inconsiderate husbands and sons get dirty?"

"And why are there no active dirty daughters?"

Complaining about patronizing advertisements, one respondent criticizes "milk" commercials: "Insulting and patronizing to have this smooth 'jock' talking about women like so much beef on the hoof to be physically judged and admired — all because they drink milk. Makes me want to throw up — milk and all.'

As for sex-linked portrayal: one of the most criticized ads was that for Belvedere cigarettes which shows a smoking woman in an unbuttoned blue denim shirt. "What are they selling, the woman's body or cigarettes" was one comment; another person said "The suggested connection between smoking and wild sexual adventures is insulting."

In general, another respondent said "I find all ads repulsive when they imply that to be sexually attractive one must use Brand X. Such unrealistic portrayal must surely convey a very strange view of personal worth to young people."

What can you do if you find advertisements offensive? The council says: A. Tune in to the underlying message which depicts women and - or girls — recognize what the ad is implying about "proper" roles or behavior. B. If you don't like the message, don't let it pass! Complain to the manufacturer, the radio or television station, the publisher. Complain to the agency if you can find out who it is. Send a copy of your complaint to the Canadian Advertising Advisory Board, 1240 Bay Street, Toronto. C. Stop buying products if you're offended; the Council says boycott and let the manufacturer know about it. And finally, keep the Status of Women Council, 801 Bay St. 3rd Floor, Toronto, Ontario, informed on your interest and concern.

Remember, they say, the key is to complain.

Fall Fashions for Young Set

Ready for school and ready for bed, Paul Lietaer and Andrea Di Rocco modelled fall fashions at the Quinte Mall Fashion Show, September 18 - 20. Featuring clothes from shops in the mall, the show was co-ordinated by Joyce Mueller of Sheridan College. Fashions for the coming months were worn by several local men, women and children.

Hospital Auxiliary Members Watch Volunteers in Action

At the general meeting of the Belleville Hospital Auxiliary recently, members were given an amusing portrayal of volunteers in action.

Charlotte Hollfelder, director of in-hospital volunteers, played herself and demonstrated some of the problems and situations encountered during a normal day at the hospital. Jean Kilburn, as the volunteer visitor, told an amusing story and a "talented" cast gave a hilarious view of the hospital playroom. Lela Twigg was the Playlady and Mary Grossett, Rene Robertson, Evelyn Campbell and Muriel Kerr played the parts of the children.

The business portion of the meeting was chaired by president, Selma Bochnek, who welcomed the members and several guests and prospective volunteers.

Vera Morphy reported that the gift shop in the hospital had experienced a very profitable summer, and presented a cheque for $3000. to the auxiliary. For the Opportunity Shop, Evelyn Campbell reported a record opening day and presented a cheque for $1,300. Pat Bools, acting chairman for the coffee shop reported a good summer. In-hospital volunteers gave 3,985 hours of service during June, July and August.

A new information service will be commencing soon and anyone interested may attend an orientation meeting on Sept. 24 at 1:30 p.m. A class for junior volunteers will be held on Sept. 20 at 10 a.m.

The auxiliary is collecting Dominion Store tapes and, with the proceeds from this venture, they will purchase comforts and equipment for the extended cared department in the hospital. The first of these will be four wall clocks.

Eighty puppets were made and distributed to children in paediatrics during the summer.

Golden Wedding Anniversary

At noon on September 1, 1925, beneath evergreen boughs and flowers on the front porch of the bride's home, Bessie Hall Rosebush, daughter of Hiram and Sarah Rosebush of Rosebush Landing, was united in marriage to Roy Bush, son of William and Annie Bush of River Valley. Rev. C.W. Barrett officiated. This was the first wedding performed in the area after church union in June of 1925.

August 31, at the family farm home (Meadowbush Farm) where Roy was born nearly 80 years ago and to which he brought his bride Bessie, they welcomed over 325 guests who came to congratulate the couple on the occasion of their 50th wedding anniversary.

Both were born and raised in the River Valley, received their early schooling at S.S No. 19, Sidney, and Stirling High School. After attending Peterborough Normal, Bessie returned to teach in her home school and Rawdon, S.S. No. 4.

Except when Roy served overseas in the first World War, he has seldom left his home for long. It has been in the Bush name since 1886. They are both members of St. Paul's United Church. Roy belongs to Stirling Lodge No. 239, I.O.O.F., has had interests in farm organizations and the local fair.

Bessie is a valued member of St. Paul's U.C.W. and the R.V.W.I., in which she has been Tweedsmuir history curator. Because of her knowledge of history and the material made available through her private library, young and old alike come to her for information. On occasion she has written poetry and in 1967 wrote a prize winning hymn, for which she was awarded a medal.

The family, Jack, Joan, Glenn and Grace greeted the guests at the door. Granddaughters further welcomed the guests by inviting them to sign the guest book, then on to refreshments, as grandsons were busy looking after the cars. Their two great-grandchildren were also present.

Roy and Bessie met their friends and relatives in their living room. Here, the anniversary cake, made and decorated by her sister Gladys Conley, was flanked by golden candles and surrounded by greeting cards.

Roy and Bessie received greetings from both levels of government, the Secretary of State, Hugh Faulkner and a personal letter and scroll from Premier Davis. Dr. Richard Potter and Hugh O'Neil sent along congratulatory letters as did the Quinte Liberal Association.

THE TIME HAS COME TO PUT PRICE & PRIDE TOGETHER AGAIN!

A&P has always stood for two things:
Price & Pride.
Price & Pride together made the great A&P great.

Then, somehow, we let Price & Pride get out of balance.
We forgot our own philosophy:
Price without Pride is no bargain.
And we suffered for it.

The time has come to put
Price & Pride together again.
And we're going to do it.

If we can't do it, nobody can.

Community Involvement Politician's Way of Life

REGINA (CP) — When Evelyn Edwards was growing up, community service was 'a way of life.

The new Liberal MLA for Saskatoon-Sutherland has a long list of community involvements behind her and she said she feels that background was mainly responsible for her victory in the June provincial election.

She has been a Saskatoon alderman, a city hospital board member, a founding member of the Parkinson's Disease Foundation and the Council on Aging, a provincial board member of the Canadian National Institute for the Blind and the first woman named to the Saskatoon board of trade, an appointment made last year.

However, volunteer activities were not a deliberately-chosen stepping stone to politics, she said.

"I never plan that far ahead. I take each day as it comes and do the best I can in each circumstance.'

Mrs. Edwards has been appointed health critic for the Liberal "shadow" cabinet. Besides being a hospital board member, she is a registered nurse and former executive member of the Saskatchewan Hospital Association.

She said she is concerned about the high costs of health.

"It would be difficult to cut programs, but a closer watch will have to be kept to ensure money is being spent efficiently."

She expressed dissatisfaction with the NDP government's drug plan under which consumers will get drugs free after paying a $2 prescription fee.

She said the plan will cause hardships for the chronically-ill and those on limited incomes as well as creating too much paperwork for druggists. Instead, she favors Manitoba's plan, under which consumers receive refunds directly for drug costs exceeding $50.

Senior citizens and nurses' salaries are other concerns for Mrs. Edwards. She favors simultaneous contract negotiations in the three Prairie provinces to overcome regional disparities in nurses' salaries.

She said she hasn't encountered much prejudice because of her sex, but in recounting her bid for the mayoralty in Saskatoon in 1972, she observed that it is more difficult for a woman to get a top post than, for example, a seat on council.

Time Is Right

HALIFAX (CP) — Susan Ashley, 26, newly-appointed legal adviser to the task force on the status of women in Nova Scotia says the time is right for a change in the status for women in that province.

Ann Landers

Gun Nut Endangers Family's Life

Dear Ann Landers: My husband thinks you are a very smart, woman—until you disagree with him. Then you are dumb—just like me. Please try to straighten him out.

Rodney is a gun nut. He has a collection of 35 rifles and pistols. (The damned things cost a fortune.) He keeps 18 locked in a cabinet. The others are in an open case, but he swears they have no bullets in them.

Every night Rodney puts a loaded pistol on the nightstand. We have a child who will soon be two years old. I have a terrible fear that our son will come into our room one night and get hold of that gun.

When I tell my husband I worry about this, he says, "These days a person who doesn't sleep with a loaded gun by his bed is crazy." What can I do?—Dark Circles In Texas

Dear D. C. In T.: Most people who keep guns on night tables get killed instead of just robbed. That's for openers. But the gun lovers in this country raise such a ruckus when anything is said about a federal gun law that the real answer may be to hale the manufacture of hand pistols and let the hunters have all the rifles they want.

As for your husband's foolishness he should either keep that gun under his pillow or lock the bedroom door.

Dear Ann Landers: This problem might seem very small to most people but it's grating on the nerves of some long-time friends.

There's this pot-luck supper club we've had for two years—16 of us. We've known each other for ages. The biggest eaters bring the crummiest dishes. One couple always shows up with a big bowl of plain jello. There isn't even a sign of fruit in it. They wolf down the fried chicken and potato salad and are the first ones to grab the chocolate cake and watermelon.

Will you please say something to these stingy gluttons? We don't have the nerve.—Had Enough

Dear Had: What is needed is a co-ordinator. Someone should be in charge of telling who to bring what. Every couple should take turns bringing the main course, the salad, dessert, etc. In this way, the same people aren't stuck with the lion's share week after week. Since you wrote, I suggest you take charge. It's a simple job and will put an end to the free-loading.

Dear Ann Landers: My problem is a 42-year-old mother who thinks she is Joan Rivers. I love Mom, but she takes over my friends and tries to entertain them with her funny stories and cute remarks.

Mom is not bad-looking for an older lady, but I wish she wouldn't plop herself down when I have kids over and try to be one of them. She also likes to dance with the guys, which I think is out of line.

I have mentioned this a couple of times, but she says I'm silly to feel this way and that she is helping my popularity by making our house fun to come to.

If you say Mom is right I'll cool it. But honestly, Ann, it bugs me. Can it be that I'm jealous of her?—Age 16

Dear 16: Competition between mothers and teen-age daughters is not uncommon. Since you have told your mom how you feel, I believe she should take the hint and make herself scarce when your friends come over.

Sometimes mothers try to relive their youth through their daughters and this can result in big trouble.

Ottawa Procurer Jailed

OTTAWA (CP) — The operator of a prostitution service involving juvenile males was sentenced in provincial court Friday to two years less a day in Guelph correctional centre.

Michel Gravel, 22, had pleaded guilty in June to keeping a common bawdy house and to gross indecency with a 15-year-old male.

Evidence showed Gravel operated a nude modelling agency in which six boys, aged 11 to 16, were hired to perform sexual favors for men, for which the men paid up to $85 an hour and the boys got $10.

Mr. Brunelle, first elected to the legislature in 1958, defeated his nearest opponent by more than 6,000 votes Thursday.

All Above Board

TORONTO (CP) — Infractions of Ontario's Election Expenses Act during the election campaign were minor and prosecution of any candidate is unlikely, Donald Joynt, executive director of the election contributions and expenses commission, said Friday.

He said the commission had received 12 to 20 written complaints but none warranted further investigation by the attorney-general's department.

MILTON, Ont. (CP) — Roseanne Marie Brown, 29, of nearby Acton, was given a two-year suspended sentence Friday for the manslaughter death of her husband, a provincial police constable.

Montrealers Stay Home

Transit Strike Snarls Traffic

MONTREAL (CP) — Faced with a second transit strike in less than a month, many Montrealers chose to stay home Friday rather than brave rush-hour traffic congestion.

Several schools and firms reported absentee rates as high as 50 per cent as a strike by 2,250 Montreal Urban Community Transit Commission (MUCTC) maintenance and office employees entered its third day.

The Montreal Catholic School Commission said absenteeism reached 50 per cent at its schools in the north-end Riviere des Prairies district, normally served by chartered MUCTC vehicles, and other metropolitan-area school boards served by the system reported absentee rates up to 30 per cent.

Montreal's transit system was closed for 12 days in August by a strike of MUCTC bus drivers and subway operators.

Meanwhile, negotiators for the cashiers, maintenance and office workers and the commission prepared for a round of weekend talks under mediator Roger Pilote. Neither side is optimistic a settlement is near and the critical question of wages has yet to be broached.

The striking workers, members of the Montreal Transport Union, are seeking an average 40-per-cent wage increase in a one-year contract. The commission has offered 23 per cent in a two-year pact.

The Quebec national assembly labor committee—which reconvened Thursday in a bid to settle the dispute—has given Mr. Pilote until Tuesday to submit his report.

Premier Robert Bourassa has said his government "will have to take the necessary measures" to end the strike if mediation doesn't resolve the deadlock.

MUCTC chairman Lawrence Hanigan said earlier this week he expects a lengthy strike "if the government doesn't intervene or if the union doesn't radically change its demands."

Meanwhile, Mr. Hanigan said he has made arrangements for the 3,400 bus drivers and subway operators—who are not receiving regular pay cheques during the strike—to collect unemployment insurance.

He said he will not allow the drivers to work during the strike because of reported intimidation and sabotage Thursday by strikers against the buses and their operators.

CN Denies CP Charge

OTTAWA (CP) — A proposed $12-million investment by Canadian National Railways in a foreign-based shipping company will increase rail competition for shipping container business in St. Lawrence River ports, Howard Pye, CN lawyer, said Friday.

Mr. Pye denied charges by CP Rail at a Canadian transport commission hearing that the investment is designed to corral business that now is going to CP Rail in the port of Montreal.

If CN succeeds in getting some of this CP Rail business it will be on the basis of good, clean competition and not through an attempt to freeze out CP Rail by buying into shipping companies, he said.

Mr. Pye's remarks came at the conclusion of a transport commission hearing on objections to a CN proposal to buy an 18-per-cent interest in Eurocanadian Shipholdings of Bermuda and Intercast S.A. of Switzerland, the two firms which control the Cast shipping group. Cast ships travel between Montreal and Europe.

The commission reserved a decision on the objections to a later date.

Killer Whale Arrives

NIAGARA FALLS, Ont. (CP) — What may be the last killer whale ever to be captured in British Columbia waters arrived Friday at the Marineland and Game Farm.

John Holer, owner of the farm, said the 15-foot male arrived by truck in fine condition and immediately began to adjust to a tank where it will be kept in isolation until it is introduced to other whales in the aquarium.

Lawrence Critical

COBOURG, Ont. (CP) — A former member of the provincial cabinet said Friday the Progressive Conservatives waged a deplorable election campaign.

Allan Lawrence, former Conservative attorney general who resigned to run federally in 1971, said the campaign was one of the most negative he had ever seen.

Canada Will Take Firm Stand On 200-mile Fishing Limit

OTTAWA (CP) — Canada intends to stand firm on its demand for substantial East Coast fishing cutbacks when it puts its case to another meeting of the International Commission for the Northwest Atlantic Fisheries (ICNAF) next week in Montreal.

Dr. Alfred Needler, chief Canadian negotiator, said Friday that failure to reach an agreement would "strengthen the hand" of those pressing for unilateral declaration of a 200-mile offshore limit.

"This isn't a threat," he added hastily. "It's a statement of fact."

The talks, scheduled to begin Monday and end next weekend, are a continuation of a meeting held last June in Edinburgh, Scotland. All 17 ICNAF members, including the Soviet Union, both Germanies, the United States, Poland, Spain and Portugal, will participate.

Dr. Needler told a briefing that the only change Canada plans to make in its approach is in the area of some technicalities.

The Edinburgh formula called for a 40-per-cent reduction in fishing effort on groundfish stocks in a region stretching from the northern tip of Labrador, around Newfoundland and Nova Scotia to include New Brunswick. These cutbacks would apply to all ICNAF members except the coastal states involved—Canada, the United States and France.

The formula also called for reduction of catch limits for certain endangered species and for allocation of nearly all of some of these species to Canada.

Fisheries Minister Romeo LeBlanc, who will attend only the start of the Montreal meeting, said Friday that Canada, by protecting its own fishing industry, ultimately is protecting other countries.

"Our case is strong, our reasons are good, not only for Canada," he said. "We are depleting our stocks dangerously; the pressure . . . has become intolerable. Unless we protect the stocks, we will have very little to share out."

A measure of Canada's sincerity about protecting stocks was its closure of East Coast ports to Russian fishing vessels earlier this autumn. The closure would remain in effect until the Soviets can prove they have established a reliable mechanism to ensure adherence to the regulations."

The ICNAF zone covers an area that takes up the eastern half of Baffin Bay and Davis Strait between Canada and Greenland. It includes all the Atlantic between the northern tip of Labrador and the southern tip of Greenland south to 35 degrees of latitude.

The total catch in 1974 was 3,976,000 metric tons, the bulk of taken by the Russians. Canada's Atlantic catch in 1974, third behind the U.S., was 783,000 metric tons.

BELLEVILLE FIRE
FIRE PREVENTION WEEK

Cleaning Up for Fire Prevention

Members of Belleville's fire department begin their spic-and-span duties in anticipation of Fire Prevention Week Oct. 5-11. Activities actually begin this Monday with fire drills in city school. Grade 5 students in all schools will have the opportunity to participate in a fire prevention poster contest. And during the special week, both the East Dundas and West Moira fire halls will be open for the public.

Fire Prevention Key Aim Of City's Firefighters

Belleville firefighters are gearing themselves for a heavy schedule of activities in conjunction with fire prevention week from Oct. 5-11.

Paul Stephenson, fire prevention officer, said this week duties begin Monday with fire drills in all schools including elementary, secondary and separate schools, Sir James Whitney School, William R. Kirk School and Albert College.

In addition, there will be fire prevention poster contests for all Grade 5 students in the city and at William R. Kirk School.

Department members will conduct tours of high fire risk areas such as factories and high rise buildings.

Both fire halls will have open house during the week and a fire prevention booth will be set up at Quinte Mall from Oct. 6-11.

Mr. Stephenson said fire prevention is a year-round job. He and Reg Christopher are Belleville's two full-time fire prevention officers.

He outlined that they frequently do inspections, give lectures, supervise drills and illustrate the use of portable fire extingushers through the year.

Mr. Stephenson pointed out that inspections are done of all new or existing buildings except for private dwellings which are only done on request.

Lectures and demonstrations are given to factory employees, nursing students, school students, girl guides, boy scouts, cadets and all other interested groups, he said.

Mr. Stephenson noted the two officers also enforce fire prevention bylaws which include "our sprinkler bylaw which requires all high rise buildings to be completely sprinklered as well as all new nursing homes, senior citizens homes, hotels and motels.

Official Forecasts Bleak Winter For Unemployed

By HARRY MULHALL
Staff Reporter

Municipalities may find little relief from demands for social welfare this winter unless senior governments have plans to ease unemployment.

The warning comes from Reg Tucker, director of Hastings County social services.

His caution supports pessimistic projections already made to local governments in the county during a summer of discontent for a surprisingly — sustained number of unemployed people needing social assistance.

In a report on the first half of the year — received by Belleville city council two weeks ago — the county social services committee feared a gloomy economic trend would continue for the rest of the year.

Already the number of jobless needing general welfare aid is second only to 1971, one of the bleakest recent years on social assistance rolls.

The high number of employable persons needing assistance continued through June and July — peak unemployment months — although the pressure eased somewhat in August.

The average monthly employable-person caseload in the first five months of this year was 352.6 — compared to 374.5 in 1971.

"If we take the summer as any indicator, then I fear we can have a very heavy winter with this problem," said Mr. Tucker in an interview Friday.

Government make - work programs became a traditional answer some years ago to lightening the caseload on social agencies by making wintertime jobs.

Such programs, aside from the federal Local Initiatives Program (LIP) have been discontinued in recent winters. And LIP projects don't hire that many people in a community, said Mr. Tucker.

"We've had such programs in the past and they certainly helped (to ease the demand on local social assistance agencies)," said Mr. Tucker. "They're not the panacea for our ills but they certainly help. When taken away they left a void that nothing else has seemed to fill."

As yet there have no indications that winter work programs are planned by senior governments.

But unless some such schemes or alternative programs are realized, "I don't see the municipalities are going to get much relief. — I'm not too optimistic for the balance of this year or the beginning of next year," said the social services director.

Youth Dies In Crash

TRENTON — An 18-year-old Westwood, Ont. man was pronounced dead at the scene of a single car accident when a car he was a passenger in went off the Highway 46 and struck a hydro pole early Saturday, said Brighton OPP.

Douglas Cardwell was passenger in a car that left the road and hit a hydro pole. The accident occurred on Highway 46 (Station Road) north of Trenton.

Driver of the car, Rodney Brown, 23, of Campbellford, was charged with careless driving and treated and released from Trenton Memorial Hospital.

Two passengers Arleen Hazelwood, 16, and Catharine McGuire, 25, both of Hastings were taken to hospital for treatment of shock.

May I Help You

Pte. Catherin Duivenvoorden has the same duties as her civilian policewomen counterparts. She handles the same activities as the other officers on the CFB Trenton military police force including the operation of speed traps, working traffic control and answering questions on the information desk.

Military Police Keep Watchful Eye on Base

CFB TRENTON — While many small communities are experiencing a rise in vandalism, CFB Trenton has successfully curbed the problem with saturation patrolling of the department of national defence (DND) property, said Capt. R.J. Taylor, chief of the military police at the base.

The 31-member force is responsible for base security and policing on the "open-base" which has controlled access that can be regulated more stringently in an emergency, Capt. Taylor said.

"Basically there is little difference between the civilian police and the military oplice", he said. "They only crimes we do not handle are murder, rape and manslaughter because there are no federal statutes covering them and they are turned over to the local police."

Capt. Taylor said his organization emphasizes "preventive police work."

"We check every building on the base at least twice a night and when we have been notified a family will be away from their home we will make every effort to check the house daily," he said.

The juvenile crime rate at the base is negligible, said Capt. Taylor.

"I think the reason we have little trouble with the local young people is they are aware any trouble they might get into will reflect on the parents and are made aware of the exisiting military regulations which are enforced," he said.

The police officer at the base take a 10-12 week course and Cept. Taylor said he he feels they are the equal of any civilian force, including the RCMP.

The force has a detective sub-section which investigates crimes committed on base property. There is a separate section designated to check on the security clearances granted to people working for the armed services.

Mrs. M. of Belleville didn't wait long by the phone after placing a classified ad in The Intelligencer to sell a refrigerator.

Mrs. M. had eight calls for the 15-cubic-foot refrigerator and sold it the first night.

Do you have unused appliances taking up valuable storage space in your home. Call The Intelligencer Want Ad department at 962-9171 and sell those unwanted appliances for instant cash.

Twirlers Begin Jamboree

Skirts are flying and boots clicking today as more than 200 persons meet in Belleville for the annual Quinte Twirlers square dance jamboree.

The dance, from 2 to 10 p.m. at Sir James Whitney School, is open to the public.

Iris Downing, with her husband Bill, president of the Twirlers, said visitors will enjoy seeing the costumes and dancers will be on hand to answer questions.

"We like the recreation and we like the fellowship," said Mrs. Downing who has been square dancing for more than 15 years.

"You meet a lot of tremendous people."

She said it takes about a year's instruction and practice to know enough to dance at a jamboree "'or you get lost."

"When you have learned a movement and hear it you have to remember how to do it and do it instantly."

There are about 75 to 80 basic movement taught beginners in classes beginning each fall.

There are four clubs in Belleville: the Dancelots and Whirlaways, for those with about two years experience. The Beaunots for singles and the Hits and Mrs. for beginner and first year graduates.

Taxes Up, But Payment Faster

Payments of city taxes are up slightly from this time last year.

With more than a month to go before deadline, city hall's treasury has collected a major chunk of both property and business taxes.

There are five interim payments — the last on Oct. 31. As of Sept. 1 these realized 75.3 per cent of the total tax levy compared to 74.5 per cent at the same time last year, reports city treasurer Frank Morrell.

Taxes to be collected by the treasury this year total $8,788,000 — an increase of $758,000 over 1974.

One reason is that taxes are up — but so is new assessment.

Assessment is up 1.3 per cent — $140,209, reports Mr. Morrell.

But public school taxes increased 11.6 per cent while taxes on the city's general rate increased 5.4 per cent.

The city's 1975 budget totalled $13,574,000 dollars.

Tax amounts to be raised after grants and other revenue are $4.9 million for city expenditures and $3.2 for school purposes. Various costs — including local improvements [illegible] balance of the $8,788,000 required of taxpayers.

Break-ins Plague Police

FRANKFORD — Ontario Provincial Police at Belleville are investigating a series of break-ins in the Frankford-Glen Miller area which occurred sometime late Thursday or early Friday.

Police said break-ins occurred at the IGA food store and Peterborough Lumber in Frankford, and at the Glen Miller Market. There was also an attempted break-in at the Dafoe Family Clothing Store in Frankford.

Police said no other details are yet available and no arrests have been made. Constables Bob Burkholder and Brian Skinner are investigating.

Senior Citizens Tour O'Hara Mill Operation

The Moira River Conservation Authority played host last Sunday to about 450 visitors at O'Hara Mill in observation of the now-traditional Senior Citizens' Day and Pioneer Day.

Resplendent in period costume, Guy Hughes, authority chairman and members of his executive welcomed the visitors.

Guests included Jack Ellis, Hastings MP, William McCrae, Hastings County warden; Paul Burns, Lennox and Addington County warden and Cecil Woods, Madoc Township reeve.

Low water in the mill pond prevented operation of the muley saw mill but John Croskery of Marmora demonstated n antique tractor while axe and peavey handles were turned out in the driveshed area.

Model Railroaders Try Giant Layout

By CLIFF KENYON
Staff Reporter

Belleville Model Railroaders hope to have the biggest and best portable display between Toronto and Montreal completed by Chirstmas, club president Jack Collette said Friday.

They're not building it for fame or fortune — but for fun — so the experts can show beginners how easy model railroading really is.

When [illegible] the 20-foot-long square layout in seven ft. by three feet sections will be the roadbed for more than 400 feet of track and 27 switches.

"So many people have the idea it's so expensive but it doesn't have to be," said Mr. Collette.

The complete layout will cost the 40-member club about $400. The cost divided among members, will hurt even less if the club gets the 20 to 25 additional members its looking for.

The $5 annual fee to join the club not only entitles members to work on the [illegible] out at Plaza Hobby Shop in Belleville Plaza but beginners are trained by the 15 member "experts."

Members work on the layout Fridays from 6:30 to 9 p.m. and Saturday from 9:30 a.m. to 5 p.m. and an instructional class is held every other Friday evening at Queen Victoria School.

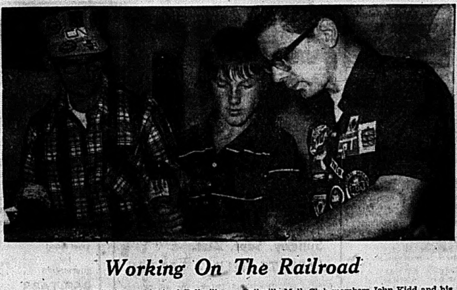
"It's to blinkin' easy," said Mr. Collette who is co-ordinating construction of the layout.

Beginners are not only shown how to work on the lawout but how to design their own.

The club moved into the store to build the HO scale set about two weeks ago. It will be their permanent home until May when the layout will be packed up until fall.

"The hobby dies about May 24 when the garden tools come out."

The layout is the latest in design, open — table method rather than on table top, and most sophisticated because it comes apart and can be transported by truck to be put on public display.



Working On The Railroad

Big Plans In Store For Highschool Basketball

Though Bay of Quinte Football and Soccer are nicely underway, the wheels have been turning on the Secondary School Basketball scene for quite a while.

With the success of last year's highschool squads — Nicholson's all-Ontario A championship, Central Ontario titles in Senior A, AA, and AAA and Central Ontario titles in junior AA and AAA — organizers are hardly standing still.

"We've come up with a few new ideas," said Bay of Quinte convener, Bill Miller, "they won't be definite for another few weeks though."

Included in the new ideas is a presentation of this areas top senior basketball talent in a time convenient for spectators.

The innovation first breaks the senior league into two divisions with the stronger clubs — likely Quinte, Nicholson, BCI, Trenton, Centennial and Moira — playing only amongst themselves. This would prevent the repetition of some of those lopsided scores from last year.

It will also encourage support from area residents as well as stronger support from within each school.

The teams would meet on given nights in specific gyms — those that could handle large crowds — and play doubleheaders. For instance, Nicholson vs. BCI and Quinte vs. Trenton. After the 51-50 and comparable scores that were recorded between those clubs last season, many fans would enjoy replays.

* * *

SLICES — The league may still be in the tentative scheduling stages, but its officials are headlong into preparing for the upcoming season.

The Bay of Quinte Basketball Referees Association is sponsoring an open clinic every Wednesday night at Nicholson Catholic College.

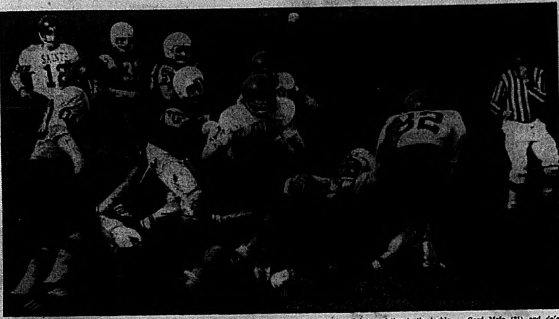
Its purpose is to refresh the old hands and develop some new ones.

The sessions which begin at 7:30 p.m. are open to anyone interested in basketball officiating.

With the growing popularity of basketball at the high school level, it's not hard to understand its growth among the oldtimers. a few rumors have been going around concerning the beginning of a men's league within the city. For a number of years the only way the round shouldered grads could keep in practice was to join forces with the Peterborough, Cobourg, Trenton, Belleville quadrangle.

Bruce Faulds is the man motivating the new group. Though he hasn't gotten down to the nitty-gritty yet, he is confident there are enough players in the city to warrant the organization.

For the working man, it beats travelling to Peterborough for a game.



Rick North, Moira Secondary School Trojans fullback, is surrounded by Quinte Secondary School Saints defenders as he is hauled down on the Saints' 17-yard line during a Moira drive late in second quarter of Friday's senior game at Quinte. Among the five Saints assisting in the tackle are middle linebacker Mike MacDonald (00), linebacker Gord Male (31) and defensive back Gary Goegan (32). Quinte won 14-8.

Even Bush Tactics Don't Stop Bobcats

The Belleville Bobcats, playing in their first home game of the season, put together an all round great performance to outclass their opponents, Whitby Young Bruins, by a score of 5-3 in Metro Junior B exhibition hockey action at the Dick Ellis Rink Friday night.

Despite playing against a team that had already played four games and having to put up with bush league tactics the Cats were able to put the game away.

Cats coach Meehan Bonnar summed up Belleville's last two games perfectly, after Friday's win. As long as the spirit and desire remains with the team we'll do alright. We've tried to create an atomosphere of happiness on the team which is something, I think, has been missing for the past few years.".

Especially not worthy in the game was the strong defence that the Belleville squad exhibited.

"The defence played a really tight game for us tonight," said Bonnar.

"Bobby Thompson came in in the third period when we were down to three defencemen and played a great game," said Bonnar.

Cats' general manager Snipe Mathews, before the game felt that the visitors were going to provide some tough opposition.

His assumptions proved to have no basis as far as the Cats were concerned. Belleville harassed opposition forwards from beginning to end and skated as though they had played half a season already.

Paul Tilley, looking better every game for the Belleville team, hustled constantly on the ice and gave the Whitby forwards nightmares with his for checking and aggressive style of play. Tilley also led the home team in points, picking up a pair of goals and adding one helper.

Tilley's linemate from Peterborough, Pete Dettman also proved to be a great help on the blue line for the Cats, breaking up plays and throwing his weight around with complete authority. Also impressive in his first game for the Cats was Mike Crawford. He, like Tilley is an aggressive forechecker who is not afraid to use the body whenever needed.

Bonnar, acknowledged that Friday's game was a little rougher than the contest in Oshawa and said, "It's good that the team gets the rough stuff out before the season starts."

GRANT GOEGAN

A total of 55 minutes in penalities were handed out during the contest including five game misconducts of which three, went to the locals. Belleville in two exhibition games they have played have already lost the services of seven players through injury and suspension.

Scott Samis and Grant Goegan, two veterans from last year, are looking as good as ever and combined in the third period to score the game's nicest goal. Samis dragged the puck into the corner before throwing it out in front to Goegan who deked the Whitby netminder and scored what proved to be the winner for the Cats.

Lost to the Cats for a few games is Wayne Calberry, who suffered a dislocated shoulder in the contest against Oshawa, Tuesday. Joey Edwards may also be missing from Sunday's game in Kingston due to a twisted knee. Edwards injured the knee twice in the opening 20 minutes of play before leaving the game.

Despite the last minute change of ice surfaces, a good many local fans were on hand to cheer the Cats to their second win. Jeff Merrill and Bob Moore again shared the goaltending chores for Belleville and both looked strong, especially on plays in close.

Dave Lewis, a product of the Trenton Minor Hockey system aided Belleville on defence as well as on the scoreboard. The defenceman netted a goal and an assist in the game as well as throwing some solid body checks. Defenceman Harold Roberts rounded out the Cat's scoring with his goal in the first period.

Belleville will play their third exhibition game on Sunday when they travel to Kingston to take on the Voyageurs and should by that time be down to the required number of player for the season.

Tigers Terrors In Picton

While Quinte Saints were battling it out with Moira Trojans in a duel of goal line stands, Trenton junior Tigers were mauling Prince Edward Collegiate in Picton.

The Saints crossed the goal line only twice in their contest, but that was enough to give them a 14-8 victory.

The situation was quite the contrary in Picton. While the home squad was unable to mount any offence the Tigers spent most the game in the Prince Edward end zone.

Trenton combined an aggressive offence and hard hitting defence to roll to a 47-0 win. Mark Scuccatto, one of several two-way players for Trenton, keyed their onslaught. He scored two touchdowns, one on a punt return, and booted five converts for 17 points.

Rick Doucet, John Webb, Jeff Steiner Henry Peterson and Dave Day accounted for the other Tiger majors. Day's was on a run back after he intercepted a Picton pass.

At Quinte, Steve McKracken broke open an 8-7 contest with a 33-yard touchdown pass play in the fourth quarter. Scott Bowes had counted a Saints major in the first quarter and that was good enough for a 7-2 lead at the half.

In the third quarter, Larry Walt scampered 25 yards into the end zone to give the Trojans their 8-7 . Then, in the final period McKracken put the home team in front for good. Both Quinte TD's were converted by Al Rutherford and Norm Davis was credited with Moira's two-point safety touch in the first frame.

Raceway Winds Up Another Racing Season

By TOM GAVEY
Staff Sports Writer

Quinte Exhibition Raceway closed out its 1975 season Friday night with a flurry of cooler presentations and some very odd results for bettors. The winning horse in each race received a cooler. The odd thing was that in seven of those 10 presentations the number three horse was on the receiving end. If number three was your lucky number, Friday night you would have had half of the exactors and quinellas picked correctly seven out of 10 times.

Horse racing fans were treated to a fine race in the ninth, when the feature Gerald Vance Memorial was run. The purse was $800.00 and included a cooler (blanket) and trophy presentation.

Winner of the prestigous race was Western D. Wann, one of the hottest horses on the Quinte circuit this year. Western D. Wann has won at least three feature races here in Belleville within the last month. Driving the big roan to victory was Rejean Boily, who has also done well of late on the local circuit.

Second went to Jimmy Bing, with Don Brown at the reins while Tuxedo Miss, driven by Murray Samons finished third.

The race was run in a good time of 2:09.3 on a fast track, with Western D. Wann fighting off a late surge by Jimmy Bing.

In the tenth it paid off to bet Valiant Colleen and Royal Crescendo for first and second, as the combination was worth an exactor of $108.00.

"It's usually the persons who know very little about harness racing that takes those big payoffs," said track official Evelyn Zebedee.

"They just bet the first two numbers in their head, or look for horses names they like," she added.

Things got off well in the first race, as Vanway Andy took its first victory of the season in a time of 2:14.4 Driving was Wilson Inwood while the second place spot went to Glenmir Stormy, with Glenn Peacock at the reins.

In the second race of the night a cooler was presented by Les Ehrlick to the winning horse Hawthorn's Pride, driven by Larry Zebedee. The race was run in 2:14.4 with second going to Caleb's Bob, at the reins was Russ McQuaid.

Rall-E-Stables made a cooler presentation in the third, with Wee Sam the winner. The horse was driven to victory by Osler Burrison in a time of 2:14.3.

It was a night for cooler presentations as the fourth saw Albert Defosse make a cooler presentation to Andy's Comet. Anthony Kerwood, the driver, took the horse to its third win of the year.

In the evenings fifth race Dixie Lee got into the act with a cooler presentation. This time Bye Bye Charlie was the winner, driven by Randy Bird.

In the sixth, the only race which called for a photo finish, Perfect Lobell, driven by the very successful Randy Bird, earned the Frontenac Downs cooler.

In the seventh the Ontario Horsemen's Association did their part, with a cooler going to Dreamy's Gold, driven by Clarence Franklin.

Finally, the eighth race was a cooler donated by the Marmora Fire Department. Tyus took its fourth race of the '75 season, Ed Weeks driving.

In the driving department, Guy LaRush appears to have won the championship, with 21 wins over the 1975 season at the Quinte Exhibition Raceway.

Pat Hunt finished in second place with 17 wins, while Brian Bellamy and Larry Zebedee checked in with 15 wins.

NHL Exhibition Openers Are Close

By THE CANADIAN PRESS

Coach Bep Guidolin thinks some off-season trades and the luck of the draft have made his Kansas City Scouts a contender for a National Hockey League playoff berth.

The Scouts made their 1975-76 debut Friday night, defeating Washington Capitals 4-1 in a battle of second-year expansion teams before 1,024 spectators at London, Ont.

"We've got better balance, pretty good experience and we think in our division, we might have a chance at the playoffs," said Guidolin.

In Friday's other NHL exhibition openers, Toronto Maple Leafs tied Atlanta Flames 1-1 at Ottawa and Montreal Canadiens tied Boston Bruins 2-2 at Springfield, Mass.

Last year the Scouts finished last in the Smythe Division, 12 points behind fourth-place Minnesota North Stars but 41 points from a playoff berth. Other teams in their division are Chicago Black Hawks, St. Louis Blues and Vancouver Canucks.

The Scouts strengthened themselves last year with mid-season trades that added Guy Charron and goalie Dennis Herron, then acquired Gary Bergman, Denis Dupere and Craig Patrick during the summer.

Most impressive pick from last year's amateur draft has been Don Cairns, up from Victoria Cougars of the Western Canada Hockey League.

The Scouts wrapped up their opening win with a pair of third-period goals. Wilf Paiement, Simon Nolet, Randy Rota and Robin Burns scored for Kansas City after Mike Marson gave the Capitals a 1-0 lead in the first period.

The Capitals were without forwards Stan Gilbertson and Jack Egers, both suspended after coach and general manager Milt Schmidt caught them breaking training Wednesday night.

Goaltender Wayne Thomas, acquired by the Leafs from Montreal during the off-season, played the whole game for Toronto, giving up a goal to Hilliard Graves. Stan Weir scored for Toronto.

Steve Shutt's goal in the first minute of the third period gave the Canadiens their tie. He steered in a goal-mouth pass from Guy Lafleur.

Lafleur had scored Montreal's other goal. Phil Esposito and Wayne Cashman scored for Boston.

The Bruins announced before the game that all-star defenceman Bobby Orr will undergo knee surgery today. He is expected to be sidelined for eight weeks.

BEP GUIDOLIN

Orr Sidelined For Eight Weeks

BOSTON (AP) — Defenceman Bobby Orr of Boston Bruins, who earlier this month received a multi-million dollar offer to jump to the World Hockey Association, faces knee surgery today which may sideline him for as much as eight weeks.

Orr entered Massachusetts General Hospital on Friday for the surgery to remove bone chips and calcium. It is his fourth knee operation.

The surgery was scheduled after Orr complained Thursday of soreness above the knee and a slight swelling, according to Harry Sinden, managing director of the National Hockey League team.

At a news conference at Springfield, Mass., before the Bruins' exhibition game Friday night against Montreal Canadiens, Sinden said Orr is expected to be out up to eight weeks.

The operation will be performed by Dr. Carter Rowe, the surgeon for Orr's last two knee operations.

Sinden said rookie defenceman Doug Halward, who skated with Orr all week during practice, will fill in for Orr. Halward is a top draft pick from Peterborough Petes of the Ontario Hockey Association Major Junior A series.

Orr now makes about $120,000 a year and recently indicated he would prefer to remain with the Bruins, although he has not yet signed.

Orr indicated his preference after listening to a contract offer from Minnesota Fighting Saints of the WHA said to be worth several million dollars.

"It's silly to talk about how much we'll miss him, because he's invaluable to the team," Sinden said. "But coach Don Cherry and I have confidence the team can maintain a contending position until Bobby Orr comes back."

Eagleson said contract talks between Orr and the Bruins will continue while the star defenceman recovers from the knee surgery, adding that he will be in New York to continue contract talks with the NHL team's owners on Monday.

Eagleson said his client had offered to break off contract talks until he was completely recovered, and that if a new contract is signed but Orr does not recover completely, the Bruins would be released from the contract terms.

NFL Time Again

By THE ASSOCIATED PRESS

Some of the traditional rivalries in the Naitonal Football League may take on an added dimension Sunday afternoon, when some games may be affected by a player strike by five NFL teams that ended Thursday.

"It's going to be a blood match," Richard Neal, New York Jets' defensive end said of their opener in Buffalo against the Bills, one of the non-striking teams. "They're just a lousy bunch!"

The Jets did go on strike, as did the New York Giants. But Philadelphia Eagles did not, so New York quarterback Craig Morton and his team-mates may feel they have more than one score to settle with Philadelphia. The other is young Mike Boryla's 20-7 manhandling of them late last season.

Boryla beat out Roman Gabriel for the starting quarterback job late last season and held onto it during the exhibitions this year.

Detroit Lions—who also struck—and Green Bay Packers have a rivalry going back 83 games, ensuring some added intensity on the field. And, in a sense, both teams are starting fresh in game No. 84.

"A Fresh Start With Bart," is Green Bay's slogan, referring to Bart Starr's debut as head coach. Detroit's starting quarterback is Greg Landry, who was injured most of the 1974 season. But his receiving corps now is missing wide receivers Ron Jessie and Larry Walton.

New England Patriots, the first team to walk out, have plenty of receivers in Randy Vataha, Darryl Stingley, Bob Windsor and more for their opener against Houston.

But their No. 1 quarterback, Jim Plunkett, is out with a shoulder separation. Whether Neil Graff can guide the Pats, who have missed almost an entire week of workouts, is a matter for conjecture.

Washington was the other striking team. But the Redskins missed only one official workout and are primed for their opener against New Orleans, which is missing more with quarterback Archie Manning on the sidelines with a chipped elbow. Bobby Scott will call the Saints' signals.

In Sunday's other openers, Los Angeles Rams are at Dallas Cowboys, Cleveland Browns at Cincinnati Bengals, San Francisco '49ers at Minnesota Vikings, Baltimore Colts at Chicago Bears, Atlanta Falcons at St. Louis Cardinals, Kansas City Chiefs at Denver Broncos and Pittsburgh Steelers at San Diego Chargers.

Monday night's game has Oakland Raiders at Miami Dolphins.

Seatrain Takes Brown Jug

DELAWARE, Ohio (AP) — Less than one week remained until the Little Brown Jug, and Seatrain's backers still were undecided about entering him.

But last Saturday, driver Ben Webster and Seatrain's owner, Lee Benson, agreed it was worth a gamble of the $1,000 Jug starting fee.

The dividends were stunning: a smashing defeat of superstar Nero, a win in the middle jewel of pacing's Triple Crown and over $54,000.

"I am so surprised," said Webster after Seatrain became the first gelding to win the Jug at the Delaware County Fairgrounds. "I am simply overwhelmed."

Seatrain rolled to a 1½-length victory over Osborne's Bret in the first division and scored by 1¾ lengths over Polaris Lobell in the raceoff. His miles were one minute, 57 seconds and 1:59 4-5.

Albert's Star, driven by Keith Waples of Durham, Ont., won the second division in 1:56 4-5 but was no match for Seatrain in the raceoff. He finished third, two lengths back.

Albert's Star is owned by the Seiling family of Elmira, Ont., including defenceman Rod Seiling of Toronto Maple Leafs of the National Hockey League.

Seatrain is a rags-to-riches saga for owner Benson, 56, of Great Neck, N.Y., a retired manufacturer's representative now involved in racing fulltime.

Homebred to Benson's mare, Mary Brakefield, the Meadow Skipper son suffered a broken bone as a two-year-old. He did not race last year.

As a three-year-old, he had won less than $30,000, a paltry figure against the likes of Nero ($362,000), Shirley's Beau ($253,000) and Albert's Star ($246,000), winner of the second division.

His best triumph, a 1:59 2-5 effort against Albert's Star a week earlier at Batavia, was slower than nine Jug rivals.

Seatrain was in contention all the way, pacing in second behind Whata Baron for the first three quarters. He sped by the leader before the stretch and easily withstood Osborne's Bret's challenge.

It was an even easier trip in the raceoff, a wire-to-wire victory.

Nero failed to qualify for the raceoff as one of his heat's four fastest horses. Driver Joe O'Brien, formerly of Alberton, P.E.I., offered no excuses, saying, "My colt was not as sharp as he had been earlier."

First Round of Ryder Cup

Wide Margin for U.S.

LIGONIER, Pa. (AP) — Bernard Hunt, the non-playing captain of Britain's overwhelmed Ryder Cup team, was neither surprised nor discouraged by the 6½-1½ advantage run up by the heavily-favored United States team in Friday's first-round play.

"I think all our lads realized they had a very difficult time on their hands when they came over here," said Hunt.

"I'm absolutely delighted with the way some of our lads, particularly Tommy Horton, is playing. They've been unlucky in that they played well and just ran into some people who were playing better."

It added up to the biggest first-day advantage ever compiled since this international series went to its current three-day, 32-match format in 1963.

"It's all the more surprising, a bit devastating, really, because traditionally we at least hold our own in the foursomes," mused Tony Jacklin, who teamed with Peter Oosterhuis for the only British victory.

The U.S. swept the four Scotch foursomes, a style of play the British usually dominate. That staked them to a quick 4-0 lead and they added two more wins, a tie and a loss in the afternoon four-ball matches.

The big lead raised the possibility of a record score. The most lop-sided victory ever was the 23½-8½ margin run up by the U.S. in the 1967 matches in Houston.

Tom Weiskopf teamed with Nicklaus for a 5 and 2 romp over Scots Brian Barnes and Bernard Gallacher in the foursomes play, then went with Lou Graham for a 3 and 2 victory over Ireland's Eamonn Darcy and Christy O'Connor Jr. in the four ball.

Lee Trevino and J.C. Snead combined for a 2 and 1 foursomes triumph over Horton and John O'Leary, and Trevino, this time with Hale Irwin, took on the same pair in the afternoon. This time Trevino reeled off a string of five birdies in six holes on the back nine to close them out 2 and 1.

Irwin and Gene Littler beat Norman Wood and Maurice Bembridge 5 and 3 and Johnny Miller and Al Geiberger took Jacklin and Oosterhuis 3 and 1 in the other morning matches.

Jacklin and Oosterhuis scored Britain's only victory 2 and 1 over Billy Casper and Ray Floyd. Nicklaus and Bob Murphy tied with Barnes and Gallacher in the other afternoon match.

Today's play again will be made up of four Scotch foursomes and four four-ball matches. The 16 singles matches Sunday close play.

Two More For Canada

ROME (AP-CP) — Canada added to its medal total Friday at the world university track and field games with Brian Saunders of Toronto and Patty Loverock of Vancouver finishing third during the second day of the competition.

Saunders won the bronze medal in the men's 400-metre race with a time of 46.83 seconds. Gersy Pietrzyk of Poland was first in 46.26 and Roger Jenkins of Britain was second in 46.55.

In the women's 100-metre event, Miss Loverock placed third in 11.57 with Liudmila Maslakova of the Soviet Union taking the gold medal in 11.31. Finland's Monalisa Pursiainen was second in 11.47.

Bishop Dolegiewicz of Laval, Que., gave Canada a gold medal Thursday with a heave of 19.45 metres. Thelma Wright of Vancouver won a silver when she placed second to Natalia Andrei of Romania in the women's 3,000-metre event.

Dave Jarvis of Grimsby, Ont., made it into the final of the men's 400-metre hurdles by placing fourth in 52.30 seconds in a heat won by Jerszy Hewelt of Poland in 51.82.

David Watt of Toronto qualified for the men's triple jump final with a leap of 15.54 metres, the 11th best.

Elizabeth Dammon of Kitchener, Ont., was fourth in her heat with 14.02 and failed to qualify.

In the 100 metres, Pietro Mennea of Italy fought back after his usual bad start to finish in 10.28, beating the 1973 games record of 10.33 set by Russian Juris Silovs. In the women's 400 metres Pirjo Haggman of Finland also fought back to finish in 51.80 seconds, bettering the 52.04 set by Nadyezhda Kolyesnikova of the Soviet Union two years ago.

Changes Galore in CFL

Als Pick Up Speedy Redskin

Head coach Marv Levy of Montreal Alouettes admits his Eastern Football Conference club needs speed in the offensive backfield, but now that a speedster has arrived, is picking his words carefully.

Herb Mul-key, formerly of Washington Redskins of the National Football League, is expected to play in Vancouver tonight against British Columbia Lions in one of three weekend Canadian Football League interlocking games.

"Herb is fast," Levy conceded, "but otherwise we're the slowest team in the league."

Montreal shares first place with Ottawa Rough Riders in the EFC and Levy said the reason is "good execution."

The Lions are the hottest team in the Western Conference with three wins in as many starts since Cal Murphy replaced Eagle Keys as head coach. A win tonight would give them sole possession of third spot, final playoff position in the WFC.

On Sunday, Calgary Stampeders face Toronto Argonauts in Toronto and Hamilton Tiger-Cats visit Saskatchewan Roughriders at Regina. Calgary and Winnipeg Blue Bombers are tied with B.C., Saskatchewan is two points behind the league-leading Edmonton Eskimos, while Hamilton and Toronto share the EFC cellar.

Defensive end Mike Manucci, an NFL cut, is in camp but Levy did not specify whether he would play.

Murray released Canadian linebacker Lorne Watters and replaced him with Paul Girody, then said other changes are possible. Defensive back Wally Saunders is doubtful because of a sprained ankle, making it likely that former Saskatchewan regular Bob Pearce will take over.

Many changes have been made by coach Russ Jackson of Toronto. Bill Bynum will start in place of Mike Rae at quarterback and will have some new supporters.

Released were running back Ed Shuttlesworth, wide receiver Eric Allen and offensive guard Ralph Miller. Shuttlesworth will be replaced by Dickie Morton, released by Pittsburgh Steelers, while Joe Sullivan of Buffalo Bills will replace Miller and Jim Wolf, also cut by the Steelers, will start at defensive end.

L. J. Clayton will switch to Allen's old spot, with former Hamilton defensive back John Williams taking over at cornerback. Tom Pullen, formerly of Ottawa Rough Riders, will replace the injured Peter Muller at tight end.

Calgary coach Jim Wood said he will make no lineup changes. Willie Burden, who gained 158 yards against Saskatchewan Tuesday desite a leg injury, is fully recovered.

Maury Damkroger from New England Patriots is being challenged by Mike Varty from Washington and Danny Rhodes, a former Baltimore Colt.

"One of the three will be on the roster Sunday," Payne promised.

Quarterback Ron Lancaster and fullback George Reed, who aggravated injuries against Calgary, are questionable starters, Lancaster with a knee injury and Reed with a cut hand.

Hamilton has two new wide receivers on hand—NFL veteran Lewis Thomas and Jerrald Taylor from Edmonton. Taylor, a rookie who did not see action, was traded for a future draft choice.

Thomas played with Cincinnati Bengals and New Orleans Saints before being waived out of the league.

Argos Make More Moves Than United Van Lines

TORONTO (CP)—Toronto Argonauts, with the worst record in the Canadian Football League, announced wholesale changes today in their roster aimed at improving on their 2-7 mark.

They released slotback Eric Allen, fullback Ed Shuttlesworth and offensive guard Ralph Miller and activated three recent National Football League cuts-offensive guard Joe Sullivan of Buffalo Bills, and running back Dickie Morton and defensive end Jim Wolf, both from Pittsburgh Steelers.
